TAKE DRY RULE FROM MELLON

REVEAL SECRET U. S. PROGRAM ON BATTLESHIPS

Stimson Asks Right to New Vessel.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 8.—Suspension of battleship building until 1935 by all naval powers except the United States, which would be allowed to build one in order to establish Anglo-American parity in capital ships, has been secretly proposed to Great Britain and Japan by the American delegation.

This was learned today in connection with information from foreign official sources that American Secretary of State Stimson suppressed important parts of the American proposals for naval limitation when he made his public statement Thursday night. Confirmation of this fact was obtained from the American delegation's headquarters.

Facts Kept From Public.

The suppressed features are reported to be extraordinarily interesting, if not sensational. Apparently Mr. Stimson has not been entirely frank with the American public, which is being kept in ignorance of the full extent of the proposals he has made on behalf of the United States to Great Britain and Japan.

Unless the complete text of the American proposals is made public, the American people will remain in the dark as to how far their representatives contemplate going in the negotiations at the London conference.

The British cabinet was amazed when it received the official text of the American proposals and compared it with the summary made public by Mr. Stimson Thursday before the formal note containing the American proposition was transmitted.

British Vexed at U. S. Secrecy.

Vexation of a pronounced character was immediately registered by the British cabinet. "Lacking in candor," was the diplomatic phrase employed by the British officials with reference to Mr. Stimson's public summary and his proposals. What vexed the British particularly is said to be the official text of the American proposals on reduction of battleship fleets. Only two sentences of a general nature were in Mr. Stimson's summary. "In battleships," it said, "we suggest by reduction in number on both sides to equalize our two fleets in 1931 instead of in 1942. At present the British battleship fleet contains two more vessels than ours."

The official text is said to contain a proposal that America be allowed to build one new 35,000 ton battleship before 1935, while Great Britain suspends battleship construction entirely during that period. The implication of the Stimson summary is that Great Britain would scrap five of its 20 capital ships next year, America three of its 18, and Japan one of its 10.

Would Still Give Britain an Edge.

The American proposal is to accelerate reduction by bringing the fleets down in 1931 to a level which otherwise would not be reached until five years later. This reduction, however, would leave the British battleship fleet still superior to the American. The British would still have two crack superdreadnaughts, the Rodney and the Nelson, the equal of which the United States does not possess. The British battleship fleet now aggregates 606,450 tons, and the American fleet, 525,400 tons. After scrapping five of the oldest British and three of the oldest American capital ships, Great Britain would have 472,550 tons and America 453,500 tons.

In scrapping five ships, Great Britain would get rid of all its aged ships, including four of the Iron Duke class, which were completed in 1912 and 1913 and the bottoms of which are said to be virtually falling out. But America, even after scrapping three, would have one ancient ship left—the Arkansas, completed in 1911 and due to be scrapped under the Washington treaty in 1935.

U. S. Would Get New Ship.

The American proposal is understood to be that in addition to scrapping three ships next year the United States be allowed to build a new dreadnaught, on the completion of which the Arkansas would be scrapped. America would then have 462,400 tons of battleships and Great Britain 472,550 tons.

Why Mr. Stimson suppressed this proposal is a matter of speculation. One theory is that he feared the proposal that America build a battleship while the other powers ceased construction would derogate from the administration's claims of the great economy to be accomplished by the prospective London agreement, particularly in view of the fact that Mr. Stimson's cruiser proposals provide, not for reduction, but for an increase in the American cruiser tonnage from 315,000 originally contemplated to not less than 327,000, and possibly 339,000 tons.

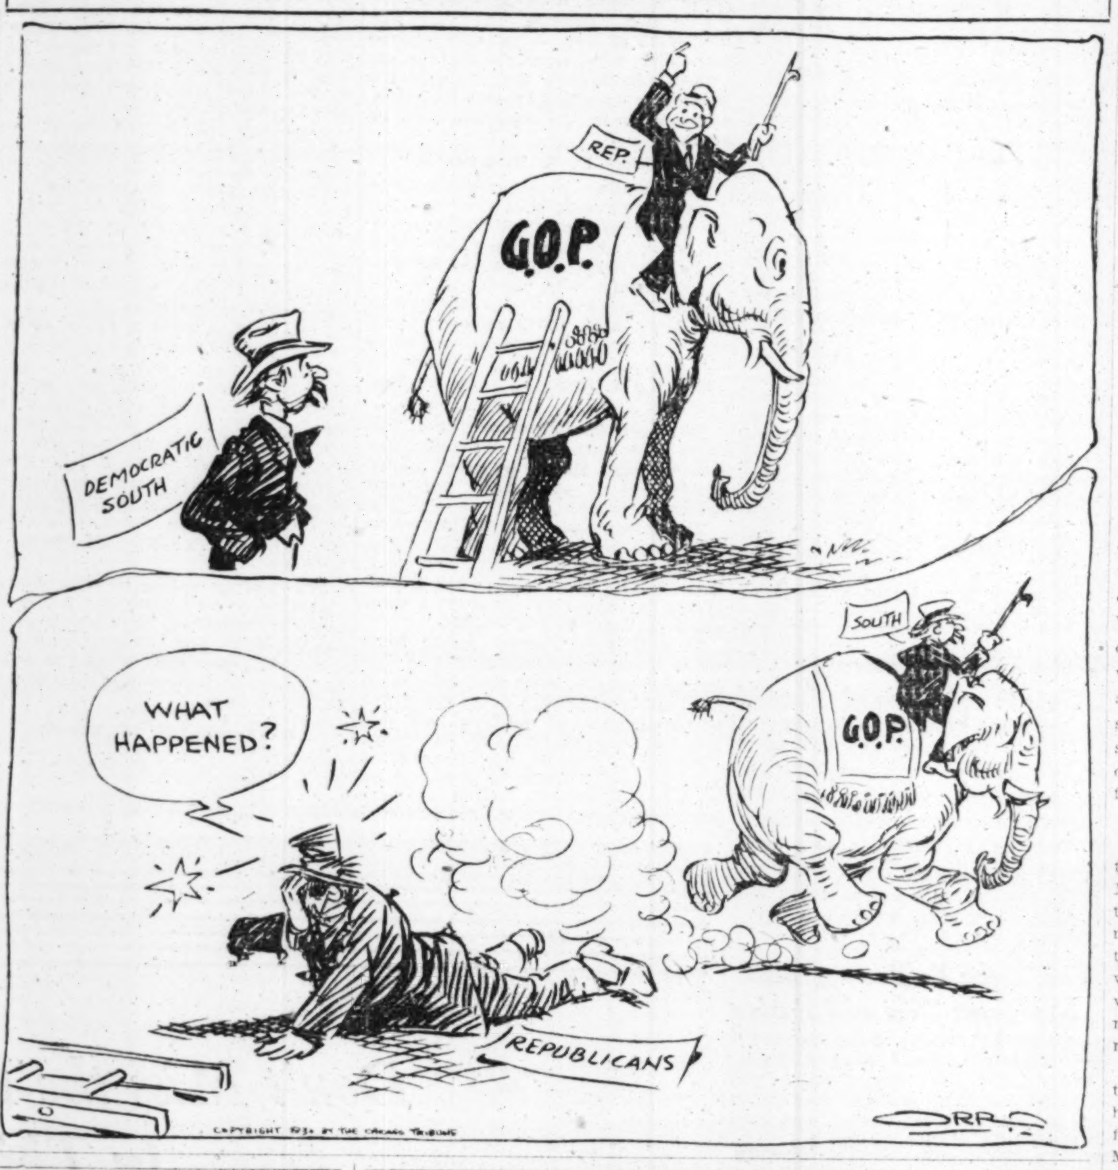
ANOTHER UNFORTUNATE FELLOW WHO INVITED A STRANGER TO RIDE WITH HIM



OUSTED DURAND PASTOR WINS 2D SLANDER SUIT

Rockford, Ill., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—John A. L. Warren, unfrocked Methodist pastor of Durand, tonight was awarded $10,000 damages against five members of the church board who ousted him. The jury returned a sealed verdict which was read in Judge A. E. Fisher's courtroom at 8 o'clock.

Warren brought a similar suit in November and won a $20,000 verdict, but the defendants were awarded a new trial. He said tonight he had sued mainly to clear his name of improper conduct with Hazel Lamb Lathery, a domestic in his Durand home, and the smaller amount of damages meant little to him.

Today's vindication is expected to be the forerunner of damage suits against former officers of the Rock River Methodist conference who officiated at his church trial in Oak Park in 1927, which resulted in his unfrocking.

HOOVER ON WAY SOUTH TODAY TO FISH ALL WEEK

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—President Hoover, with a small party of friends, left Washington late tonight for Long Key, Fla., for a week's deep sea fishing. The presidential party will arrive at its destination, a point midway between Miami and Key West, early Monday morning.

The President was accompanied by Mrs. Hoover, Justice Harlan F. Stone of the Supreme court and Mrs. Stone, Dr. Vernon Kellogg, an S street neighbor; Commander Joel T. Boone, White House physician, and a dozen secret service men and White House attachés.

The cruiser Saunterer, owned by Jeremiah Millbank of New York, a close personal friend of the Hoovers, has been turned over to the President for his use.

Detroit Gunmen Shot Here; Police Exposure in Detroit

Two Detroit bandits who started out last night on a robbery expedition in Chicago picked a policeman in civilian clothes for their first victim and kidnaped him in his own automobile at the point of a revolver. Two minutes later the policeman, Herman Meyers, 50 years old, 1223 Foster avenue, had shot both of the men, probably fatally.

Meyers, a member of the mounted squad of the traffic division, was leaving the home of Mr. and Mrs. Axel Bloom, 5309 Kenmore avenue, where he boards, when he was approached by one of the bandits, James Riley, 23 years old. Riley asked him if he knew who had charge of renting apartments in the building, and when Meyers replied that he had better see the janitor Riley drew a revolver and forced him into the automobile.

Pulls Gun from Pocket.

As Meyers climbed into the front seat of the car the second bandit, Thomas Sawyer, alias Carl Hanson, 24 years old, appeared from behind the car, and, opening the door on the left side, stepped in behind the wheel. Wedged between the two bandits as Sawyer drove north in Kenmore avenue, Meyers reached cautiously for his revolver, which he had placed in his overcoat pocket when he changed from his uniform into civilian clothes.

As the car passed Catalpa avenue the policeman succeeded in drawing the gun without attracting the attention of his captors. As he jerked the gun loose he thrust his right elbow into Riley's face, stunning him, and fired one shot at Sawyer, hitting him in the neck. Instantly he turned the gun on Riley and as the car swerved up over the curb and on to the sidewalk in front of 5517 Kenmore avenue he fired five shots at the gunman.

Gunman Wounded Five Times.

One bullet struck Riley in the neck, another in the left arm, one in the lip, one in the left ear, and the fifth hit him in the left shoulder, passing out of his back. As the car skidded to a stop Riley, still conscious, attempted to slip out the door, and Meyers struck him with the butt of his empty gun.

The wounded men were removed to the Edgewater hospital, where it was said Riley's death is practically certain. Sawyer was unconscious but has a slight chance to recover. The bandits came here from Detroit five weeks ago and have been living at 5121 Kenmore avenue.

In Riley's pocket the police found the name of Miss Ruby Knudsen, 4815 North Leavitt street, and her photograph. At her home relatives told Lieut. William Lang that she had not been home for several nights, and a search for her was started.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Intimations of the existence of an alliance between Police Inspector Henry J. Garvin and members of the kidnaping gang which has preyed on wealthy Detroiters for two years cropped out today at a session of the police trial of Detective Adolph Van Coppernole, which grew out of the mysterious shooting of Inspector Garvin on Jan. 2.

Van Coppernole testified today that on last Oct. 20, while negotiating for the release of David Cass, a prisoner of the kidnapers, he was called about 2 a. m. to a room in the Book-Cadillac hotel, where he found congregated two of George Moran's Chicago gang, two of the St. Louis Egan's Rats, and Jimmy Walters, a Detroit cabaret owner.

Threatened to "Get" Garvin.

The cabaret man told him, Van Coppernole said, that "Garvin had double crossed us after we paid him $20,000 to protect a pal, and we're going to bump him off."

The detective testified that Henry S. Thompson, who paid $25,000 for the ransom of his 5 year old son, Jackie, had learned that a $40,000 ransom paid for the life of Sam Gross, a kidnaped racketeer, had been placed in Inspector Garvin's car.

Detective Sergeant Max Waldfogel testified after Coppernole.

"What is the underworld opinion about Garvin?" he was asked.

"The underworld is full of rumors that Garvin is the brains of the kidnap gang," he replied. "I am familiar with every Jewish kidnaping in Detroit and it is a pretty general rumor among the kinfolk of the Jewish people kidnaped that Garvin was behind it."

Movie Man Testifies.

Ray Gagnon, ex-president of the Motion Picture Operators' union, testified that in the fall of 1928, learning that Max Rubin, business manager of the union, was to be kidnaped, he asked Garvin for a police guard for Rubin and was refused. The next day the kidnapers seized Rubin and the union paid $8,000 ransom.

Throughout the hearing, which was attended by Prosecutor James E. Chenot, Inspector Garvin paced the corridor outside, pale and emaciated from his weeks in the hospital. As the session ended, Detective Van Coppernole with his face averted to avoid photographers, bumped into the inspector, who fell and fractured his wounded arm, which was in a sling.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 8.—German drys scored today when the reichstag economic committee approved a bill limiting beer halls and bars in Germany to one for every 400 inhabitants. If the bill is passed by the reichstag the measure will eliminate 70,000 places dispensing liquor. The bill must pass another reading in the committee before it goes to the reichstag.

CATCH SUSPECT IN SHOOTING ON U. OF C. CAMPUS

Business Men Laud Russell as Chief.

Richard Raddatz, 23 years old, 6028 Ingleside avenue, a printer, was arrested last night by the Woodlawn police for questioning about the shooting of Philip Meagher, building construction superintendent, on the campus of the University of Chicago last Wednesday. Raddatz, who said he had done some work in the building trades, was arrested at 63d and Cottage Grove avenue after an anonymous call describing him as one of Meagher's assailants informed the police that he could be found waiting at the corner for his accomplice.

Wounded Man Worse.

Raddatz was to have been taken to the Billings Memorial hospital where Meagher has been in a critical condition since he was shot down by two men, apparently as a result of labor troubles, but the visit to the hospital was postponed until today on the advice of physicians when the wounded man became suddenly worse last night.

If Meagher's condition is improved today Raddatz will be taken before him in an effort to have him identified as one of the pair who shot Meagher. During the evening Patrick Roche, chief investigator for the state's attorney's office, and several of his assistants visited the hospital and conferred with Meagher but declined to disclose the subject of their conference.

RUSSELL COMMENDED

While Chicago's crime situation was under the scrutiny of the Association of Commerce in secret session yesterday, another civic organization, the citizens' police committee, made public a statement of confidence in the efforts of Commissioner Russell to reorganize the police force in the face of "a condition in which the force is underpaid, undermanned, dispirited, and discouraged."

Expressions of sentiment by members of the group indicated a belief that the prohibition law is largely responsible for the present crime situation.

Back Russell Administration.

Statements supporting Russell's administration came from:

Elmer T. Stevens, State street merchant, chairman of the citizens' advisory board of the police committee.

Robert H. Hunter, insurance official, vice chairman of the same group.

Col. Albert A. Sprague, merchant, civic leader, former public official, and a member of the group headed by Mr. Stevens.

John J. Sonsteby, attorney, member of the same group.

Sidney Gorham, former president of the Chicago Bar association, also a member of the citizens' group.

On A. of C. Committee.

Of those named in the foregoing group Mr. Stevens and Mr. Sprague also are members of the committee of the Association of Commerce which on Friday issued a demand for the suppression of lawlessness. The citizens' police committee is made up of leading Chicagoans. They formed the committee 13 months ago to study the police situation and to make recommendations for administrative betterments. The committee was formed at the suggestion of Commissioner Russell himself.

Among the prominent members of the police committee are Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern university; Frank J. Loesch, president of the Chicago Crime commission; Andrew A. Bruce, president of the American Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology; Frederic Woodward, vice president of the University of Chicago; Leonard D. White, professor of political science at the University of Chicago; Clifford W. Barnes, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, Mrs. Irvin McDowell, Dr. E. H. Ochsner, T. E. Donnelley, Julius Rosenwald, and William R. Dawes.

Police Force Criticized.

The Association of Commerce committee on Friday criticized the police for "countless felonies where no arrests followed." They spoke of "hundreds of indictments without subsequent conviction."

Besides issuing its statement of criticism the Association of Commerce committee, which met Friday, authorized the formation of a subcommittee of six men in addition to Col. Robert Isham Randolph, president of the association. Col. Randolph appointed this subcommittee yesterday, but he kept its personnel secret. It at once

Law Institute Takes Private Peek at Itself

Sixteen officers and managers of the Chicago Law institute, including several of the city's well known lawyers, met secretly yesterday to listen to an accounting of their stewardship. The accounting was given in the report of a committee appointed to investigate a shortage of $10,611 over five years in the institute's accounts and the confession of a trusted young employé that he had spent the greater portion of the missing funds on a burlesque actress.

The shortage was discovered last September. Every effort was made to hush the affair. The employé, Michael P. Edwards, 24 years old, 822 South Racine avenue, was arrested and indicted for embezzlement. A committee headed by Attorney Gustave E. Beerly was appointed to make an investigation with a view to taking safeguards for the future. The committee acted quietly.

The Committee Reports.

Yesterday Attorney Beerly read a report characterizing the institute's business system as wholly antiquated, and recommending that a modern system be installed, action be instituted to salvage a portion of the losses from the bonds of the treasurer and assistant treasurer, and Edwards be prosecuted vigorously. The report was adopted after heated debate.

A number of managers protested that action to recover on bonds would bring publicity to the chagrin of the officers. They also voted down the motion of Attorney Beerly to furnish each member at the meeting with a copy of the report for fear of publicity

The Lawyer's Lament.

"We'd be made out a lot of monkeys," one member argued. "Here we're supposed to be lawyers who should know something about caution in business, and we let a kid get away with $10,000. For five years he was in our confidence and we made a monthly audit and could discover nothing.

"Just imagine how the public would love that. The smart lawyers outsmarted. We'd never hear the end of it. Every member of the institute would be a subject to jibes."

The institute, rated the second largest law library in America, has its quarters on the tenth floor of the county building. Frederick Z. Marx, son-in-law of Frank Loesch, is president; John D. Black, head of the Illinois Bar association, is vice president; Capt. Edward Maher, librarian; Clark Scammon Reed, treasurer; Jacob G. Grossberg, secretary.

Members of the Board.

The board of managers includes Chief Justice Denis J. Normoyle of the Criminal court, Robert Collyer Fergus, William S. Johnston, Charles C. Spencer, James Rosenthal, Justus Chancellor, George W. Underwood, John E. MacLeish, and George L. Reker.

Edwards began working for the institute in March, 1920. He is of Italian parentage, his name having been originally Michael P. Peccia. He was a bright, eager boy of 14 and was soon promoted as he met with general favor. In five years he had become a bookkeeper.

The $10,000 shortage was discovered when the First National bank informed the managers that the institute's balance was low. Edwards told the board that the bank's communication was a mere form letter to all customers. The managers accepted his statement and ordered him to answer the letter. This he did, explaining that the institute's account was always low at that season.

Employé Flees; Is Caught.

On receipt of this letter the bank delivered a statement and Edwards fled. He was arrested when he arranged a meeting with an official of the institute.

Edwards said that he had spent the greater portion of the money on Miss Betty Page, 3862 West End avenue, a performer at the Academy theater. He was receiving a monthly salary of $150.

HOUSE VOTES MITCHELL JOB OF ENFORCEMENT

Puts Through First of Wickersham Bills.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Transfer of the prohibition bureau from the treasury to the department of justice, the first of the legislative measures of the Wickersham commission and President Hoover for tightening dry law enforcement, was approved today by the house.

The bill, as reported from the committee on expenditures in executive departments, was passed by a viva voce vote. Only a few dissenting votes were heard, no serious opposition to the measure as a whole being advanced although many of its supporters, drys as well as wets, were skeptical as to whether the shift would mean any real difference in enforcement conditions.

The debate of more than three hours which preceded passage of the bill was confined chiefly to consideration of amendments relating to the proposed dual control over industrial alcohol.

A Walkover for Drys.

Administration forces proved to be in complete command of the situation, defeating the proposal of alcohol using industries for retention of entire authority over industrial alcohol in the treasury department and also defeating the proposal of a minority of the expenditures committee for vesting complete alcohol powers in the attorney general.

Under the bill as passed the attorney general will have jurisdiction over law enforcement activities, but the treasury will continue to have supervision over the issue of industrial alcohol. The attorney general is given joint control with the secretary of the treasury over the alcohol regulations and also is given a veto power over issuance of permits.

The minority amendment which also met defeat, would not have taken the authority over issuance of permits from the secretary of the treasury, but would have forced him to administer the law under regulations formulated entirely by the attorney general.

Senate Next Battle Ground.

The bill will now go to the senate, where action will be delayed until after the tariff bill is out of the way. The industrial alcohol interests will make an effort to amend the bill in the senate judiciary committee, a majority of whose members are regarded as hostile to the administration. It is thought likely that the bill will be passed by the senate before congress adjourns.

The other Wickersham bills are not likely to fare so well. While the house may pass some of these measures, which include bills increasing powers of commissioners of federal courts in dealing with prohibition cases, defining minor offenses under the Jones law, tightening padlock provisions of the Volstead act and providing for a unified border patrol, there is little likelihood that the senate will reach action on any of them before next winter.

Alcohol Test Vote Decisive.

Representative R. H. Clancy [Rep., Mich.] sposored amendments to give the secretary of the treasury exclusive jurisdiction over industrial alcohol. He offered several amendments eliminating clauses of the bill, which give the attorney general joint control with the secretary of the treasury over the issuance of regulations affecting industrial alcohol as well as a veto power over the issuance of permits. The first of the series, on which the test vote took place, was defeated by a vote of 25 to 98.

In urging his amendments Representative Clancy asserted that the alcohol-using industries, including drug, paint, and automobile manufacturers, as well as the hospitals of the country, are fearful of adverse effects of the dual control by two departments. Serious delays in action upon permits would be certain to result, he asserted.

Fight Hopeless, He Admits.

"I know that the recital of the details in this great wrong is largely falling upon deaf ears in this house, because the order has been given to rush through this bill, no matter how grievous the wrong and injustice to the American people, and particularly to the medical profession," said Mr. Clancy. "But I am hoping that the senate and its proper committee will give the American people and particularly the medical world, a chance in its hearings to correct this injustice before the bill is returned to the house."

torney general the exclusive right to issue regulations relating to industrial alcohol was offered by Representative A. H. Gasque [Dem., S. C.]. It was defeated by 47 to 145.

Representative Gasque said he was certain that Attorney General Mitchell desires to enforce the law but that he was not so positive about Secretary of the Treasury Mellon. The bill without the amendment, he said, would mean the passing of the buck between Mellon and Mitchell and there would be continual controversy.

Representative F. W. Dallinger [Rep., Mass.] carried the day for those opposing the Gasque amendment by appealing for support of the administration. He said that Hoover, Mitchell and Mellon all wanted the alcohol provisions to stand as written.

Dry Leaders Get Setback.

The house, by a vote of 110 to 30, approved a committee amendment providing that all officers and employés of the bureau of prohibition who are found by the attorney general to have violated any penal provisions of the federal prohibition laws shall be dismissed.

Recognized dry leaders, including Representative L. C. Cramton and Grant Hudson [Rep., Mich.], opposed the committee amendment, which was sponsored originally by Representative John C. Schafer [Rep., Wis.], a wet. The drys contended that the attorney general was given broad power under the bill and that the effect of the amendment was merely to give him unnecessary advice in connection with an action which he was certain to take.

La Guardia Cuts Loose.

Representative Cramton drew a sharp retort from Representative F. H. La Guardia [Rep., N. Y.], a wet.

"Here is a bill to reorganize the prohibition forces," said Mr. La Guardia, "and the gentlemen who are the sponsors of this bill and claim to be in favor of strict enforcement seem to resent any attempt to write into the bill a provision which would exclude criminals from employment in the department of justice."

"Why this sudden rush to the defense of men who have been convicted of a crime," he continued, "when as a matter of fact, under the general law now in existence, an ex-convict, a felon or a man convicted of crime could not be continued in the department of agriculture and he could not be continued in the department of state. I am at a loss to understand the defense at this time of the man who violates the law. It is only in the prohibition bureau that such men seemingly are wanted."

Refers to a Senator.

Representative D. B. Colton [Rep., Utah] asked Mr. La Guardia "if there is any power the attorney general needs to have that he does not have under the general provisions of this bill if we impose upon him the duty of enforcing this law."

"Yes, and I will tell it," replied La Guardia. "I did not want to tell it, but I will tell it now. I want to present a situation which exists in the state of Washington, in Puget sound, where you have administrators of prohibition who are violating or permitting violations of the law they are supposed to enforce.

"And when the department of justice tried to investigate, a great statesman in the other body, and one of the foremost champions of prohibition, pulled the department of justice off. That is the kind of a situation we are trying to prevent."

An amendment to the amendment by Representative V. L. Palmisano [Dem., Md.], a wet, to provide for the suspension of prohibition employés who are under indictment and for the dismissal of violators of state as well as federal prohibition laws, was ruled out on a point of order. The amendment would have hit at prohibition agents accused of murder.

New Dry Chief Gets $9,000.

Under the terms of the bill as passed, the new director of prohibition in the department of justice would receive a salary of $9,000. The director would be appointed by the attorney general, the bill providing that the present director of prohibition, Dr. James M. Doran, shall become director of a new bureau of indsutrial alcohol in the treasury department.

The attorney general is authorized to appoint, without regard to civil service laws, an assistant director of prohibition and such attorneys as he deems needful, and to appoint "such other officers and employés as he deems necessary" in accordance with civil service laws. All attorneys, officers and employés of the prohibition enforcement division of the treasury department are transferred to prohibition bureau of the department of justice.

BRITAIN AMAZED AT GENEROSITY OF BIG HEARTED U. S.

Stimson Proposal Is Just Too Good to Be True.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 8.—The only official activity of the naval conference today was a meeting of the subcommittee of experts which is drafting resolutions on the Anglo-French compromise between the global and categorical methods of calculating tonnage. The subcommittee sat a couple of hours this morning in St. James' palace and then adjourned until Monday, when a full meeting of the first committee is also scheduled.

Prime Minister MacDonald entertained the Italian delegation at lunch at Chequers today and in the afternoon he entertained thirty naval experts from all delegations at tea. American Secretary of State Stimson is at Stanmore and the other delegates are scattered in the country.

Meantime, private discussions are going on over the American and British memorandums, which created a sensation this week.

British Admirals Gasp.

British admirals are still gasping with surprise at America's "generosity." One thing they cannot get over is the American demand that Great Britain scrap only ships of the Iron Duke class. These ships are already almost scrap iron. They never were good ships and are now in such shape that they would have to be practically rebuilt if retained in service. The British experts fully expected that they would be called on to scrap ships of the Queen Elizabeth class, which are later and better ships. With them would have gone British battleship strength and they might not have been so far ahead of America.

Prime Minister MacDonald is reported to be contemplating another gesture by scrapping a large number of surplus destroyers. These are ships which were built during the last year and immediately after the great war and have never been a success. They are said to be too heavily armed and not seaworthy. To scrap them now might please the Americans and it would not do Great Britain any harm.

Report Worst Yet to Come.

Rumors are flying around, too, that Mr. Stimson's statement this week did not disclose the whole of the American proposals. He is said to have withheld clauses said to be "political," such as freedom of the seas and British naval bases.

One report which gained currency today was that a compromise had been arrived at with the Japanese on the basis that Japan accept 66 2-3 per cent instead of the 70 per cent ratio for cruisers in return for some concessions on submarines. Color is lent to this report by the fact that the Japanese have been ostentatiously uninterested in the Anglo-American statements, declaring they are not concerned and propose to take no hand until the subjects in which they are interested are reached. This may also be a part of their policy of stalling until after the Japanese elections, which are due in less than a fortnight.

The British press, while guardedly pleased over the American note and the British supplement, are carefully following orders to avoid any undue show of satisfaction over the British triumph. The evening papers are displaying telegrams from Washington reporting the senatorial misgivings about the part played by the American delegation.

'Parity' Will Not Cut Cost of U.S. Navy, House Is Told

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—No decrease, either in the size of the American navy or in its annual maintenance costs, would flow from the Hoover reduction program as enunciated in London last Thursday, members of the house were told today by Representative Burton L. French, chairman of the subcommittee that handles naval appropriations.

In a short address Chairman French asserted that, while the Hoover program afforded a substantial cut in battleship tonnages, it called for the construction of so many additional cruisers that any savings effected in the capital ship class would be more than absorbed by the increase in lighter combat vessels.

Hopes for Plan's Adoption.

But, notwithstanding his criticism that the Stimson plan does not provide for what he considers an actual reduction in the American navy, Mr. French told his colleagues that, in the absence of a better agreement, he hoped it would be adopted. He asserted, in support of this statement, that the Stimson plan would end naval competition, definitely set the size of future construction programs, stabilize the navy, and cut down battleship tonnage.

"More than that, this program would prevent expansion of naval establishments. These two considerations would mark progress of incalculable importance in the consideration of the problem of naval strength of world powers."

Would Prevent Competition.

Touching on the failure of the Stimson program to actually reduce, Mr. French said:

"The program proposed by the statement, assuming that submarines were not abolished, would leave the United States with approximately the present tonnage that she now has. The saving in battleships (75,000 to 90,000 tons) would need to be allocated to her aircraft carrier and cruiser tonnage in order to bring the tonnage of these respective categories of the United States up to the point indicated. Destroyer and submarine tonnage would stabilize at approximately the tonnage that now exists. In my judgment, the proposal, if agreed to, would prevent competition in the different types of naval craft. I fear that we could not expect immediate reduction of the annual naval costs, but the program would check the tremendous expense in naval burdens that, in the absence of an agreement, are immediately ahead."

In response to a question from Representative John N. Garner [Dem., Tex.], minority floor leader, Chairman French said his speech was inspired by criticism of the United States delegation to the conference. He did not mention any names, but it was understood he had reference to congressmen who have criticized the Stimson plan because it set a low limit on this country's maximum future tonnage in 10,000 ton cruisers and called for the construction of small cruisers.

Pacifist Criticism Answered.

Pacifist attacks on the tentative British-American cruiser agreement under which the United States raises its total cruiser tonnage, brought a reply from state department officials today. It was pointed out in this connection that the failure of the United States to build cruisers since the Washington conference now makes it necessary for this country to construct them in large numbers if we are to obtain parity with Great Britain.

Both in naval and congressional circles, the tendency was to await further developments prior to commenting on the battleship problem. It is highly possible the Hoover administration will insist that in scrapping five ships Great Britain eliminate some of her new 15 inch gun vessels instead of five old 13.5 inch gun ships. Unless this is done, the British will maintain battleship supremacy, even after the number of ships in this class is cut to 15 for each power.

New French Destroyer Sets World Speed Record

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 8.—While her naval delegates are on the other side of the channel trying with the other big powers to reduce naval armaments, France today achieved a new world record in destroyer speed when the 2,400 ton destroyer Bison, which was launched recently, reached a speed of more than 41 knots.

U. S. GIVES IN TO JAPAN'S DEMAND FOR 70% RATIO

Would Allow Tokio Bigger Cruiser Strength.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 8.—Having given the British a big cruiser advantage, Uncle Sam's delegates at the London naval conference are preparing to duplicate this cruiser generosity to Japan.

From a most reliable source it is learned that a compromise deal is being proposed whereby the United States will concede the Japanese almost all of their 70 per cent cruiser demands. This accounts for the optimism expressed in the British press today that an arrangement of the Japanese angle of the deal will soon be reached.

What U. S. Proposes.

The American cruiser concession to Japan is this: that instead of the British scrapping five capital ships, America three, and Japan one, which would leave the Washington ratios on battleships intact, with the figure 15-15-9, the Japanese will be induced to scrap two battleships, the Americans three, and the British five. This will leave the ratios at 15-15-8, or fractionally under the Washington ratio arrangement.

In return for this scrapping of two ships of the line, the Americans are said to have agreed to grant Japan practically all of her 70 per cent cruiser demand.

The information that the American delegation is contemplating this step has caused astonishment among naval experts, who had expected the United States to uphold an adequate cruiser quota, at least in the Pacific.

It was also learned today that, while both the Americans and the British next Tuesday will indulge in a lot of Pecksniffian talk about the immorality of submarines and will propose their abolishment, in reality both Great Britain and the United States have a tentative schedule on what they will fix as their future submarine tonnage. This figure is set at 70,000 tons of submarines, on which it is proposed to grant parity to Japan.

Would Mean Cut for U. S.

The United States already has a greater submarine tonnage than this figure. The British have 60,000 tons and the Japanese want 80,000 tons. The figure of 70,000 tons for all was reached as a compromise by splitting the difference between the British and Japanese claims.

The Italian delegation announced today that it will have no reply to make to the British or American notes. This means that it will not produce its figures until after the French produce theirs.

However, it is learned that Italy propses to fix the tonnages of the five principal powers as follows: For Great Britain and America each an equal figure of 1,200,000 tons; for Japan, 800,000 tons, and for France and Italy, 600,000 tons each.

FRANCE HAS A PROPOSAL

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 8.—France will lay its cards on the table Tuesday. Following the sudden and unexpected pronouncements of the United States and Great Britain, the Paris delegation decided to issue a statement of their naval aims at the next plenary session when submarines are scheduled for discussion.

Following the United States' example of citing 1,200,000 tons of global tonnage France will stand pat at 800,000 tons as its program provides. The weight of France's tonnage will be placed in the cruiser classes as the Paris government is on record as being disinterested in capital ships of which they are entitled to 175,000 tons under the Washington treaty.

Premier Tardieu will insist on the necessity of France maintaining its schedule for an eventual 125,000 tons of submarines, including a group of 3,000 ton seagoing submersibles—12 maximum 10,000 ton cruisers and a powerful squadron of light cruisers carrying six inch guns. Besides these classes the French will announce their intention of retaining a strong flotilla of destroyers with a complement of flotilla leaders in the neighborhood of 2,500 tons.

With every single existing battleship obsolete and ready for the scrap pile France intends to concentrate its sea power in this category in a new type craft calculated to be the equal or better of Germany's new Ersatz Prussian class.

LEWIS ADVOCATES U. S. WITHDRAW IN NAVAL MEET

In a speech before the German club at the Morrison hotel yesterday, James Hamilton Lewis, Democratic candidate for United States senator, urged withdrawal of the United States from the London naval conference.

"We should withdraw before danger arises," he said. "The pretense of disarmament by casting off obsolete and useless warships while refusing to include land fighting armies and air vessels that drop bombs of chemicals and fire units that annihilate civilization and destroy the world proves the deception being put on 'world peace.'

"The entrance of the United States into this affair is an error."

FORM GROUP TO PROTEST RIGHTS OF PEDESTRIANS

The Association for the Protection of Pedestrians was granted a charter yesterday in Springfield by Secretary of State Stratton. The incorporators are three Chicagoans, Capt. E. J. Finan, a mariner; H. L. Hurless, a painter, and A. E. Nagy, a foreign language newspaper man.

"The man afoot must protect his rights from encroachment by the man behind a steering wheel," said Capt. Finan. "Motorists have obtained privileges through automobile clubs, and it's now time for pedestrians to organize for mutual benefits. We'll probably campaign for the drivers' license law and for compulsory liability insurance on cars."

VOGEL IS DOOMED TO DIE APR. 18 IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

Dorr Sentenced to Life Imprisonment.

CRIMINAL COURT.

August Vogel, murder, sentenced to death in the electric chair; Herbert Curry, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary; Jesse Landers, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary by Judge Otto Kerner.

John Ewing, William Cook, and George [illegible] sentenced to 1 year to life each in the penitentiary by Judge D. J. Normoyle.

August Vogel, 27 year old gunman, was sentenced to the electric chair yesterday by Judge Otto Kerner in the Criminal court, despite his plea of guilty. He and his friends had thought this plea would save him the extreme penalty for murder. The judge in imposing the death penalty after a plea of guilty upset what has become tradition among murderers—that a plea of guilty will save one from execution. The case is the tenth on record here in which the death penalty has been ordered after the defendant has pleaded guilty.

Within a few hours of the Vogel sentence Judge Harry B. Miller sentenced Samuel Howard Dorr to life imprisonment in the penitentiary. Dorr, a south side insurance man, was found guilty of killing his friend and neighbor, William O'Brien, with whose wife, Mrs. Genevieve O'Brien, Dorr had been carrying on an illicit love affair. The jury recommended life imprisonment when it found Dorr guilty.

Wife Screams in Court.

As the death sentence for Vogel was announced Vogel's wife, Katherine, screamed and rushed toward him. The defendant's face had become pale and he had stopped his incessant gum chewing as he realized that his gamble for mercy had been in vain.

The defendant and his friends believed there was hope when the judge pronounced the first sentence on Vogel. He ordered him to the penitentiary for three terms of 1 year to life each for three gun robbery crimes. This was taken by many in the courtroom as an indication that the murder plea would bring the 99 year penitentiary penalty.

Salesman Murdered.

Vogel fatally shot Lyle Perrenoud, a salesman, on Oct. 12. After Vogel was arrested it was indicated that he had shot Perrenoud because the latter's automobile had brushed fenders with Vogel's car. Vogel had been drinking heavily. The real cause, however, it developed at the trial, was that Vogel feared Perrenoud was going to resist his robbery attempt.

The judge in announcing April 18 as the execution date reviewed the evidence in the case and said he was unable to find any evidence of mitigation for the defendant. He said the killing showed the defendant had an "abandoned and malignant heart."

"The purpose of punishment is that it shall be a lesson to the offender and a deterrent to others," Judge Kerner said in his statement. "The court is unable to imagine any form of punishment which might be a lesson to the defendant, in view of the fact that he has heretofore served time for robbery, and notwithstanding that fact again engaged in a robbery while armed with a deadly weapon. To impose a life sentence would not be a deterrent. What must be made evident is that a murderer, such as this defendant, shall never again be at liberty to walk among his fellow men."

Only 9 Similar Sentences.

Since 1840, when records of executions were kept for the first time, 106 persons have been executed. Of these only nine pleaded guilty. The first recorded use of the death penalty after the defendant had pleaded guilty came in 1896 when Judge Baker ordered Alfred C. Fields to the gallows. In 1896 and the following year, during which period murder was reported as prevalent as at present, three men failed to dodge execution by pleading guilty.

However, for years after that, pleas of guilty saved the defendants from execution until Robert E. Crowe, while he was chief justice of the Criminal court in 1919, ordered Thomas R. Fitzgerald, slayer of 6 year old Janet Wilkinson, to the gallows.

List of Executions.

A list of death sentences imposed after the defendants had pleaded guilty follows:

Alfred C. Field, 24 years old, executed at the order of Judge Baker in 1896.

James Gricius and Thomas McWane, executed in 1926 at the order of Judge Harry B. Miller.

Napoleon Glover and Morgan Swan, colored, executed in 1929 at the order of Judge Marcus Kavanagh. The latter, however, tried to save the men from the electric chair by appealing to the parole board after sentence was imposed, but he was unsuccessful.

Herbert Curry, a member of Vogel's robber gang, was sent to Pontiac reformatory for 1 to 20 years before the death penalty was imposed on Vogel. Mrs. Fay Allison, who was with Vogel on the night of the crime, was freed as she was a state's witness.

BURGLAR FIRES AS BROKER ROUTS HIM FROM HOME

John Keane, broker, narrowly escaped being shot last night when he pursued a Negro burglar down a drain pipe from the second floor of his home at 1220 Judson avenue, Evanston, after hitting the burglar over the head with a shoe. Keane stopped when the Negro fired two shots which whizzed past his ear and the burglar escaped.

The burglar entered the house by climbing a pipe to a window of a bedroom on the second floor and then entered the room of Miss Catherine Keane, a senior at Northwestern university. Miss Keane awoke as the burglar was ransacking a drawer and screamed. Despite the Negro's warning, she fled from the room and aroused her father.

Keane rushed to his daughter's bedroom and found the Negro outside the window, apparently afraid to make the hazardous descent on the drain pipe. When Keane struck him with a shoe, however, the burglar started down precipitately, and the broker followed, chasing the Negro to the rear of the house, where the latter fired two shots and escaped before the police arrived.

YOUNG LAWYER VANISHES AFTER FRAUD CHARGES

Father's Offer to Repay Creditors Refused.

The state's attorney's office last night was holding two warrants for the arrest of Charles B. Goodman, 35 years old, an attorney, on charges of operating a confidence game and obtaining money under false pretenses. Goodman was charged by approximately seventy men and women with defrauding them of about $100,000 through the sale of fake mortgages.

Goodman, his wife, and his two children could not be found. They moved from their home in the Graemere hotel, 113 North Homan avenue, on Jan. 30, about the time that Goodman's clients began clamoring for the return of their money. At this time, too, Goodman's father, David Goodman, 3610 Douglas boulevard, a real estate dealer, was trying to effect a settlement, offering to use all his money to save his son from prosecution.

Father's Offer Is Refused.

The elder Goodman's funds, however, according to Sidney Oppenheim, attorney with offices at 139 North Clark street, who said he represented the majority of the son's clients, are insufficient to cover the entire loss. At a meeting of the creditors on Friday at the Hotel La Salle, the settlement was refused.

As a result, the father collapsed at his home and was kept to his bed. Relatives said they did not know where Charles Goodman had gone, but said they believed he was in Chicago. Inquiries at the home of Mrs. Rosy Schallman, 1604 South Ridgeway avenue, Mrs. Goodman's mother, elicited no information about her son-in-law's whereabouts.

According to Oppenheim, Goodman had taken approximately $100,000 from his creditors, promising to purchase first and second mortgages with the money and had given notes in return. The mortgages, Oppenheim said, were never delivered. He said there was no evidence to show that Goodman had used the money in stock market speculations before the crash of last fall or to explain what had become of the money.

Judge Issues Warrants.

On Jan. 30 at a meeting in Oppenheim's office, several creditors agreed not to prosecute upon the elder Goodman's offer to make a settlement of all claims. But when it was discovered that his funds were insufficient, the warrants were applied for and issued by Judge Joseph Schulman on Wednesday.

Another meeting of creditors will be held this week at which a final decision will be reached on whether the father's offer of a partial settlement will be accepted, Oppenheim said.

Goodman as a student in law school was a brilliant scholar, his relatives said. He started to work at the Armour Institute of Technology in 1915 as an assistant director of the gymnasium and later became director, attending the Chicago law school at the same time. In 1921 he opened his office in the Burnham building, and married.

The claims of the creditors range from a few hundred dollars up to $14,000. Among them was the claim of Rabbi David Smordinsky, 1817 North Central Park avenue, who said he had lost $4,000.

WETS WILL AID MAN INDICTED AS RUM BUYER

Boston, Mass., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Organized wets today promptly ordered full support, both legal and financial, and organized labor on Monday will decide whether or not to follow suit in the test fight which now looms in the case of James Farrar, Watertown street car conductor, who is the first man in the history of prohibition in Massachusetts, if not in the country, to be indicted for purchasing liquor.

The indictment, returned yesterday and announced by federal officials as the first step in a test case to determine the guilt of the liquor buyer as well as seller when evidence is obtainable, resulted in prompt formation of battle lines today.

The Constitutional Liberty league, one of the leading wet organizations of the state, quickly offered all its resources to Farrar's attorney.

1 JUROR SAVES SLAYER, BUT IT TAKES 95 HOURS

Texas Judge's Trial for Killing of Girl Ends.

Austin, Tex., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—J. B. Keltner is back home tonight, convinced he has been locked up for ninety-five hours with the eleven stubbornest men in Texas.

Mr. Keltner was foreman of the jury which was trying John W. Brady, former Texas Appellate court judge, charged with the knife slaying of Miss Lehlia Highsmith, 28 year old capitol stenographer.

The girl was stabbed to death in front of her home when she returned there, escorted by a young man.

Asked Dismissal Repeatedly.

The evidence was all in and the case was given to the jury last Tuesday. Time after time the jurors asked dismissal, saying it was hopeless to expect an agreement.

Today Judge J. D. Moore, in response to another appeal, called in the jury and heard again of a hopeless deadlock. He asked Foreman Keltner to tell him the numerical standing.

"We stand," said Keltner, "eleven to one for conviction."

Judge Moore said later that he did not hear the last two words. This was when Dayton Moses, defense counsel, offered a motion for a mistrial on that basis. The judge had the jurors brought down again, explained that he did not believe it would be proper for them to continue with the case, and sent them away. Moses meanwhile withdrew his motion.

Foreman's Conscience Clear.

District Attorney Henry Brooks, leader of the prosecution, submitted a request that the case be transferred to Georgetown.

After the jury was discharged it was revealed that they stood nine for the death penalty, two for life sentence, and Foreman Keltner for acquittal.

"I did everything I could to get together with them," Keltner said, "but I could not give up my convictions. My conscience is clear."

HOPE TO REOPEN CLOSED MAYWOOD BANK THIS WEEK

President in Technical Custody of Officials.

While State Auditor Oscar Nelson examined the books of the People's State bank, 17th avenue and Madison street, Maywood, yesterday, officials of the bank were engaged in a series of conferences with a view to reorganizing and reopening the bank early this week if possible. In the meantime the bank's president, Elmer P. Langguth, was in technical custody of the directors, following his confession that he had appropriated funds of the bank to his own use.

Auditor Nelson ordered the bank closed yesterday for examination and adjustment of the losses, the extent of which has not yet been officially determined, but which rumors placed from $10,000 to more than $100,000.

President in Seclusion.

Langguth, who resides in Maywood with his wife and two small children, remained in seclusion yesterday. He is said to have made his confession on Friday night to representatives of the state auditor when confronted with the bank's records.

The bank was organized in 1925. It is situated in one of the business sections of Maywood. The institution's capital is $200,000, its surplus $10,000, and its deposits are listed at $550,000.

Confesses Taking Money.

According to attachés of the auditor's office, Langguth said that he began taking the bank's money more than a year ago when he turned over his books as village collector of Maywood to his successor in office.

"My tax books checked up short, and so I took the bank's money to make it up," he is reported to have said.

Langguth is represented by his friends as a man who never used liquor, gambled or played the stock market. He is said to have thrown no light on what became of the money.

"I guess he simply possesses a champagne taste without money to cultivate it," one of Langguth's friends said last night. "I don't mean he ever drank. But he liked fine automobiles. He maintained an expensive summer home at Sylvan Beach, Mich. He insisted upon buying not long ago a private yacht."

Hopes to Reopen Bank Soon.

Mr. Murphy was one of the bank's officials who expressed hope that the institution's troubles will be ended and its doors reopened for business early this week.

"The directors say the bank is really solvent," declared Mr. Murphy. "That is, we contend the losses, which I don't believe will go far above $10,000, can be made up. In any event there's no chance of the depositors losing a nickel. Langguth is under surety bonds totaling $50,000."

The whereabouts of Miss Lindgren, the cashier, was a mystery yesterday. She so far has declined to make a statement as to her knowledge of the bank's affairs at the state auditor's office, it was learned. One report was that she had suffered a nervous breakdown and is in seclusion at the home of an aunt in Chicago. Langguth's wife was reported to be under the care of a physician at her home.

PAYLESS TEACHER ROBBED OF LAST OF HIS SAVINGS

Henry Smith, an instructor at Crane Technical High school, drew $29, the last of his savings, from the Woodlawn Trust and Savings bank yesterday forenoon to pay his rent and grocery bill. Mr. Smith, who is 50 years old and resides at 5854 Harper avenue, is one of Chicago's 13,500 school teachers who have drawn no pay checks since December.

Mr. Smith was walking to his landlord's office to settle the rent bill last evening when, at 58th street and Harper avenue two men leaped from a black touring car and held him up. He had paid a $3 grocery bill and the rest went to the robbers.

DO YOU LOVE YOUR WIVES? "NO!" CRY PEIPING STUDENTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PEIPING, Feb. 8.—Three hundred and twenty-eight married Chinese students at the National university have had the courage to say that they don't like their wives. Only thirty-one students answered "Yes" to the question, "Are you satisfied with your marriage?"

The students are older than most of those in America and many are married. The majority of the marriages were made in the old Chinese fashion, being arranged by parents without consulting the brides and grooms.

The questionnaire was made for the celebration of the university's 31st anniversary. In addition to the above question, the students were asked their opinions of the best qualities for wives. An overwhelming majority put "good looks" as the preëminent qualification. "Meekness" came next, 245 students registering their approval of humble wives. Only 71 thought that education was necessary for making a good Chinese wife. The questionnaire showed that Premier Mussolini is by far the most popular foreign statesman among Chinese students. He got 53 votes, while President Hoover got only five and Premier MacDonald four.

A total of $400,000 is needed for the bank to reopen, it is understood.

PEACE TIME ARMY IS HUGE SCHOOL, SAYS SUMMERALL

Chief of Staff Addresses Teachers' League.

The United States army, in time of peace, has come to be a great educational institution with a far reaching effect upon the commercial welfare of the country, Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff, declared yesterday. He was addressing 500 school teachers, members of the Chicago Teacher's league, at a luncheon in the Palmer house.

Gen. Summerall said the usual criticism of a standing army is that it is a heavy expense in time of peace and is of no value to the nation outside of its worth as a ready instrument of war. He asserted that this criticism no longer holds.

Is Former School Teacher.

Introduced as "a former school teacher," Gen. Summerall, who was a high school principal at the age of 20 before he entered West Point, said he hoped his hearers would be convinced by his arguments and pass his beliefs on to the children they taught.

"It is obvious that a knowledge of weapons and of tactics cannot constitute the sum total of the soldier's mental qualifications," he said. "The need for technical and cultural training pervades the whole army. The artilleryman must be a civil engineer and have a knowledge of electric power. The aviator necessarily is a highly trained and specialized individual.

"With the growth of motorization and mechanization in the army, our need, already large, for automotive engineers is steadily on the increase. The chemical warfare service demands and develops chemists and chemical engineers. The army engineer is qualified for the most advanced type of his work.

Typical Recruit American Born.

"The ordnance department and the quartermaster corps include technicians and industrialists in hundreds of commodities. The medical department has need of surgeons, doctors, hygienists, dentists, trained nurses and veterinarians. The judge advocate general's department is staffed with able jurists.

"The typical recruit today is American born and young, attracted to the army by the opportunities it offers for service and advancement. The post schools educate him. Other schools develop specialists qualified for extremely technical duties."

Chicago Priest to Get Decoration from Italy

The Rev. Louis Giambastians, pastor of St. Philip Benizi church, 938 Cambridge avenue, will receive the decoration of a cavalier, the official citation of the Italian government, tonight at a banquet at the church. The presentation will be made by Dr. Giuseppe Castruccio, Italian consul general in Chicago. The decoration was conferred by Italy in recognition of Father Giambastian's work among Italian-Americans during his 25 years as pastor in St. Philip Benizi church.

Merchant Killed by Gas from Auto in His Garage

Michael M. Welter, 56 years old, wealthy commission merchant, was asphyxiated yesterday in the garage at the rear of his home, 6649 North Maplewood avenue, as he was preparing to drive to his office at 39 South Water Market street. The body was found by his son, Ray, in the car, the engine of which was still running. Mr. Welter was president of Charles Guhl & Bros. He is survived by his widow and five children.

AGREEMENT HERE CALLED KEY TO TAX LOAN SALE

Officials May Get Seats on Strawn Committee.

In banking circles both in New York and in Chicago evidence came to light yesterday of attempts to reach an agreement between the Chicago banks and the elected representatives of Chicago's tax spending bodies so that a market can be found for tax anticipation warrants and money can be obtained to pay 40,000 odd public employé.

In both cities rumors were current that the Strawn committee is to invite representatives of the city, the school board, and the sanitary district to become members of the committee with the balance of power in the hands of the citizens. There was also a report that a new committee might be formed with the same balance of power and under the auspices of the Strawn group.

Strawn Discusses Reports.

Silas H. Strawn, chairman of the citizens' committee, who is in New York on private business, discussed the reports there last night.

"I know nothing about a new committee," he said; "but it is correct that there hardly can be a market for tax anticipation warrants until there is coöperation between the business men of Chicago and its politicians. However, I see no objection to city and county representatives sitting with our committee. All we want to do is to sit down with them and see that the money, when raised, is properly distributed.

"Of this you may be sure, that the money when it is raised will not be spent by politicians. The money under any circumstances is going to be difficult to get. It will, I am confident, be put up by Chicago citizens and bankers coöperating, but it will not be provided unless those who advance it control its distribution."

Caldwell Still Hunts Cash.

H. Wallace Caldwell, president of the school board, who is in New York endeavoring to sell $48,000,000 worth of school board tax warrants, gave a TRIBUNE correspondent another version of the rumors. This was to the effect that a new committee is to be named which will exclude Mr. Strawn from its membership. There was no verification of this report, either in New York or Chicago.

Mr. Caldwell spent yesterday in his suite in the Biltmore hotel in New York conducting what might be termed a still hunt for tax warrant purchasers. At the end of the day he told reporters that he had made progress, but that he feared he would have nothing definite to report in the way of a sale before next Thursday.

Meanwhile from another source, which has been considered reliable in the past, came a description of the plan of the city hall organization to sell tax warrants.

Mayor Thompson and President Caldwell of the school board are willing to pay the maximum interest permitted by law—6 per cent—and then give the buyers an opportunity to make a good profit, according to this source. This profit is to be the equivalent of a discount on the tax warrants, which is of doubtful legality, a bonus for the purchase or the use of borrowed money by outsiders for a limited period.

Even if the scheme can be put over, public officials said yesterday, it will take a week perhaps to get any cash on it.

Plan Criticized by Strawn.

This plan has been criticized by Mr. Strawn as "wasteful of the taxpayers' money and detrimental to the citizens as a denial of public service which would otherwise be given."

Herbert C. Heller of the New York investment house bearing his name is interested in ascertaining just how much profit the city and school board are offering, or will permit the buyers of the warrants to take.

He conferred yesterday with City Controller Schmidt and Corporation Counsel Ettelson on their effort to sell $27,150,000 worth of corporate tax warrants.

Concerning the progress made, Mr. Heller said the conversation was "satisfactory." Asked if he was hopeful, Controller Schmidt replied: "I can't say." Mr. Ettelson was noncommittal.

After the conference Mr. Heller left Chicago for Kansas City and from there will go to New York. He said he expects to return to Chicago this week, perhaps by Wednesday.

Mr. Heller is credited by the controller's office with being a factor in the sale last April 2 of $40,000,000 in tax warrants—$20,000,000 for the city corporate fund and $20,000,000 for the schools.

Details of Previous Sale.

The purchasing syndicate, as given out at that time, included the Continental Illinois, First National, Foreman's National, National Bank of the Republic, Harris Trust and Savings, Central Trust, State bank, Northern Trust, Chicago Trust, and the following New York investment banks: Lehman Brothers, E. H. Rollins & Co., and Hallgarten & Co.

They required that all the money be borrowed at one time, placed in Chicago depositories to be paid out at various times between April 1 and Sept. 20. The bank depositories paid 2 per cent on the average monthly balance.

It is understood that Mr. Heller wants to know whether the city will stand for a "little better deal than that."

According to the schedule of withdrawals, the city drew out its $20,000,000 at the rate of $1,900,000 semi-monthly between April 1 and Sept. 1. The school board drew out its $20,000,000 in amounts varying between $540,000 and $3,900,000 between April 1 and Sept. 20.

At 6 per cent the city paid $503,013 in interest up to the time it came in possession of its complete $20,000,000, and the school board paid $568,767 in interest. But each received 2 per cent on the average monthly balance, so the city received back in interest, for that same period, $94,550 in interest, and the school board, $72,134. The net result is that the city paid $408,462 in interest on its $20,000,000 loan for the period, and the school board paid $496,632 on its $20,000,000.

If the city had borrowed its $20,000,000 as it needed it from time to time and the school board had adopted that same plan, the city would have paid, in that period, $241,775 in interest on its $20,000,000 and the school board would have paid $216,756 at 6 per cent on the loans. It thus becomes apparent that the city paid $166,687 in interest on money before it received it; and the school board paid $279,876 in interest on money before it received it.

Figuring Up the Profit.

The city's spread of $166,687 in unbusinesslike interest payments is the equivalent of 4.1 per cent on the $20,000,000 loan for the time, within the period, the city had the money. It follows that the city paid the equivalent of 6 per cent interest and 4.1 per cent spread, or a total of 10.1 per cent on the $20,000,000 for the actual time it had the cash in the period between April 1 and Sept. 1. If the syndicate was able to sell the tax warrants on Sept. 1, it had the spread, minus the expense of sale, as a profit.

The school board's spread of $279,876 is the equivalent of 7.75 per cent on its $20,000,000 loan for the time, within the period, that the school board had actual use of the cash. So the school board paid 6 per cent on the money for the time it had it, plus 7.75 per cent on the time it did not have use of the money—a total of 13.75 per cent for the period between April 1 and Sept. 20.

Tax anticipation warrants then were in good repute compared with their standing at present, judging from the fact that the city and school board have been unable to sell any thus far and the county board has failed to get bids twice for $7,000,000 worth of warrants. If Mr. Heller desires "something a little better" than those deals, as reported, and gets it, the city and school board will pay a record price for money since the civil war.

Hayden N. Bell, attorney for the county board, yesterday submitted an opinion in direct opposition to one given a few days ago by Corporation Counsel Ettelson upholding the validity of a proposed provision to make the city's tax anticipation warrants redeemable on short notice. Mr. Bell said he believed that such a provision would make the city's warrants void and advised against its inclusion in the county warrants.

He pointed out that the provision calls for the repayment of the warrants out of funds other than those derived from the 1930 tax collection against which they are issued. The statute, Attorney Bell declared, makes the warrants payable only out of the tax revenue.

"Would Injure Market."

"To float tax warrants, combined with this special provision, which contemplates repayment out of funds other than those derived from the tax collection, would not only be illegal but would injure the market and make the sale of warrants of other taxing bodies very difficult," Mr. Bell said.

The Fred J. Ringley company, which prints the city council proceedings, took five tax anticipation warrants of $10,000 each yesterday in settlement of an unpaid city printing bill. It was reported that Charles H. Luck, who has been unable to get pay for envelopes supplied to the city, will accept one warrant for $1,000 tomorrow. In addition the city yesterday sold public library warrants totaling $10,000 to an estate.

CONSERVATOR NAMED FOR REMUS WHISKY HAS HIS TROUBLES

Jack Rubens of the public administrator's office is in a quandary. Probate Judge Horner yesterday made him conservator of sixteen bottles of twenty year old whisky found in a safety deposit box of the Phillip State Bank and Trust company, 7001 North Clark street.

The box had been rented by Mrs. Imogene Remus, who was slain by her husband, George Remus, Cincinnati bootleg king. He was acquitted at a trial in 1927. The box was rented under the name of Mrs. A. W. Holmes. It was opened by bank officials when the rent was a year overdue and a few days before the public administrator learned of its existence in the search for the reported $2,000,000 lost fortune of Remus.

B. L. Rossett, president of the bank; Michael J. Long, cashier, and C. J. Martin, vault custodian, were called for questioning by Judge Horner. They testified that they did not know the identity of their client. The judge allowed them to go.

"What shall I do with the liquor?" Rubens asked. "Shall I turn it over to the government?"

"No, the government would only confiscate it," the judge replied.

"But what shall I do with it?"

"Use your own judgment," the judge smiled.

Mr. Rubens is open to suggestion.

The Stanhope Bedroom Suite

"The Stanhope" group—part of which is shown in the illustration—reflects the solidity and strange originality of beauty which in so vivid and virile a manner pervaded the furniture of the time of James I of England. Its guiding principles of structural excellence and comfort are exemplified in this well-proportioned suite.

The true Jacobean motif and style has been incorporated in a manner which impresses one with the strength and dignity of the furniture of olden times.

Among the very interesting features of the suite are the skillfully executed mitred mouldings and the applied turned balusters. The spiral twisted legs that were so much used during this period appear in some of the pieces of the group adding character and individuality to the ensemble.

Much attention has been given to the hand-carved mirrors, whose crestings bear the Stuart crown carved in the center, lending a pleasing old-world atmosphere.

The use of solid walnut combined with finely figured walnut burls on all drawer fronts, and the high-lighted antique finish mark this bedroom suite as one of genuine distinction.

STATE INCOME TAX SOUGHT TO RESCUE CHICAGO

Seven Groups Plan Plea to Legislature.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

An income tax for Illinois will be urged in a special session of the legislature to care for Chicago's financial ailments. A tentative agreement on a revised tax program has been reached by the following organizations:

1—Chicago Real Estate board.
2—Illinois Agricultural association.
3—Illinois Association of Real Estate Boards.
4—Illinois Bankers' association.
5—Cook County Real Estate board.
6—Building Managers' Association of Chicago.
7—Chicago Fireproof Building association.

These have decided on the following policy, according to Francis Manierre's report to the Chicago Real Estate board:

"On real estate we want protection against more taxes and a guarantee of less. To meet our approval any proposed amendment will have to be so framed as to make it possible to shift some of our burden to those who are enjoying governmental protection without paying for it and who are perfectly capable of carrying their fair share of the cost.

Agree on Two Points.

"We agreed on two principles: First, that any amendment must be so drawn as to prevent classification of real estate; and, second, that a full credit must be allowed for any ad valorem tax paid. That means that with the exception of reforestation and mineral lands all real estate must be in one class and that any ad valorem tax paid will be allowed as a deductible credit from any other tax."

The seven groups have not specifically reached an agreement upon an income tax amendment, but they are in general accord on the principle. The special revenue commission appointed by the last general assembly at the request of Gov. Emmerson is required to report "at the next session of the legislature," which, the seven organizations assert, means the special session.

Explains Tax Attitude.

Speaking on the attitude of the seven organizations, Mr. Manierre said: "Your committees [legislation and taxation committees of the Chicago Real Estate board] favor an income tax because it is just, for the burden falls according to the ability to pay; because it is decisive, leaving little to the discretion of the collecting bodies; and because it would reach the largest field of taxpayers and, therefore, produce the maximum revenue and the maximum number of tax conscious voters."

"We have met on three different occasions with the governor's commission, where various ideas and views were aired. The net result was that each organization was instructed to draw what it considers a proper amendment and submit it to the commission. Then the commission will try to work out a composite amendment which will be satisfactory to all."

Abandoned Baby Finds New Home

Mrs. Edward Carruthers, 707 Junior terrace, with baby boy abandoned on doorstep. The Carruthers family has decided to keep the boy instead of sending him to an orphanage. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Found on Doorstep

A baby boy three weeks old who opened his eyes from a sound sleep to find himself on somebody's doorstep at 707 Junior terrace forgot about being abandoned yesterday. Instead of being trundled immediately to an orphans' home, as is the lot of most little doorstep waifs, he was welcomed into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Carruthers, who live at the address, and given the name of Edward Jr. Mrs. Carruthers' own children are dead. She said last night that baby is a healthy, well developed child, and she hopes to raise him as her own son.

MRS. CATT WARS ON ARMS WORK IN U. S. SCHOOLS

New York, Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Military training in schools and colleges was attacked as conducive to war by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, chairman of the Conference on the Cause and Cure of War, and by Miss Agnes MacPhail, member of the Canadian parliament and representative of Canada at the last league of nations assembly today at a luncheon given at the Astor by the committee on militarism on education.

Mrs. Catt condemned such training particularly in the public schools as "absolutely wrong and ridiculous." Declaring herself "postively and forever against this sort of training," she went on say, "We have a treaty which renounces war. We have agreed to settle international differences by some peaceful method and not by force . Training for war in the schools is absolutely inconsistent with this policy."

FIRE HALTS LOOP TRAFIC.

Traffic on Randolph street was tied up for a few minutes during the morning rush hour yesterday, when fire companies responded to an alarm at the New Haven Clock company, 215 West Randolph street, where a hot soldering iron lying on a bench started a small fire.

CAN YOU FOLLOW WANT AD TRAIL? PRIZES WAITING

Can you follow a trail?

THE TRIBUNE's new contest, with prizes for those who can discover hidden advertisements in the want ad section, brought returns beyond all expectation last week and today the second key cartoon may be found in a conspicuous position in the news section.

Prizes totaling $100 are offered each Sunday to those who find all the hidden ads and send their results to the Hidden Want Ad editor, Tribune square. This week's replies must be received by Thursday, Feb. 13, at 6 p. m. Winners are judged on the correctness of their entries and the neatness and ingenuity shown in presenting the contributions. Prize winners in last week's hunt will be announced next Sunday.

The Hidden Want Ad editor reported yesterday that, while a great number of answers had been received last week, many persons had not been astute in the manner in which they arranged the clews and few got all the clews. Today's contest is a little more difficult, but compensation was found by some last Sunday in addition to the discovery of the clews. Some trail followers, searching the want ad colums, found good jobs and many others found bargain which they otherwise would have missed.

BRITISHER SEES U. S. HEADING FOR NEW PROSPERITY

LONDON, Feb. 8.—(AP)—Lord Rothermere, writing in tomorrow's Sunday Dispatch, expresses the view as a first hand observer that the United States is due for another march along the road of sustained industrial development and progressive prosperity. He declares that the United States has triumphantly survived last fall's stock market crash.

"The nation as a whole has and is entitled to have," he says, "unshakeable confidence in its enduring prosperity. That prosperity is based upon an abundant supply of the principal raw materials within America's own borders.

"The development of these is carried on by a fortunate alliance of extremely high executive capacity with the most intelligent, hardworking and ambitious labor in the world. The United States possesses every asset that makes a nation rich. In equally abundant measure she has the men, the money, the materials and the markets."

DEATH OF 2 BARES CAVE IN BROOKLYN WITH STILL, LIQUOR

New York, Feb. 8.—[Special.]—A cave in Brooklyn, thirty feet long, six feet high, and twelve feet wide, and containing a worm 100 gallon still, five barrels of whisky, five one-gallon cans of whisky, twelve quart bottles of whisky, seventy-two pint bottles of whisky, and several jugs of wine, was found by police today following deaths of two Italians overcome by gas.

The cave is not a natural one and police look upon it as the probable achievement of at least one of the dead men. They are Giuseppe Randazzo, under whose back yard it runs, and Joseph Jenna. From Giuseppe's brother Tony, now at King's county hospital, and likely to die, the police may learn the secret.

THE WORKING GIRL TOILS FOR FAMILY, NOT HER FREEDOM

League of Women Voters Hears Economist.

The theory that single girls are holding jobs for the sake of "freedom" and extra spending money for luxuries was shattered yesterday when Dr. Don D. Lescohier of the department of economics of the University of Wisconsin told members of the Forum of the League of Women Voters that 50 per cent of them contributed their entire earnings toward family support.

He addressed the forum at a conference of women in industry sponsored by the organization in a meeting at the Congress hotel.

Help Their Families.

"In addition to the 50 per cent who contribute all they earn to their families," he said, "a large majority of the remaining 50 per cent not only pay their family for their room and board but more or less regularly contribute articles of clothing to younger brothers and sisters in school."

The number of married women gainfully employed increased 40 per cent in the last ten years, Dr. Lescohler said.

"The reason for the increase in the number of married women in industry and the professions is the increase in the standard of living." Dr. Lescohier stated. "You cannot say that married women work for additional luxuries, because 'luxuries' is such a relative term. Is keeping her children in high school a luxury?

"There is a grave danger, however, of reducing the general wage made by men. In countries where employment of women has been general a low wage has obtained. I cannot say whether it will here, of course."

Favors Protective Legislation.

Dr. Lescohier scored women's clubs which act to prevent legislation protecting women in industry on the grounds that anything which discriminates in favor of women prevents them from having "equality and freedom."

"I discovered one day that my wife held that opinion, although she did not belong to an organization sponsoring it," he said. "I told her, 'Yes, but you have never stood elbow deep in grease in a factory all day long. If you were a working woman you would care less about theories concerning freedom and more about comfortable working conditions.'"

The industrial world is still a man's world, according to Miss Frances Perkins, industrial commissioner of the New York state department of labor.

"Women suffer under many handicaps in industry," she told her feminine audience. "The machines, the chairs, the tools in factories were built for the stature of a man and not for that of the average woman.

"Women, therefore, do not work to their greatest efficiency except in those carefully managed industries which have long since adapted the environment to the individual man or woman in the industry."

THE TRIBUNE CONTEST OF INTERESTING LETTERS

Every morning The Tribune prints a photograph of the stamp and postmark and the name and address of the recipient of a letter from an interesting or little known place, with a map showing its origin and a brief word of description.

If you have received a letter from an interesting or little known place send the envelope to The Tribune, stating name of place where it was mailed. The sender of every envelope which is reproduced will be paid one dollar.

From Eskilstuna, Sweden

Letter received by L. Brandy, 1031 Hyde Park boulevard, Chicago.

Eskilstuna is the Sheffield of Sweden and is located on the Hjelmar, 57 miles west of Stockholm. It is said to derive its name from Eskil, an English missionary, who suffered martyrdom on the spot in the thirteenth century.

It is the seat of the main metal industries of the country, producing copperware, hardware, cutlery, firearms and other iron and steel products. Its cutlery is especially noted, as is also its damascened work.

WHEELER FLAYS FARM BOARD AND CALLS FOR SPEED

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Senator Burton K. Wheeler [Dem., Mont.], who opposed the farm relief act and has been a persistent critic of the Hoover farm board, renewed his attacks today in the senate.

Citing recent declines in prices of wheat and cotton, Senator Wheeler declared that in spite of promises of farm relief by the Republican party and the existence of a farm board for seven months, the wheat farmers are in a more serious plight than ever before and cotton has dropped to the lowest price since 1926.

He complained because the farm board waited for six months before appointing an advisory council of wheat and only now is reaching the point of organizing a stabilization corporation. Unless the proposed corporation acts quickly, Senator Wheeler predicted, serious results may ensue in the wheat market.

Pointing out that coöperatives have bought wheat and cotton on the advice of the farm board, Senator Wheeler said that they are threatened with serious losses. On the basis of yesterday's prices, the Montana senator said that wheat coöperatives have lost 9 cents per bushel on their purchases.

ASKS SEARCH FOR WIFE.

M. D. Andrews, 61 Cedar street, a grocery clerk, yesterday asked the police to search for his wife who left home to go to a theater with a friend on Friday night and did not return.

POLICEMAN WHO CAUGHT SLAYER GETS HERO PRIZE

$100 Tribune Award to Daniel T. Collins.

Policeman Daniel T. Collins, who captured the slayer of a policeman after a running gun battle, has been awarded the January prize of $100 given monthly by THE TRIBUNE to policemen and firemen for courageous deeds. Information obtained from the murderer led to the arrest of his two companions, and the three gunmen later were indicted for murder.

Collins, who served during the world war in the 131st infantry, has been a member of the police force for seven years. Two years ago he was awarded extra compensation for his work, with three other policemen, in the arrest of four holdup men who had preyed on the South Chicago district. He is 33 years old, lives at 7742 South Ada street. He has been married less than four months.

See Gunmen on Street.

It was nearly midnight and the streets deserted when Collins and his partner, Louis Szewczyk, who was slain, noticed three men walking west on the south side of 90th street at Buffalo avenue. One of the men had a hand thrust in the top of his overcoat, apparently resting on the butt of a gun.

The two policemen, in citizens' dress, were driving in 90th street in the same direction. They halted their car a few feet west of Buffalo avenue and as they did the three men crossed to the north side of 90th street in the rear of the police car. Szewczyk jumped out of the machine and, throwing back his coat to show his star, shouted twice, "We are police officers."

Instantly the gunman with his hand in the top of his overcoat drew a revolver and fired one shot, which killed Szewczyk. Undaunted, Collins leaped from the machine and started for the three men, who fled in different directions. The murderer ran east in 90th street, with Collins in pursuit.

Bullets Fly in Chase.

Collins fired once and missed and as he did two shots whistled past him. Collins continued the chase. As they rounded the corner of 88th street and Buffalo avenue after circling a couple blocks, the murderer flung his gun in a snow bank and raised his arms in surrender.

Another policeman, John F. Cullen, arrived at that time and aided Collins arrest the bandit. The latter gave his name as Max Garcia and the names of his companions as Alfonso Reyes and Jose Garcia.

Szewczyk was married and the father of two children, one a year old and the other four years old. He lived at 9332 Colfax avenue and was stationed at the South Chicago police station with Collins.

Other instances of bravery were numerous during January. Two outstanding deeds were performed by Policemen George Wise of the Hyde Park station and Eugene McNally of the detective bureau.

Bandit Shoots from Ambush.

Wise advanced upon a bandit who fired at him from a hiding place behind several clerks in a drug store. As Wise continued to advance without firing the bandit handed his revolver to one of the clerks and surrendered. McNally, accompanied by several other policemen, made two attempts to get into the barricaded room of an armed madman and finally killed the gunman after repeated shooting and the throwing of tear gas bombs.

Patrolmen John Lamb and Frank Kolgraff, then probationary policemen, interrupted a holdup and arrested one of two bandits. The other was captured later. Patrolman John D. Greer, assigned to the state's attorney's office, shot a bandit who tried to rob the desk clerk at the Delaware Apartment hotel, and Lincoln Park Policeman Clarence Binder pursued a thief after the thief had wounded him. Sergt. William Doyle wounded one of two bandits whom he and Patrolman Bernard Kelly were approaching to question when the bandits fired upon them. After wounding his man, Doyle went to the aid of Kelly, who was struggling with the other for possession of a gun.

Court Holds Democrat Is Legal Mayor of Whiting

Thomas Boyle, Democrat, was declared the legal mayor of Whiting yesterday by Judge E. Miles Norton in the Lake county Circuit court as a result of a suit brought by Boyle against Walter Schrage, Republican, former mayor, who has been serving since the death of Francis McNamara, winner in the November election. Boyle, on the face of the election returns, was elected by seven votes, but McNamara demanded a recount and was declared the winner. After McNamara's death Schrage was elected by the city council to fill the vacancy. Schrage will appeal yesterday's ruling in favor of Boyle to the state Supreme court.

Still Raider, He Set Fire to Liquor and House Burns

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 8.—[U. P.]—Prohibition raids sometimes end in a blaze of glory for dry agents. One conducted by government men here ended simply in a blaze with doubtful glory. Agents who arrested Nick Gullto and Paul Desmona found a 300 gallon still in operation. They allowed the liquor to gurgle out on the floor.

Gullto threw a lighted match into the pool of liquor. Instantly the home was in flames. The fire was extinguished before doing serious damage.

CITY TO APPEAL ADVERSE PHONE RATE DECISION

An appeal from the federal court decision granting the Illinois Bell Telephone company a permanent injunction restraining the Illinois commerce commission from enforcing a reduction in telephone rates will be taken by the city, Corporation Counsel Ettelson announced yesterday. The city intervened in the suit when the company attacked the commission order seven years ago.

Benjamin F. Goldstein, one of the attorneys representing the city, offered to make an appeal to the United States Supreme court on a no compensation basis if the decision is adverse. Ettelson said he had accepted that offer.

Business Men Commend Russell Police Regime.

became known as "the secret six." This committee will study the crime situation and report by Feb. 21.

Commends Police Chief.

Mr. Stevens congratulated Commissioner Russell for his administration.

"I have the highest regard for the commissioner," he said. "I don't believe he may be honestly criticized. The situation about which we are all properly alarmed is of long standing and tremendous development. It can't be cured by any single stroke, but requires long, painful, thoughtful processes.

"Our police organization is greatly undermanned. New York City, where crime is just as rampant as it is here, but where it is not nearly so much advertised, appropriates $60,000,000 a year for her police force. Our appropriation is approximately $16,000,000. Furthermore, our police organization has not been overhauled for many years, and any organization needs a tuning up once in a while.

Plan for Reorganization.

"Bruce Smith, brought here to reorganize the police department, has had 100 per cent coöperation from Commissioner Russell. The complete plan for reorganization is now in the commissioner's hands and will soon be presented to the city council.

"Commissioner Russell deserves the greatest credit for inviting a study of his department by men he cannot in any way control. He has carried out all the recommendations and given the fullest assistance.

"If Chicago were to lose Russell now it would lose the greatest opportunity it ever had to form the kind of police force it needs in this emergency."

Hunter Counsels Coolness.

"This situation is one in which men should not lose their heads," was the comment of Mr. Hunter. "After all, this is a law abiding community and we must proceed according to the law. It is my impression that Comissioner Russell is doing all that he can do with the force at his command.

"It seems to me he's stood up very well under discouraging conditions, with the police department undermanned, unpaid, dispirited and discouraged. It is always a popular thing to find fault with a police chief. What Russell needs is a word of encouragement and support of all the respectful citizenry of this community in his effort to police this city."

Sprague Blames Dry Law.

Col. Sprague laid the street murders and general crime to prohibition.

"A whole lot of people know that is the truth," he said. "A good many of them seem to be afraid to say it. Well, I am not afraid to say it because it's the truth. I don't know that the Association of Commerce committee was trying to criticize Commissioner Russell in its statement. Anyway, it's perfectly ridiculous for any group to say it is going to take over the duties of a police chief or force and I know our business men have no such ideas.

"The department is tremendously undermanned. Prohibition has given the gangs and the gunmen great resources. All the gangsters are organized. Russell is all right; no man could do better and no man could do much more than he is doing to fight crime in Chicago. I have asked myself, Are we a less law abiding community than other cities? Aside from what results from the dry laws, I don't think we are."

Hampered by Lack of Men.

"Speaking for myself," said Mr. Gorham, "I will be glad to say that I have a very well defined notion that Commissioner Russell is doing the best he can with the equipment at his command. He has purpose and he is in earnest. He is trying to do his job in a thoroughly workmanlike manner. He is hampered by the lack of men and perhaps by the way those he has now are distributed. I don't know Russell personally, but he's a good man and I have a high regard for him."

As to the causes for crimes of various kinds, including bombing and murder, Mr. Gorham also spoke of prohibition. Before prohibition, he said, the gangs were not organized as they are now. Neither did they have vast funds.

"I can't remember such street killings as we have now happening before prohibition, can you?" he asked.

"This situation calls for action and coöperation between all the various groups and departments," said Mr. Sonsteby. "I don't think any group or individual is responsible. I think the action of the Association of Commerce was necessary to save the city's good name. The reorganization plan now in Commissioner Russell's hands will have the effect of placing responsibility for such situations on individuals. When it is put into effect it will be easy to place blame where it belongs."

Orders Hoodlum Roundup.

The arrest on sight of all known criminals and hoodlums as a means of curbing crime was urged by Acting Chief of Detectives John Egan yesterday at a meeting of 90 squad leaders in the central police building.

The squad leaders promised to fill the cells with known criminals in the next 48 hours.

At the same time an order was issued by Commissioner Russell ordering that three plain clothes policemen shall replace the two uniformed patrolmen who have been operating each police station's squad car. The order takes effect at 8 a. m. today. The change is being made on the theory that plain clothes men will be more effective in arresting criminals and hoodlums because their identity will not be known.

Girl Confesses Slaying at Party

MRS. DOROTHY BOVE.

PASQUALE CALABRESE.

Gives Two Versions

Mrs. Dorothy Bove, 25 years old, 432 Loomis street, told the police yesterday that she shot and killed Pasquale Calabrese, 30 years old, a laborer, during a party in his flat at 1010 South Sangamon street, early in the morning.

According to the woman's story, she shot Calabrese because he tried to attack her. Later she said there had also been an argument over money.

Mrs. Bove was arrested with Mrs. Stella Crowley, 22 years old, by West Park Policeman Martin O'Neil and Policeman Matt O'Rourke of the Des Plaines street station after the women had fled with a man companion, Sam Baratta, 25 years old, 923 Sholto street.

A policeman was placed at the home of Baratta to take him into custody when he returns.

WHEN DRY MEETS DRY THEN COMES A DISAGREEMENT

To demonstrate how easily a bootlegger may be convicted when the prosecution shows proper vigor, ladies of the Waukegan chapter of the Woman's Christian Temperance union staged a mock trial in a prohibition case yesterday in the Chapel Street Christian church, Waukegan, before 500 spectators.

Norton Flood, Waukegan realty dealer of dry proclivities, consented to play the bootlegger and stand trial before a jury of six women and six men. Husbands of several of the Woman's Christian Temperance union members played policemen and swore on the stand that the defendant had sold them a gallon of wine, three pints of whisky and three "shots." Flood then took the stand and, amid the tittering of the ladies, categorically denied the accusations, and the case was given to the jury without corroboration of his testimony.

It resembled what lawyers call an "open and shut" case; and the ladies settled back with equanimity to await a verdict. Four hours elapsed and most of the spectators had gone home when the jury came in with the intelligence that they could not reach an agreement. What was worse, the foreman privately admitted the balloting was 9 to 3 for acquittal.

Reds Raze Lenin's Wooden Tomb for One of Granite

MOSCOW, Feb. 8.—(AP)—Behind a great wooden fence, in front of Moscow's famous Kremlin, hundreds of soviet workmen are battering down the grim wooden tomb of Vladimir Ilich Lenin, "father of Bolshevism." On the site is to rise a mausoleum of granite and malachite. The embalmed remains of Lenin have been transferred to a special mortuary chamber in the Kremlin, where the coffin is guarded day and night by armed red soldiers.

GIRL CONFESSES ROBBERY BY RUSE AT LAKE FOREST

Catherine McCarty, 18 years old, the auburn haired miss who was arrested early last Wednesday in her apartment at 2340 Calumet avenue, admitted last night to Lake Forest police that it was she who, posing as a friend of Mrs. Harlan B. Eldred, charged a frock to Mrs. Eldred's account and stole a diamond ring from the Eldred home at 495 Rosemary road, Lake Forest. A maid admitted her to the home, the Eldreds being then in Florida.

When arraigned yesterday before Justice of the Peace Edwin Burgess of Lake Forest, the girl defiantly proclaimed her innocence. Held in a $10,000 bond, she was remanded to the Lake Forest jail. After a paternal lecture by Police Chief Lester Tiffany, she finally broke down and admitted the theft. Then she telephoned her aunt, Mrs. Mary McCarty, with whom she lived, and told her to bring the stolen property to the police station.

HISTORY EDITOR CITES CLASSICS AS BREVITY GUIDE

Entries Must Be Received Within 7 Days.

Entrants in THE TRIBUNE contest for the best 500 word history of the United States should study the classical examples of brevity in literature. This suggestion was offered by the history editor as entries poured in with only seven days remaining until the deadline.

No histories will be received after midnight Feb. 15. The winning writer will receive $1,000. The second prize is $500 and the third is $250. Seven additional awards of $50 each will be made. The contest was inspired by the agreement of former President Coolidge to write a history of America in 500 words, which is to be carved upon the Mount Rushmore memorial in South Dakota.

Caesar Offers Example.

A concise bit of history, as revealed in literature, is Julius Caesar's "Veni, vidi, vici," the history editor pointed out. In the three words, which in translation become six, "I came, I saw, I conquered," sum up an entire campaign, culminating in a glorious victory. Reading of his "Commentaries" provides a striking lesson in the laconic style.

Lord Byron holds out encouragement to the prospective entrant in his lines:

And history, with all her volumes vast,
Hath but one page.

Shakespeare offers a mark to shoot at. In 212 words he gives a history of man, admirably divided into seven stages, each complete in itself. This history is to be found in "As You Like It," Act 2, Scene 7. W. S. Gilbert has his major general of the "Pirates of Penzance" give his information on "matters vegetable, animal, and mineral" in 355 words set to the tuneful music of Arthur Sullivan. The sum total of human knowledge, heroically set in verse.

Philosophy in 3 Words.

The sun king, Louis XIV., gave the history of France in the five words, "L'etat, c'est moi," which in free translation becomes, "I am the state." Descartes put all philosophy in three words, "Cogito, ergo sum," which in English is "I think, therefore I am."

Mrs. Reinecke Takes Oath as Election Commissioner

Praised by Jarecki

Surrounded by flowers and friends, Mrs. Mabel Gilmore Reinecke was inducted into office yesterday as the Republican member of the board of election commissioners.

"The appointment of a woman," said County Judge Jarecki after administering the oath, "is simply a recognition of the important part played by women in the civic and political affairs of this community. The appointment of Mrs. Reinecke is a recognition of her unusual qualifications."

Among those present in addition to Commissioners Maguire and Lipsky were George W. Reinecke, husband of the appointee, Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, Mrs. Harry Hart, Miss Judith Lowenthal, Charles V. Barrett, Bernard W. Snow and Mrs. Elsie M. Barr.

The American liner was damaged in the stern above the water line but nobody was hurt. The Philotis was towed back to port. The accident was due to a storm, coupled with faulty steering of the Philotis.

SPRIGHTLY RACE FOR TWO STATE CONGRESS SEATS

Flock of Candidates Out for Nomination.

BY PARKE BROWN.

While political records fail to show that any one ever referred to a race for nomination or election as congressman-at-large from Illinois as sprightly, there are prospects this year for a much livelier Republican fight than usual over the two federal representatives chosen by the state as a whole.

There are nine or ten candidates working for those two places now. The number itself is unusual, but observers say that more remarkable is the fact that it includes at least half a dozen considered good timber who are serious contenders.

In many contests of the past two incumbents have been conceded to have the right of way and often, in presidential years particularly, the head of the state ticket and the state officers occupy the limelight to the almost complete exclusion of those running for congressman-at-large.

New Situation This Year.

That situation does not exist this year, an off year when the top of the ticket is the United States senatorship, because Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick has relinquished voluntarily any claim she might have had on her desk in the lower house and the other incumbent, Richard Yates two years ago ran behind her and Congressman Henry Rathbone. Yates came into the nomination at the hands of the state central committee after Rathbone died between the primary and the election.

Therefore a number of men with Washington aspirations consider this an excellent opportunity for them. Two former members of congress have declared publicly their willingness to return to Washington by this route. One is George Edmund Foss who was elected first in 1895 and represented the Tenth and North Shore district until 1918 when he made an unsuccessful primary race for the United States senate, being defeated by the late Medill McCormick.

The other former congressman is Frank H. Funk of Bloomington. He represented his home district from 1921 to 1927 and served on the appropriations committee during that time. Earlier he had served in the state senate for four years. He also was a member of the state utilities commission, now the commerce commission, under Govs. Lowden and Dunne for seven years.

Former Congressman Funk is a farmer and live stock man. He owns and operates 2,200 acres along scientific lines. He is a graduate of Yale and played on the varsity football team.

Another veteran in political service is Justus Johnson of Aurora, clerk of the Appellate court of his district, who has given long service to the state central committee.

Day May Enter Race.

Now comes Stephen Day, son of former Justice Day of the United States Supreme court, and says he may file for congressman-at-large. He lives in Evanston and practices law in Chicago. He was a Republican candidate for this same office in 1920 and 1922 and was a candidate for attorney general of Illinois in 1924.

This county also has three service men—at least—as aspirants. One is Thomas K. Davey, 6549 South Artesian avenue. Another is Francis W. Peterson of La Grange. Davey is a former president of the granite cutters' union and is now the employment officer of the Cook county council of the American Legion.

The running mates of former Senator James Hamilton Lewis in his race for the senate on the Democratic ticket were announced by State Chairman Thomas F. Donovan. They will be: For congressman at large, Walter Nesbit, Belleville, secretary o fthe United Mine Workers, and former Judge W. H. Dietrich of Beardstown; for state treasurer, M. L. Zacharias, president of the Ashland Avenue State bank, Chicago; for superintendent of public instruction, Mrs. Eva L. Batterton, Springfield.

FRANCE REFUSES LANDING RIGHTS TO U. S. AIR LINE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 8.—Negotiations pending here between the Pan-American Airways and the Aero Postale of France will determine establishment of a New York to Buenos Aires air line. The line was to be opened this month, but has been definitely postponed because of France's refusal to use colonial territory for landing fields.

Differences between the French government and private American interests have become so grave that investments of several million dollars of the Pan-American Airways have been set aside until a settlement is reached.

The French claims on reciprocity declined the permission of the Pan-American Airways to use the islands of Guadeloupe and Martinique in the West Indies, as well as French Guiana on the mainland as stations. The French counterproposal said permission would be given, if the American firm would construct airfields and hangars between Cayenne and Natal, with the free use for the French.

Robbers Kidnap Cashier, Rob Him of $495 Pay Roll

Claiborne W. Halliburton, 3908 Ainslie street, cashier for the Rumford Baking Powder company, 155 West Illinois street, was robbed of $15 of his own money and a $495 pay roll of the company by two robbers who kidnaped him as he was returning from a bank with the money. The gunmen stopped Halliburton on LaSalle street near Austin avenue and forced him into a sedan at the point of a revolver. They put him out of the car at Fulton and Ada streets after robbing him.

Russian Red Party Cut to 1,551,000 After Expulsions

MOSCOW, Feb. 8.—(AP)—Soviet government figures show that the "purging" of the communist party, which has been in progress since last spring, has resulted in the expulsion of 11 per cent of the membership. On Oct. 1, 1929, there were 1,551,000 in the party, exclusive of those serving with the Red army. The women number 211,800.

Insulated Oven cuts gas bill in half —assures cool kitchen

The Universal insulated oven cuts the amount of gas needed to heat the oven in half. It keeps the heat inside the oven where it belongs. Tests show that the average outside temperature of a Universal insulated oven is only 101.25 degrees. Compare this with the average outside temperature of 185 degrees for an uninsulated oven. Think of what this insulated oven will mean to you on hot, sultry summer days! This new Universal feature can be had for a small extra cost.

Now you can broil as easily as you fry. The In-a-Drawer Broiler—Universal's marvelous new broiling feature—makes it safe and easy for you to cook this healthful way.

For many years, leading doctors in all parts of the world have urged the eating of more broiled foods and less fried foods. Doctors know that broiled foods retain all of their nourishing, body-building values. Equally important, you and especially your children can easily digest broiled foods.

Fried foods with the grease cooked into them are unhealthful. The coating of grease seals in the nourishing food—makes your body work twice as hard to try to digest them.

That is why people who eat too much fried food suffer from constipation—have unlovely complexions.

With Universal's patented In-a-Drawer Broiler all former dangers and inconveniences of broiling have been removed. There is no bending or stooping—no danger of burned hands or face.

A touch of the finger and the entire broiler rolls out into view. Broiling foods are instantly accessible—ready for turning or removal without the slightest difficulty or inconvenience.

Think, too, how appetizing broiled foods are! Rich, juicy steaks broiled just as the great chefs would prepare them! Savory nourishing chops! Men love them. Children crave them. And now with this Universal In-a-Drawer Broiler you can serve them as easily as you prepare unhealthful fried foods.

But this Universal Range offers you far more than this big broiling advantage. In every respect it represents the latest ideas in ranges. Embodied in it are our 58 years of experience in building high grade ranges.

Never before has a cast iron, porcelain enameled Universal In-a-Drawer Broiler Gas Range been offered at such a low price. Volume production has resulted in great savings, enabling us to give you added features at lower prices.

Also you can have this beautiful range with an Insulated Oven—another new Universal feature—at a small extra cost. This marvelous new feature saves half the oven gas and keeps the kitchen cool in summer.

You must see this beautiful new Universal Range to fully realize what a great value it is. The Universal dealer in your community now has it on display. See how easy it is to broil this new way. Vital Work of Big Chicago School Revealed.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Many Ignorant of Location.

Those are only ten of the history making achievements of this great medical school within the last three or four years. Its current researches in puerperal fever and in nephritis and diabetes are expected to add momentous chapters to its records of discovery.

And yet few Chicago laymen know where this school is. Most people take for granted that it must be in Champaign-Urbana, the main seat of the University of Illinois. Sometimes acquaintances of Dr. David John Davis, dean of the university's college of medicine, will say, "I don't see how, doctor, you can live in a Chicago suburb and direct and teach in a school a hundred and thirty miles away."

It frets the dean and his colleagues to hear that—makes them wonder whether the mighty engine of science and service which they serve ever can make any dent in the social consciousness of a community that helps pay the eight hundred thousand dollars a year which it costs to run the engine.

Two Miles from City Hall.

For, as a matter of fact, the university's "medical campus," as its group of colleges, institutes, laboratories, and hospitals for the training of physicians, dentists, and pharmacists is called, comprises blocks of stately buildings little more than two miles west of Chicago's city hall.

Of that group the college of medicine has 549 students, the college of dentistry 184, the school of pharmacy 620, and there are 80 graduate students.

The value of the ground, buildings, and equipment of the college of medicine and its affiliated hospital, which is owned by the state department of public welfare, is nearly $5,000,000. In the spring the university will begin the construction of a group of buildings (pictured on this page) which are to house laboratories for its colleges of medicine and dentistry at a cost of $1,500,000. By September, 1931, the medical campus will represent an investment of nearly $6,500,000.

100,000 Patients Treated.

Last year the college of medicine treated a hundred thousand out-patients.

The supreme prize of the profession for a young man or woman who has just finished the four years' course in an accredited medical school in Cook county is an eighteen months' interneship in Cook county hospital, the largest civil hospital in the world (3,500 beds). These interneships are awarded on a competitive basis. There are seventy of them. Last year graduates of the University of Illinois Medical school won thirty-five of them. "And," added Dean Davis in recounting the riches, numbers, and triumphs of the college, "in all the state examinations throughout the Union for license to practice, the failures of our men were less than one per cent. There are not many schools in this country which have a rate so creditable as that."

The dean thought Chicago thoroughly justified in taking pride in such a school.

Gives State-Wide Service.

The feature that gives this college its unique place among local medical schools is its state-wide service to the profession and the people.

In the state of Illinois there are primarily two agencies which deal with the health of the people. They are the state department of public welfare and the University of Illinois through its colleges of medicine and dentistry and its school of pharmacy. For several years they worked independently, although the department needed the libraries, laboratories and men of the university's medical campus and the campus needed the department's hospitals for the sick poor of the state.

After seven years of struggle and delay a plan which visioned men in public life had pronounced statesmanlike, and which leaders in the medical profession agreed was scientific, began to function successfully, and now the buildings of the state's research hospital group and the buildings of the university's schools are rising together on the medical campus. The state department of public welfare builds the growing hospital group and pays for its upkeep; the university provides the staff. Thus the university not only helps relieve the state's charitable cases but also acquires abundant material for its work in teaching and research.

Points to Urgent Need.

On one urgent phase the vast possibilities of the coöperation between the state's chief welfare agency and the state's chief medical teaching agency, Dean Davis said:

"There are 20,000 persons in the state insane asylums of Illinois; there are 20,000 other insane persons being cared for at home and in private institutions in Illinois. They constitute the greatest welfare problem this commonwealth faces. What can be done? As to the 20,000 in state asylums, they are not receiving very good medical treatment. Everybody knows that. Now the point is that young doctors in the institutions should be able to come up to us for six weeks from time to time for special study.

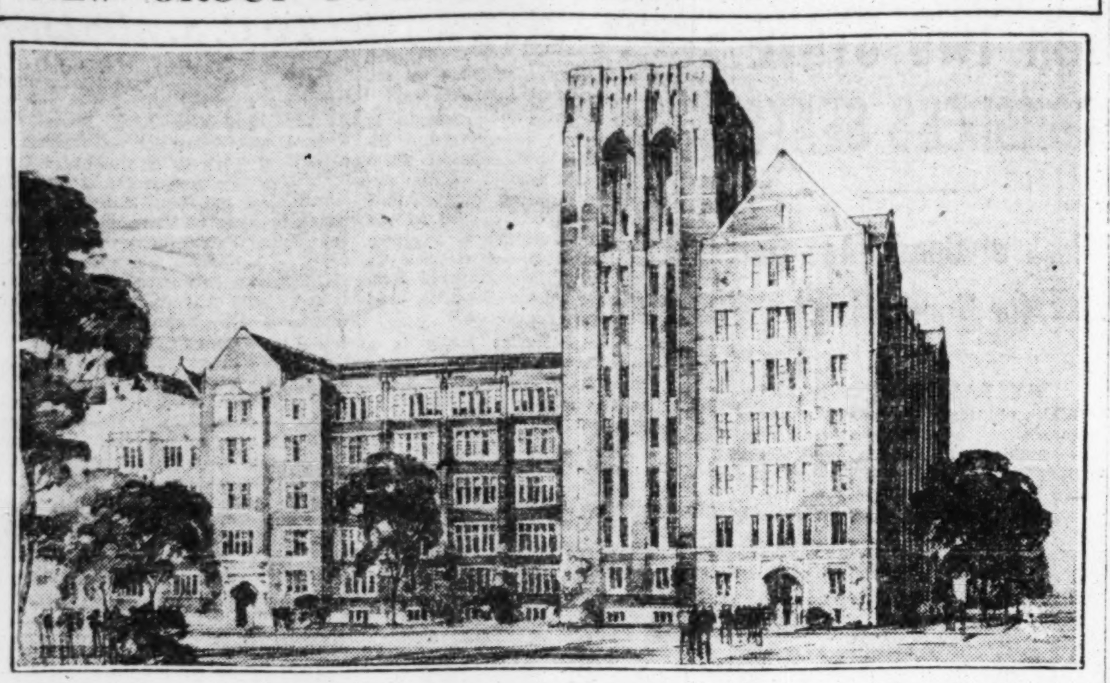
"There is the problem of the crippled child. We now have a crippled children's hospital on our Chicago campus.

"It is not our intention to interfere in any way with the work of the general practitioner. Nobody that's able to pay can get any treatment with us."

Another innovation which the University of Illinois is making in local medical history is the putting of architectural dignity and harmony into the congested, squalid, ramshackle area which has been called "the largest center of medical training in the world" and which is dominated by Cook county hospital.

"We have," says Dean Davis, "exercised the privilege of turning our back, as it were, upon our surroundings and making our own beauty within our domain. We dream of the time when a park shall be thrown around this neighborhood, and it shall be connected with the boulevard system. Now is the time to begin that project, for property here is still low."

NEW GROUP TO ADORN GREAT MEDIC CAMPUS



The University of Illinois will begin construction in the spring of a million and a half dollar group of buildings on its Chicago campus at Polk, Lincoln, and Wood streets. The new structures will house the laboratories of the university's colleges of medicine and dentistry and will mark a long step toward completion of the great quadrangle of buildings in the collegiate Gothic style of architecture which will ultimately fill the campus. This area, comprising ten acres, was once the Cubs' ball park. The architects of the laboratories to rise at the southeast corner of Polk and Lincoln streets are Messrs. Granger and Bollenbacher, with J. M. White, head of the university's school of architecture, as supervising architect. The new group will be dedicated in September, 1931.

PAIR NABBED BY U. S., ACCUSED OF RUNNING A "CHARITY RACKET"

Two alleged racketeers, whose activities have been under investigation by the Better Business bureau for several weeks, were arrested yesterday by Postoffice Inspector Vernon E. Alberti and arraigned before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker on charges of using the mails to defraud. They were held in bonds of $5,000 and the case was set for Feb. 13.

The two men, Jacob Karchmer, alias Edward S. Harris, 40 years old, and Morris Rubin, 38 years old, have been promoting dances, it is charged, using the names of alleged charitable organizations to solicit subscriptions by mail, and pocketing the profits. It is alleged they turned over to the organizations only $5,000 of $55,000 profits made last year.

Several weeks ago Karchmer and Rubin obtained an injunction restraining the state's attorney and police from interfering with their company, the Universal Sales and Publicity bureau. Gordon Smith, manager of the public service department of the Better Business bureau, began to investigate them. At their offices in the Cass hotel, 644 Cass street, it was learned that they had recently sold several thousand tickets for a dance to be given Feb. 24 by an organization known as the Associated Christian Volunteers.

MEDICAL GROUP DELAYS ACTION IN SCHMIDT CASE

Consideration of Dr. Louis E. Schmidt's appeal from his ouster by the Chicago Medical society was put over until next June by the judicial council of the American Medical association, which ended a two days' meeting here yesterday. Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the journal of the A. M. A., made the announcement, stating that the case will be taken up again when the organization holds its national convention in St. Louis in June.

It was understood that the judicial council deferred its action because of a friendly feeling for the Chicago surgeon, who has won many high honors. It was stated also that by June the Public Health institute—his indirect connection with which caused Dr. Schmidt's ouster—may have been transformed into an institution approved by the Chicago Medical society.

The Public Health institute had used advertising, but largely because of Dr. Schmidt's case, a group of physicians of the highest standing have agreed to become attached to its staff to extend its usefulness and to win for it the support of organized medicine. It was pointed out that the judicial council could not very well have acted unfavorably to Dr. Schmidt, for if it did it would put an implied stigma on this group also.

POLICE HUNTING VANDALS WHO LOOTED CHURCH

Police were searching yesterday for vandals who broke into St. Gabriel's Catholic church, 49th street and Lowe avenue, early yesterday morning, ransacking the altar and sacristy and escaping with gold altar pieces valued at more than $5,000. The burglary was discovered yesterday morning by the church janitor, who noticed that a window had been forced.

Father Rodgers, pastor of the church, told Stockyards police that a jeweled monstrance valued at $2,500, two gold chalices worth $800, and four ciborias valued at $800 were among the articles stolen. The altar crucifix was broken by the thieves, he said, and the alms boxes opened.

SCHOOLS, CIVIC GROUPS TO HONOR LINCOLN MEMORY

Club Women Will Stress Racial Amity.

The birthday of Abraham Lincoln will be celebrated by the nation Wednesday.

Birthday observances will be held in all Chicago schools and by many civic and patriotic organizations.

When the Chicago Rotary club meets at the Hotel Sherman Tuesday for lunch, a replica of Lincoln's famed log cabin home will house the speakers. Fred Landis of Logansport, Ind., a brother of Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, will speak as will Count Michael Karolyi, former president of Hungary.

Will Hear Mrs. Gridley.

On the same day the Central Lions club meeting at the Midland club for luncheon, will hear Mrs. Eleanor Gridley, 86 year old historian, president of the Abraham Lincoln Log Cabin association. She is author of "The Journey from the Log Cabin to the White House."

One of the largest celebrations will be held by the Chicago Woman's club, 72 East Eleventh street, on Wednesday, where an effort will be made, in cooperation with the Chicago public schools, to aid in the elimination of racial and sectarian prejudices. The meeting will be attended by club members and five student representatives from each senior and junior high school, and will be known as "Lincoln's Birthday Good Will Meeting."

Dr. Mathews to Speak.

Dr. Shailer Mathews, dean of the University of Chicago divinity school, will speak on Lincoln as the symbol of good will. Others on the program are Dr. Frederic Woodward, vice president of the University of Chicago; Rabbi Solomon Freehof, of K. A. M. temple; the Rev. Father Edward J. Mulaly of St. Mary's Paulist church; the Very Rev. Duncan H. Brown, dean of St. James Episcopal cathedral; William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools; Giuseppe Castruccio, Italian consul; and Dr. Alexander Jackson, chief of staff of Provident hospital.

Lincoln admirers will assemble at the Chicago Historical society where the Lincoln room will be open to the public. Today, at 3 p. m., at the society's headquarters, Dr. William H. Johnson, professor of education, Loyola university, will give an illustrated lecture of the life of Lincoln. On Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, Judge Henry Horner, who has one of the best collections of Lincolniana in Chicago, will speak on "Universality of Lincoln." Open house will be kept all day Wednesday by the society, where may be seen the bed in which Lincoln died, furniture from his home in Springfield, his hat, umbrella, coat, and other familiar objects.

[Athanas Photo.]

Mrs. Maria Coro-Milas Stratos Kokinatos, widow of an executed premier of Greece, was sued for divorce in the Superior court yesterday by her husband, Jason Kokinatos, New York and Chicago representative of the Bank of Athens, with offices in the First National Bank building. The bill, drawn by the law firm of Socrates & Davis, charges desertion.

Premier Stratos was executed on Nov. 28, 1922, with four other cabinet members and a general, following the disastrous campaign of the Greek army in Smyrna.

His widow escaped with her two children. She went on the concert stage, and sang in Rome, Paris, and London. She came to America on a tour in 1926 and sang in Chicago at Orchestra hall. Kokinatos met her during her recital here. They were married on June 10, 1926.

Kokinatos says that his wife was very proud of her name and the high standing of her family in Greece, so that she refused to take his name. She is alleged to have treated him as a person of inferior rank. They separated on Oct. 15, 1927. The divorce will not be contested, Attorney Benjamin B. David said.

OFFICIALISM IN AMERICA.

The surface of American life is beginning to be covered by a rash of petty tyrannies. Yet Americans are rather remarkable for good nature. The characteristic, in spite of the heedlessness of our manners and the bumptiousness of our self-confidence, is notable at home, and, to the discerning, abroad. It is the result of a very considerable worldly well being and of the wise adjustment of our laws and customs until recent time. Certainly it is a characteristic to be cherished and its deterioration viewed with concern. The worst blow struck at it is, of course, the effort to impose teetotalism upon the whole nation, regardless of the conscience, customs, or traditions of its varied communities. But there are other manifestations, and conspicuous among these is a general growth of arbitrary and oppressive officialism.

This growth is conspicuous and rapid enough to become before very long a political issue. The federal government bureaucracy, infected by the spirit of dry law enforcement, is the chief and most serious offender. The multiplication of government bureaus, each authorized to regulate some interest or activity of the citizen, in itself represents one of the gravest issues of American polity, but when there is added to its effect upon American initiative and private energy the influence upon our national life and character of official insolence and arbitrariness we have the evil presented in a form felt by all self-respecting citizens. Americans, even of this generation, which, preoccupied with its material prosperity, is so indifferent to the American traditions of individual liberty and self-respect, must and do resent this development, and we should be pessimistic indeed if we were not confident they will sooner or later make their resentment felt effectually.

There are, in fact, important signs of revolt. A recent article by Maj. Gen. Harbord, himself a soldier who can hardly be charged with indifference to the need of discipline and of obedience to legitimate regulation, is a case in point. Gen. Harbord views the situation broadly for its effect upon the American's attitude toward the national government.

"Any thoughtful American," he says, "whose memory runs back to the days when the civil war was no more distant than is now the world war must be conscious of a great change in the attitude of our citizens toward their government. There was in those days not only the outward form of respect in referring to government institutions, but the respect was based upon affection and a relationship between the government and the governed which was satisfactory to both."

Gen. Harbord discusses various explanations for this ominous change, but he concludes that the major cause is the creation of a government functionary class, which in some ways parallels the characteristics of the hereditary aristocratic class we got rid of on the threshold of our life as an independent nation.

Gen. Harbord lists about fifty-five bureaus in the executive departments and fifty-seven boards, commissions and bureaus listed as miscellaneous in the Official Register of the United States, ranging from the shipping board and the interstate commerce commission to the national screw thread commission. And there is a perpetual urge from organized minorities to increase these government functionaries. There are plausible arguments for the establishment of each and very little resistance on the general ground of national policy or common welfare. Under this process the area of free initiative and private liberty is being persistently invaded and reduced. At the same time the mere temper in which this complicated and ever spreading machinery of regulation is being applied becomes a matter of first rate moment, for it more and more affects the temper of American life and character.

Gen. Harbord analyzes the character of the typical federal official or bureaucrat. It is a character pretty generally found in all bureaucracies, but it is, or ought to be, especially obnoxious in a nation dedicated to individual liberty, a nation which conceives of the state and therefore its government as existing for the individual and not, as the communist does, the individual existing for the state. Gen. Harbord cites in support of his protest a number of recent typical instances of official bad manners and arbitrariness, which need not be retold here, since there are getting to be few Americans who have not experienced or known of such cases. The discourtesy at our ports is proverbial and nothing is so notorious as the disregard of citizens' rights and safety shown in dry law enforcement, to say nothing of the increasing lack of the common amenities of human intercourse exhibited by our multiplying official monitors. The net effect is a general reversal of the relations which ought to be maintained in a free government between the individual indued with a little brief authority and the freeman. The official is in political fact the servant of the people, not their master, and in dealing with the citizen the latter is entitled at least to the presumption of innocence and should not be treated as the official treats him upon the presumption of guilt.

This extraordinary perversion of American character and principle has come upon us gradually but swiftly, and the American characteristic of good nature, paradoxically, has made it possible. The original assertion of the American idea included the pursuit of happiness as not only an ideal of free government but an inalienable right of freemen. There will be little happiness in American life if the pest of offensive officialism and the multiplying regulations by government of private conduct and even private conscience are not checked. This generation of Americans exhibits a deplorable lack of respect for its heritage and a weak willingness to submit to infringements of rights. If it has lost faith in liberty, in the responsibility of the individual and in the principle of human progress and betterment through the freedom and dignity of the individual, it marks the greatest human failure in history.

THREE BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARIES.

This month Americans celebrate the birthday anniversaries of two men to whom they are attached by the most tenacious loyalty of affection and admiration. Each is regarded as the perfect pattern of wise and sacrificing devotion to country. Nothing in elapsed time has dimmed the importance of Washington, and with his name and with Lincoln's this, it is certain, will continue to be true. They have been selected for these supreme national honors because in their work is perceived the fact that to them their country was always the highest consideration. There was no other. Last month there was another birthday anniversary. If it had been remembered, it would have been with the greatest reprobation that ever has been attached to the name of an American. This has endured for over one hundred and fifty years because here again is a perfect pattern, but this time it is of betrayal.

Benedict Arnold's life is divided into two parts. One is of exemplary patriotism, literally that. The other is of historic treachery, complete and unmitigated, a betrayal of trust, friends, army comrades, and country. In his aspect as patriot Arnold was superb. He was the leader of exploits which deservedly made him famous. If his dark angel had not taken him aside he might now be as famous as he is infamous. He was the most intrepid, dashing, fearless general in the patriot army. He inspired victory, although he knew what the defeat of forlorn hopes could be.

He commanded the hardy band of less than 1,000 with which the conquest of Canada was undertaken in the dead of winter. He led Virginia and Pennsylvania riflemen and New England militia through the Maine and Quebec wilderness from Massachusetts to Quebec, up the Kennebec, through uncharted lands, over mountains, and down the Chaudiere, one of the most astonishing military marches of the country's history. The men were nearly starved when they emerged on the banks of the St. Lawrence. As a surprise their movement failed, but they attacked the citadel in a snowstorm in the night and were trapped between barricades in the narrow streets of the lower town. The attempt failed and Arnold was wounded, but the survivors with reinforcements besieged the garrison until the arrival of the British fleet in the spring.

In the ensuing invasion by the British along the Champlain waterway Arnold took to the water as a boat squadron commander—the gunboats could hardly be regarded as ships—and by fighting two desperate and hopeless actions off Valcour island, in which his flotilla was virtually destroyed, he so slowed up the invasion that when it arrived at Crown Point in the fall it was abandoned as being too late. It was not renewed until the following year, when Burgoyne led another formidable force down the waterway, to come to grief, defeat, and surrender at Saratoga.

Arnold may have been one of the chief factors in giving his country a year's time in which to prepare against this invasion. In the second campaign he was the outstanding figure. He dispersed the invasion by the way of the Mohawk valley, making it certain that St. Leger would not reach Burgoyne, and at Saratoga itself he compensated for the irresolution of Gates, in command, by his own personal initiative and courage. In the second battle, which forced the British to retreat and later to surrender, he broke from the arrest under which Gates had placed him—his insubordination had been indignant remonstrance—took command of regiment after regiment and with his magnetic bravery made the British check signal and conclusive. He was again wounded. He was also renowned. He was admired and trusted by Washington. It was because of this that he was given command of the key position of West Point in the New York highlands, at his request, and it was there that he endeavored to sell his country. The fall was abrupt, from great heights to the greatest depths. His motives were ignoble without a thing in mitigation. His pride was hurt. He was in need of money. He betrayed the commander who had trusted him, the soldiers with whom he had fought, and the country to which he had sworn allegiance and which he had served.

He had tried to sell his country for considerations which had mastered him, preferment with the enemy, generalship in their forces, and money from their war chest. His name is remembered only as a symbol of the greatest dishonor.

WHAT GOLF CAN MAKE MEN DO.

[Rock Island (Ill.) Argus.]

Some golfers take their favorite sport entirely too seriously.

A Britisher by the name of Halliburton died in London recently and when his will was read it was found he had provided that his body be cremated and his ashes scattered about under a beech tree located on the golf course, the tree being particularly designated.

Always under that tree Mr. Halliburton encountered something that prevented him from achieving some high point in golf. Shooting for the 18th hole his ball landed against the beech tree. His foil in life, the beech tree area became his grave in death as the members of his golf club carried out the wishes of this eccentric, and, assembling under the beech tree, scattered his ashes hither and yon. The tree was even named after Halliburton.

Just what Halliburton expected to accomplish by means of his unusual will is unknown. Maybe he thought the peeve he cherished against the offending beech tree was of such a virulent character that his ashes would be impregnated with it and take on such poisonous qualities that the tree would wither up and die.

There is no question about it—some golfers are queer. If they stay in the game long enough anything is liable to happen.

The following Bible reading begins with the 41st verse of I. Kings, 18th chapter. The American standard version is used. The only change is in paragraph form and punctuation method.

THE STILL, SMALL VOICE

And Elijah said unto Ahab, "Get thee up, eat and drink; for there is the sound of abundance of rain." So Ahab went up to eat and to drink. And Elijah went up to the top of Carmel; and he bowed himself down upon the earth, and put his face between his knees. And he said to his servant, "Go up now, look toward the sea." And he went up, and looked, and said, "There is nothing." And he said, "Go again seven times." And it came to pass at the seventh time, that he said, "Behold, there ariseth a cloud out of the sea, as small as a man's hand." And he said, "Go up, say unto Ahab, 'Make ready thy chariot, and get thee down, that the rain stop thee not.'" And it came to pass in a little while, that the heavens grew black with clouds and wind, and there was a great rain. And Ahab rode, and went to Jezreel; and the hand of the Lord was on Elijah; and he girded up his loins, and ran before Ahab up to the entrance of Jezreel.

And Ahab told Jezebel all that Elijah had done, and withal how he had slain all the prophets with the sword. Then Jezebel sent a messenger unto Elijah, saying, "So let the gods do to me, and more also, if I make not thy life as the life of one of them by tomorrow about this time." And when he saw that, he arose, and went for his life, and came to Beer-sheba, which belongeth to Judah, and left his servant there. But he himself went a day's journey into the wilderness, and came and sat down under a juniper tree; and he requested for himself that he might die, and said, "It is enough; now, O Lord, take away my life; for I am not better than my fathers." And he lay down and slept under a juniper tree; and, behold, an angel touched him, and said unto him, "Arise and eat." And he looked, and, behold, there was at his head a cake baken on the coals, and a cruse of water. And he did eat and drink, and laid him down again. And the angel of the Lord came again the second time, and touched him, and said, "Arise and eat, because the journey is too great for thee." And he arose, and did eat and drink, and went in the strength of that food forty days and forty nights unto Horeb the mount of God.

And he came thither unto a cave, and lodged there; and, behold, the word of the Lord came to him, and he said unto him, "What doest thou here, Elijah?" And he said, "I have been very jealous for the Lord, the God of hosts; for the children of Israel have foresaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars, and slain thy prophets with the sword; and I, even I only, am left; and they seek my life, to take it away." And he said, "Go forth, and stand upon the mount before the Lord." And, behold the Lord passed by, and a great and strong wind rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks before the Lord; but the Lord was not in the wind; and after the wind an earthquake; but the Lord was not in the earthquake; and after the earthquake a fire; but the Lord was not in the fire; and after the fire a still small voice.

And it was so, when Elijah heard it, that he wrapped his face in his mantle, and went out, and stood in the entrance of the cave. And, behold, there came a voice unto him, and said, "What doest thou here, Elijah?" And he said, "I have been very jealous for the Lord, the God of hosts; for the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars, and splain thy prophets with the sword; and I, even I only, am left; and they seek my life, to take it away."

And the Lord said unto him, "Go, return on the way to the wilderness of Damascus; and when thou comest, thou shalt anoint Hazael to be king over Syria; and Jehu the son of Nimshi shalt thou anoint to be king over Israel; and Elisha the son of Shaphat of Abel-meholah shalt thou anoint to be prophet in thy room. And it shall come to pass, that him that escapeth from the sword of Hazael shall Jehu slay; and him that escapeth from the sword of Jehu shall Elisha slay. Yet will I leave me seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him.

So he departed thence, and found Elisha the son of Shaphat, who was plowing, with twelve yoke of oxen before him, and he with the twelfth; and Elijah passed over unto him, and cast his mantle upon him. And he left the oxen, and ran after Elijah, and said, "Let me, I pray thee, kiss my father and my mother, and then I will follow thee." And he said unto him, "Go back again; for what have I done to thee?" And he returned from following him, and took the yoke of oxen, and slew them, and boiled their flesh with the instruments of the oxen, and gave unto the people, and they did eat. Then he arose, and went after Elijah, and ministered unto him.

And Ben-hadad the king of Syria gathered all his host together; and there were thirty and two kings with him, and horses and chariots; and he went up and besieged Samaria, and fought against it. And he sent messengers to Ahab king of Israel, into the city, and said unto him "Thus saith Ben-hadad, Thy silver and thy gold is mine; thy wives also and thy children, even the goodliest, are mine." And the king of Israel answered and said, "It is according to thy saying, my lord, O king; I am thine, and all that I have." And the messengers came again, and said, "Thus speaketh Ben-hadad, saying, I sent indeed unto thee, saying, Thou shalt deliver me thy silver, and thy gold, and thy wives and thy children; but I will send my servants unto thee tomorrow about this time, and they shall search thy house, and the houses of thy servants; and it shall be, that whatsoever is pleasant in thine eyes, they shall put it in their hand, and take it away."

Then the king of Israel called all the elders of the land, and said, "Mark, I pray you, and see how this man seeketh mischief; for he sent unto me for my wives, and for my children, and for my silver, and for my gold; and I denied him not."

THE WORLD IS TOO MUCH WITH US.

The world is too much with us; late and soon,
Getting and spending, we lay waste our powers:
Little we see in nature that is ours;
We have given our hearts away, a sordid boon!
This sea that bares her bosom to the moon;
The winds that will be howling at all hours,
And are upgathered now like sleeping flowers;
For this, for everything, we are out of tune;
It moves us not.—Great God! I'd rather be
A pagan suckled in a creed outworn;
So might I, standing on this pleasant lea,
Have glimpses that would make me less forlorn;
Have sight of Proteus, rising from the sea;
Or hear old Triton blow his wreathed horn.

GUARDING THE VITAMINS.

J. S. BAINBRIDGE gives the following information on the amount of acid or alkali in the ash of different foods compared with wheat flour at, acid 100:

Alkali: Olives, 250; spinach, 220; raisins, 175; dates, 90; parsnips, 90; beets, 80; lemons, lettuce, almonds, apricots, carrots, cauliflower, celery, potatoes, and turnips, 75; string beans, cabbage, rhubarb, oranges, 60; bananas, pears, 50; apples, radishes, prunes, 40; grapes, 30; onions, fresh peas, 10 to 25. Milk is given as about 15.

Acid: Chicken, 110; veal, beef, oatmeal, 100; pork, fish, 90; eggs, 80; rice, 70.

In certain conditions an alkaline ash diet is best. In others, one that makes acid is more suitable.

The minerals which are most liable to be deficient in diets are calcium, iron, and phosphorus. The daily requirement of calcium, or lime, is about 24 grams. It is held that growing children are especially liable to need more calcium than the daily diet supplies. This is the basis for the recommendation that children should drink more milk.

In certain sections the diet is not rich enough in iodine. There are scientists who think we sometimes need more copper than our diet contains.

It is in the winter season that we should give special attention to vitamins, since nature provides them lavishly at other seasons. One of the essential vitamins, the supply of which tends to run low in winter, is that which is commonly known as D. It is especially needed by growing children to protect them against rickets. The only need adults have for it is to build up their resistance to disease. The market is now supplied with radiated foods rich in this principle. It is also present in cod liver oil and in milk fats, and some other food fats.

To get through the winter men, women, and children need foods which are rich in the antiscorbutic vitamin C. Among such foods are: Oranges, lemons, bananas, and tomatoes.

Fresh vegetables generally are rich in antiscorbutic principle. Improvements in refrigeration and transportation have decreased the danger of scurvy. It is fair to say that railroads, steamships, and cold storage have done more than health departments and doctors to rid society of scurvy. While our people do not have developed beriberi, they do suffer many aches and pains, and bowel disturbances which are minor results of the same cause. The vitamin which protects against these is B. It is found in vegetables, fruits, and whole cereals.

To protect against pellagra we need the vitamins found in yeast, lean meats, salmon, and certain vegetables.

The fat soluble principle which is of most service in promoting growth is that found in milk, cheese, milk fats, and in most oils. The principle which promotes child bearing and the health and vigor of young babies is found in sprouting grain, in vegetables, and in milk.

FORGET IT AND DON'T FRET.

E. B. writes: I have a red rim around the top of each finger under the nail. Some one said this is a sign of consumption. I am well but worried.

REPLY.

There is nothing to this. Dismiss it from your mind.

SLEEP PRODUCING DRUGS.

E. B. C. writes: I suffer from insomnia and have been advised to use amytal tablets. Is it a habit forming drug? Is it injurious and, if so, in what way does it affect the system? I am very nervous. What would you suggest for one who cannot sleep?

REPLY.

Do not take any kind of sleep producing medicine unless you are under close observation by a physician, and even then consider carefully.

Nervousness is a bad habit and the only satisfactory cure is habit training. This is true of the insomnia due to nervousness.

HABIT OF SEVEN WEEK OLD.

Mrs. J. A. N. writes: My son is seven weeks old. Will you kindly print in your column the daily routine and habits of an infant of that age? I have been worried as to the amount of sleep, food, fresh air, etc., that he should have.

REPLY.

A proper answer to your question would require more space than is available. I suggest you get a book on infant care. Your city health department supplies one free on request. So does your state health department.

The children's bureau, U. S. department of labor, Washington, D. C., has one which has just been revised. They give more than one-half million copies away yearly. There are many good books for mothers on sale in all bookstores selling medical books.

INHERITANCE TAX.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Where property is held by husband and wife in joint tenancy must the survivor, upon death of the other, pay any inheritance tax, as on stocks and bonds? 2. Where income tax reports have been made sometimes separately, sometimes jointly, what attitude can the survivor expect from the government regarding inheritance tax? We are told that the government will assume all bonds belonged to the deceased and the survivor will be expected to pay inheritance tax on the full amount. 3. Will you kindly give us your opinion?

H. S.

1. Yes. 2. See 1. 3. The presumption as to who owned the property would depend upon the facts bearing upon this question.

The property would go to the husband under present law, but probate proceedings would be necessary in order to make the title merchantable.

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

HEADQUARTERS, Army of the Potomac—Quite a severe battle took place this afternoon between the 5th corps and the rebels on the Dabney's Mill road, west of Hatcher's Run, the result of which was not favorable to the Union troops, as far as the position is concerned, but the enemy paid dearly for the ground he gained. The result of the engagement of yesterday appeared in our advanced lines beyond Hatcher's Run, the capture of about 200 prisoners, a train of wagons and mules and considerable loss to the rebels in killed and wounded. Gen. Meade was on the Dabney's Mill road battlefield all day, but was not wounded as reported.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—A special dispatch to the Evening Telegraph from Washington says: "Favorable news from the Army of the Potomac is here."

WASHINGTON.—The electoral vote for President and Vice President was counted by a joint committee of the senate and house which met in joint session. The Vice President announced that Abraham Lincoln received 233 votes for President to 21 for George B. McClellan. For Vice President, the vote was: Andrew Johnson, 212, and George H. Pendleton, 21.

He made his first speech in a national campaign for Henry Clay in 1832, and had voted for every Whig and Republican nominee since that year. He was the last surviving member of the 27th congress and had been a delegate to more national conventions than any man living. He was personally acquainted with every President except Washington, Jefferson and the elder Adams.

WASHINGTON.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, announced his opposition to the movement for the organization of a labor party. He denounced the present congress as antagonistic to labor, but declared the remedy was not a labor party but a vigorous nonpartisan campaign to elect friendly and defeat unfriendly candidates for the next congress.

THE CHICAGO TUNNEL.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—THE TRIBUNE is always foremost in suggesting improvements, particularly in the transportation way, for Chicago and, in view of the present controversy regarding the Chicago tunnel, I am sending you articles from Modern Transport, London, describing the proposed London Underground-Goods railway.

Now that the matter of the Chicago tunnel has been brought to the public's attention would it not be well for the city to unite with the present lessees for the further development, thus still further relieving the congestion on Chicago streets?

The proposed London tunnel is to have a length of 75 miles of standard gauge, which is the same as in this country—namely: 4 feet 8½ inches—with tunnels 16 feet in internal diameter.

The benefit to the merchants is also outlined in that it states that the underground railway would release at the large stores a considerable portion, in some cases as much as 30 feet, of the frontage and floor space now used for receiving and dispatching goods.

The total cost of the tunnel, materials, and equipment is estimated to be 200 million dollars. T. C. POWELL,
President C. & E. I. Railway

SAID DANIEL WEBSTER TO SENATOR HAYNE.

Chicago, Jan. 30.—One hundred years ago, on Jan. 27, Daniel Webster delivered a speech in the senate replying to Senator Hayne of South Carolina, who had argued that states had the right to pass on the constitutionality of federal laws. This address of Daniel Webster was one of the greatest ever delivered in the United States senate, and as you have on various occasions in recent years had articles referring to the constitution, permit me to suggest that nothing would be more interesting to your readers than to reproduce in full the speeches of both Senator Hayne and Daniel Webster. A. R. JONES.

ONLY A COMMISSION.

Chicago, Jan. 31.—Your editorial "Generals as Factory Managers" does an injustice to the American Legion and indicates that the writer has not been fully informed in regard to the proposed bill.

I suggest that you investigate this matter further and you will find that the bill in question is to have President Hoover appoint a commission to investigate the feasibility of drafting business as well as soldiers in case of another world war. This commission is to be made up of outstanding parties who will be vitally interested in this question, and the commission is to report its findings in the hope that a workable plan may be submitted to some future congress.

The pending bill does not in any way conscript business at the present time, but is only to appoint a commission to investigate the possibilities.

W. A. CONNER.

THE SAILOR AND THE BOTTLE.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—According to the secretary of war a soldier or sailor caught taking a drink will henceforth be expelled from service.

Having made several trips to Panama and all the places where we have gun practice, I would say, as another ex-soldier said, that, under this rule, we would not have enough men left to bring the dingy back.

At each sham battle held in Panama all the gobs are given shore leave; and when I was there on a couple of occasions there were about 14,000 men there and the proper outfit would have been rubber boots.

At Colon the only thing that separates wet from dry is a railroad track and the trains do not run very often. Why make liars and hypocrites out of these boys, for you know it is unbecoming for a red blooded American to be told what and what not to do?

That is the trouble with the younger generation. They all know their fathers and mothers had a fine time when they were young and now comes a law that says you shall not, and the young American says to himself that if it was so bad that you had to draft such a law, let's try it, and they do.

When I was a kid if we saw a fellow who was drunk at a party we shunned him. Now they follow him to see where he gets it.

Why does our government have target practice off Guatemala? That is a wet place. On the home cruise why do they pull in at Jamaica on a Saturday and remain all Sunday? That place is wet. And why is so much champagne served at the Panama hotels on the American side to the officers and the poor fish of a gob who does all the dirty work not allowed his beer?

Our government says "See the World." But how much better the world looks when you are happy! Give the gobs all the beer they want. They deserve it. You would never think of feeding a dog candy and cream puffs to watch your home. J. M. NICHOLSON.

BETTER ENGLISH CRUSADE.

Chicago, Jan. 31.—May I express my appreciation for your stimulating editorial, "Our Neglect of Speech."

For some time I have intended to comment in my radio talk, "Your English," on McCutcheon's significant cartoon, "The Ballad of Beautiful Words," which also appeared in your paper some time ago.

It is encouraging to find one of our representative newspapers thus interesting itself in the cause of better English and a more refined use of the mother tongue. The inspiration of your example arouses a feeling of genuine satisfaction in those who are seriously trying to improve the standards of American speech. J. MANLY PHELPS,

SOVIETS STARVE 3,000,000 JEWS DESTROY FARMS

Stalin Defeats Plans of American Hebrew Body.

BY DONALD DAY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, Feb. 8.—Three million Jews, inhabitants of cities and towns of White Russia and the Ukraine, who for centuries have existed as traders and artisans, are threatened with starvation through Joseph Stalin's policy to utterly destroy private trade and individual farming in Russia. The peasants, who are being grouped in communal farms by the communists, are forbidden to purchase supplies from private merchants.

Through the expansion of coöperative stores the communists plan to eliminate the small Jewish trader who formerly acted as a middleman between the individual farms and government trading establishments.

Plan Fresh Jewish Colonies.

The problem of disposing of tens of thousands of Jewish families has been debated for months by the White Russian and Ukranian soviets. The chairman of the Jewish committee of the White Russian soviet, Osherovitch, announced that a wholesale transfer of Jews to communal farms must be arranged by the government. Because of the existing land hunger in White Russia, Osherovitch suggests the formation of new Jewish colonies in Crimea, northern Ural, and in Siberia.

Until now the entire Jewish population of Russia, which amounts to more than 4,000,000, has been considered a declassed element by the soviet government. With the exception of a small percentage who are members of the communist party or trade unions, the Jews in Russia are deprived of voting rights and are not permitted to send their children to the schools or to purchase goods at the government stores and are hounded with the same severity as the government persecutes declassed Russians.

Give Rights to Certain Jews.

The all Russian central executive committee held a special meeting in Moscow and decided to grant citizen rights to the Jewish peddlers and street merchants, to former Red army men, and also to members of families the heads of which were killed in pogroms. These families will be permitted to join communal farms and receive government assistance.

The Stalin program threatens the plan of the American Jewish Philanthropic society, Agrojoint, which last year collected $25,000,000 in America to assist in settling Jews on farms in the Kherson and Crimea districts. The Agrojoint program consisted of forming Jewish villages of separate farms with trained agriculturists to assist the settlers. Each village had a synagogue and a rabbi, and Jewish life was preserved. However, the newspaper Emes, a Jewish communist paper, sent a special brigade of communists into the colonies to convert them into communal farms under atheistic management.

Soviets Withdraw Support.

The soviet government also withdrew its financial support from these colonies and the 5,000,000 rubles [approximately $2,500,000] appropriated for Jewish colonization during the coming year will be used for the Crimean colonies and those in Siberia. A small amount was designated to assist other colonies in Daghistan and Uzbekistan. The appropriation was decreased by 2,000,000 rubles [about $1,000,000] against that of last year.

The communist program includes the complete destruction of the Jewish religion in Russia and the assimilation of the Jews into the Russian proletariat.

Robber Fires to Prevent Pursuit; Police Nab Him

Fleeing with $50 loot from the meat market of Michael Calure, 6203 Montrose avenue, last night, a robber fired several shots to discourage pursuit. The fusillade was heard by Sergt. Lawrence Cooney and his detective bureau squad, who captured and disarmed the robber. At Irving Park police station he identified himself as Abe Rudsky, 40 years old, 1900 Dayton street.

PAIR ACQUITTED OF MURDER FOR SLAYING OF DRY

Search Warrant Held to Be Defective.

Stillwater, Okla., Feb. 8.—(AP)—John Young and his wife, La Tosca, Negroes, were acquitted by a District court jury here today of a murder charge growing out of the death two months ago of C. P. Butler, federal prohibition enforcement officer, who was killed when he attempted to serve a warrant on the Negroes at Cushing, Okla.

The jury had deliberated since 9 o'clock Wednesday night. It upheld the contention of defense counsel that the Negroes shot in self-defense when Butler and George S. Danhour, another federal enforcement officer, drew their guns.

The shooting occurred at the Young home in Cushing Dec. 10. Danhour was wounded, but recovered. He appeared as a state witness against the Negroes.

Search Warrant Invalid.

The state had asked the death penalty.

The acquittal was attributed by County Attorney Ernest F. Jenkins to the fact that the federal search warrant used by the agents in entering the home was held invalid because its description of the location of the Young home erred in distance by one-half mile, and to the presentation of the defense contention that the state did not prove the presence of whisky in the house.

Shortly before returning their verdict the jurors asked District Judge C. C. Smith, who tried the case, his opinion as to the legality of the federal search warrant. The court held that it was defective.

Texas Woman Acquitted.

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 8.—(AP)—Mrs. Altha Harbaugh was acquitted by a jury in District court today of a charge of murder in connection with the fatal shooting of Capt. Charles Stevens, prohibition agent, last September.

Mrs. Harbaugh, with eight others, was indicted following the ambush killing of Capt. Stevens, who, with two other prohibition officers, was returning from a raid in Atascosa county. The state contended the Harbaugh woman acted as a decoy in stopping the prohibition officers.

Joe Hobrecht, under indictment on the same charge, will go to trial today. Lynn Stephens, the woman's brother, alleged to be head of the rum ring responsible for Stevens' killing, is a fugitive in Mexico.

TWO BLASTS JAR NEAR NORTH SIDE; 4 WORKERS HURT

Explosions in Caissons of New "U" Building.

Four men were burned, one of them seriously, yesterday by two explosions in a 120 foot caisson at the new Y. M. C. A. building under construction at Chicago avenue and Dearborn street. The explosions, apparently caused by accumulated gas, shook the entire near north side and shattered windows in a score of nearby buildings.

The first blast occurred shortly after noon, while Barney Gallagher, 30 years old, 545 North Wells street, a laborer for Jacobson Brothers, contractors on the building, was at the bottom of the caisson. The gas, believed to have been ignited by a spark caused by a short circuit in an electric wire, exploded with terrific force, burning Gallagher seriously on the head, hands, and body.

The flames shot upward to the top of the caisson, 120 feet above where Gallagher was working, and knocked down Patrick Costello, 52 years old, 7000 South Peoria street, and Thomas Healy, 27 years old, 6505 South Western avenue, who were pulling the buckets up from the bottom of the hole. Both men were burned on the face and the hands. Fireman Leo McCurrie and William Segert went to the bottom of the caisson to remove Gallagher, who was unconscious, and both were partly overcome by gas, being rescued by Philip Kelley, a third member of squad No. 1.

A half hour later, the second explosion occurred while John McDonald, 26 years old, 8009 South Wood street, a foreman for the contracting company, was pulling the electric wires from the caisson. The blast knocked McDonald ten feet from the mouth of the hole and burned his face and one hand. His condition is not serious.

Boston Woman Missionary, in Turkey Since 1899, Dies

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 8.—Miss Mary E. Kinney of Boston, one of the pioneer American missionaries to Turkey, died here today following an operation. Miss Kinney came to Turkey in 1899 as principal of a girls' school at Scutari.

THIS NEW YORKER LEARNS CHICAGO HAIN'T HICKTOWN

Whether the new code of tonsorial ethics recently promulgated by the Master Barbers of America confers upon patrons the right to remove their shoes in barber shops was a question which the courts were called upon yesterday to decide. Judge Alfred O. Erickson in the Chicago avenue court ruled that the removal of shoes was an offense worth a $1 fine, which he imposed upon Timothy C. McCarthy, 62 years old, retired caterer of New York.

Judge Erickson expressed the opinion that it was bad form for McCarthy to take off his shoes in Moler's barber shop at 512 North State street, even though nails in the soles were causing him excruciating pain. But John Boas, retired merchant of 500 North Franklin street, and a friend of McCarthy, declared that "this is no way for the city of Chicago to treat an out of town visitor" and that he will appeal the case to the Supreme court if necessary.

McCarthy charged that Anton Olivo, 643 Center street, manager of the barber shop, had ejected him after he removed his shoes, and said he would charge Olivo with assault and battery.

Funerals at "Hursen's" Instead of at Home

A great many families in Chicago have preferred to have funerals conducted at one of "Hursen's" palatial establishments instead of at home. There are many reasons for this:

No matter how large or how small a funeral may be, there is available an exclusive chapel, appointed in the utmost elegance, quietness and comfort.

This eliminates crowding and confusion. It assures complete seclusion. There are also many spacious rooms set apart for the private and exclusive use of families. These have the rich furnishings, the consoling comforts and the dignified environment of "home" itself.

Yet, there is no extra charge for these unusual facilities, which are found nowhere else in America in an establishment of this nature.

Such broadness of service, such extraordinary elegance, all at lower cost than has ever been available anywhere else—have established the fame of Hursen all over America. He is today the acknowledged authority on the technique of funeral direction.

It does not matter whether the funeral be large or small, no charge whatever is made for the use of any of the Hursen Organ-Chapels, reputed to be among the most beautiful in America. What is more, the charges made for Hursen funerals are but a fraction of those made elsewhere, without exception.

Call Hursen, of course!

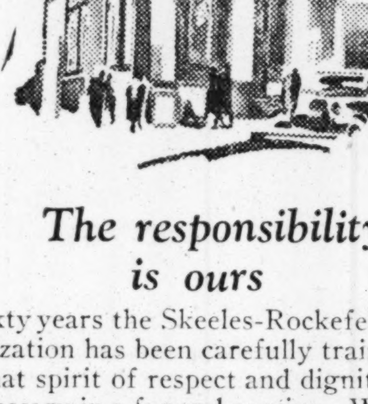
SKEELES-ROCKEFELLER



The responsibility is ours

For sixty years the Skeeles-Rockefeller funeral organization has been carefully trained to provide that spirit of respect and dignity which is so necessary in a funeral service. We consider it our most important responsibility—and accept it as a privilege.

Our service fills every need and every desire—richness, not too apparent—generous expression without lavish display . . . simplicity, yet beauty. Such service reflects close adherence to the early traditions and policies laid down and employed by the founders of this business.

And now combined with our years of dependability and trustworthiness is our all-inclusive, one moderate charge plan. The price plainly marked on the casket is the final price of the funeral. It covers every item, including the use of our organ-equipped chapels.

Call us at any hour. North, South—wherever you live—we're ready to serve.

Complete Funerals as Low as $125

Every item in a Skeeles-Rockefeller funeral is included in one moderate charge. Two chapels, strategically located on the North and South Sides, are easily accessible from any part of the city—conveniently reached by elevated, surface lines or bus. Wherever you live our service is available.

CHINA APPOINTS NEW RAIL CHIEF FOR RUSS PARLEY

Nanking Fires Two for Exceeding Orders.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Feb. 8.—The national government today announced its intentions of assuming full responsibility for the settlement of the Chinese Eastern railway issue and appointed Mo Te-hui, Chinese president of the railway, as a delegate to Moscow, "for the exclusive purpose of effecting a readjustment of the Chinese Eastern railway."

The Chinese government then declared that "should the soviet government deem it necessary to negotiate with the Chinese government respecting questions of general character, relating to trade and commerce as well as other problems and to that end they appoint a delegate to proceed to Nanking, then the national government will be prepared to enter negotiations with the said delegate."

Find Envoy Exceeded Orders.

In reference to the Harbarovsk protocol which was signed by the Manchurian delegate, Tsai-Yu-shen, the national government said that following an inspection of the protocol, the government had found that Tsai-Yu-shen had "exceeded instructions and hence the Chinese government reserves the right in accordance with international usage not to ratify portions of the protocol, which were outside of Tsai's instructions."

In reference to matters exclusively pertaining to the Chinese Eastern railway, the government said that "so far as issues arising from the railway question, all arrangements contained in the minutes of the Harbarovsk agreement had been carried out."

The official Kou Min News agency tonight announced the dismissal of two high officials concerned in the Chinese-soviet negotiations and a reprimand appropriate for their punishment.

Those dismissed were Chow Lung-Kwang, director of department of Asiatic affairs, and Chu Zao-Lang, Chinese minister to Finland.

WIVES OF FOREIGN CONSULS ENTERTAIN AT DANCE

PARIS BATTLE OF SKIRTS ENDS BY BANISHING KNEES

New Season Silhouette to Give Short Waist.

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 8.—The battle between long and short skirts seems to have ended in a compromise—that is, the dresses will not be extreme. But, now that dress hems have started falling, it is thought next season will see them even lower.

But of far more importance to the great "couturiers" or dressmakers is the sad realization that business in general this season is bad, and American business in particular is very very bad. Most of the Parisian opening fashion shows are now over and the majority of American buyers have already forsaken the Rue de la Paix for a final little fling in Montmartre and Montparnasse before returning to dry America.

Slam U. S. Customs.

They did not spend so much money here this year and the Paris dressmakers feel it. The latter attribute the poor American business to the fact that the hundreds of American women who came annually to buy their clothes, and usually took them back to the United States paying little or no duty, now find the New York customs men so hard boiled and so far seeing that they have to pay full duty on every single robe. And this, combined with the stock market crash, cut largely into the anticipated profits of the French moguls of dress.

Yardstick of Skirts.

"Paris dressmakers demonstrate absolute unity of fashion about which there is nothing mysterious," said a spokesman of one of the leading fashion houses today. "Daytime skirts are moderately long in all houses, that is, about 15 inches from the ground. Formal afternoon skirts are a little longer than this—about ten to twelve inches from the ground—and evening dresses just touch the instep without trailing. There are a few trains, but not many."

"Waist lines generally are placed normally or slightly lower than usual," he added, "as the whole idea of this year's silhouette is to make the proportion of the skirt considerably greater than that of the waist."

Red Is Year's Color.

PARIS, Feb. 8.—[U. P.]—The year 1930 will go down in history as the year of frills and flounces. They are everywhere from Rue de la Paix, where dresses cost $1,000 and up, to the attic sweatshops of the Bourse quarter. But there are many types; for a frill can have as much individuality as a nose.

Long evening gloves have come back with the "mode à la grande dame." And after an era of visible arms, elbow and three-quarter sleeves have returned.

There is much red, red and white, black and white, gray, and all pastel colors, but this is distinctly a red year for those whose complexions allow it. Others will find much from which to choose in mauve.

Purple, scarlet, and chocolate brown figure prominently in the tweeds, which are everywhere this year. Tweed tailleurs look smartest with creamy crêpe de chine shirtwaists.

Belts are used to a considerable extent, most of them wide.

Capes Stage Comeback.

Coats are, for the most part, straight in line, but capes are the most important features in wraps. Capes can hang to any length, straight or diagonal, and one successful coat has two capes in tiers. And for evening wear are printed chiffons, taffetas, and satins which hark back to grandmother's day.

The Most Beautiful SEED CATALOG

VAUGHAN'S Gardening Illustrated, 1930, is a seed catalog unlike others—a magazine of gardening information containing pictures and descriptions of everything a gardener needs or desires. The most complete flower seed list offered in the United States is illustrated with

165 Flowers in Full Color

Table quality vegetables, which will give the home gardener food such as cannot be bought in the markets, excelling in flavor, tenderness and vitamin content, are described and cultural directions given fully. The calory value of all vegetables, together with their mineral and vitamin contents, are stated in detail. Send 10 cents for a packet of our 1930 special, Chinese for-get-me-not (cynoglossom amabile), together with copy of Vaughan's Gardening Illustrated for 1930; or catalog will be sent alone, FREE. MADRID STUDENTS RUN WILD; YELL 'DOWN WITH KING'

Old Dictator's Friends Stir Up Labor Riots.

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, Spain, Feb. 8.—For the first time since the collapse of Primo de Rivera's dictatorship, something like disorder took place in the streets of this city today.

Students hailing the return of their exiled professors, and labor, presumably protesting against unemployment, gave the police something to do for a few troubled hours. Since the night Gen. de Rivera fell and the students took over the streets of the city for a republican demonstration, the police have had no worries here or elsewhere in Spain.

Today groups of 200 and 300 laborers invaded the streets of Calle de Hortelsa and Plaza de Santa Domingo and were dispersed only after the police had done considerable sweating.

Shout "Down with King."

At the university, the return of professors who had lost their chairs because of their hostilities to the dictator was made the occasion for a wild demonstration, during the course of which a tablet erected in honor of the retired dictator was torn down and smashed. Cries of "Long live the republic," and "Down with monarchy," were heard. It is estimated that fully 80 per cent of the students in Spain earnestly desire to see the last of the Bourbons.

The return tomorrow of Prof. Miguel de Unanumo, exiled philosopher and rector of Salamanca university, is expected to give rise to more demonstrations of a republican character.

Next week Gen. Damaso Berenguer has promised to reopen the Ateneo club, the center of liberal, intellectual, and scientific life of Spain, of which Dr. Gregorio, one time physician to King Alfonso and now an eager republican, is president. Prof. Unanumo and others will speak. It is planned to turn the club into a sort of an unofficial parliament, where anti-dynastic sentiment will be crystalized during the period of transition.

Form New Parties.

All the old parties having been broken down during the six years of the dictatorship, as well as the conditions that made them possible, new ones will have to be formed. In a country like Spain, where public opinion is more than lethargic, this will take time, and so Gen. Berenguer's transition distatorship is assured of a breathing spell. Sanchez Guerra, highly respected Conservative chieftain, is working to get together a group of political figures of liberal republican persuasion, which will be groomed for the coming elections.

Some see in today's labor demonstration the hand of Gen. de Rivera's crowd, who are doing their utmost to convince the country that strong arm methods are still necessary. There are no more reasons for labor demonstrations now than at any time in recent years, as there is no serious unemployment problem. Gen. de Rivera himself has been gagged, as he is still in the army, but his friends are active everywhere and are being closely watched by the new government.

Voliva Tries to Sell 1,500 Acres of Church's Land

Advertisements in trade journals revealed yesterday that Wilbur Glenn Voliva, overseer of Zion, is trying to dispose of 1,500 acres of land owned by the Apostolic church. Rumors that Voliva was trying to sell the land because the church needs funds were denied by Ralph Phil, a leader in the church. He said the acreage is largely farm land on the outskirts of the city and is of no use to the church.

U. S. NAVY SEEKS FASTER PLANES OF COMBAT TYPE

Appropriation Is Allotted for Experiments.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—An intensive program aimed at increasing materially the speeds of military planes has been inaugurated by the navy department, it was learned here today.

The Curtiss-Wright corporation has been commissioned to draft plans involving, it is understood, the development of new high power lightweight engines, more efficient planes, adequate fuels, propellers, and other accessories for high speed flight. An appropriation of $25,000 has been allotted for expenses.

Army Increases Speed.

This move by naval officials, coming so soon after the successful development of a 200 mile an hour army fighting plane, was interpreted as indicating that the navy hopes to parallel the accomplishments of the royal air force of Great Britain, which already has in operation fighting planes with speeds of 220 miles per hour.

The survey, it is understood, is not aimed at the development of racing airplanes and engines, but at the building of faster fighting ships.

Boeing Plane Speedy.

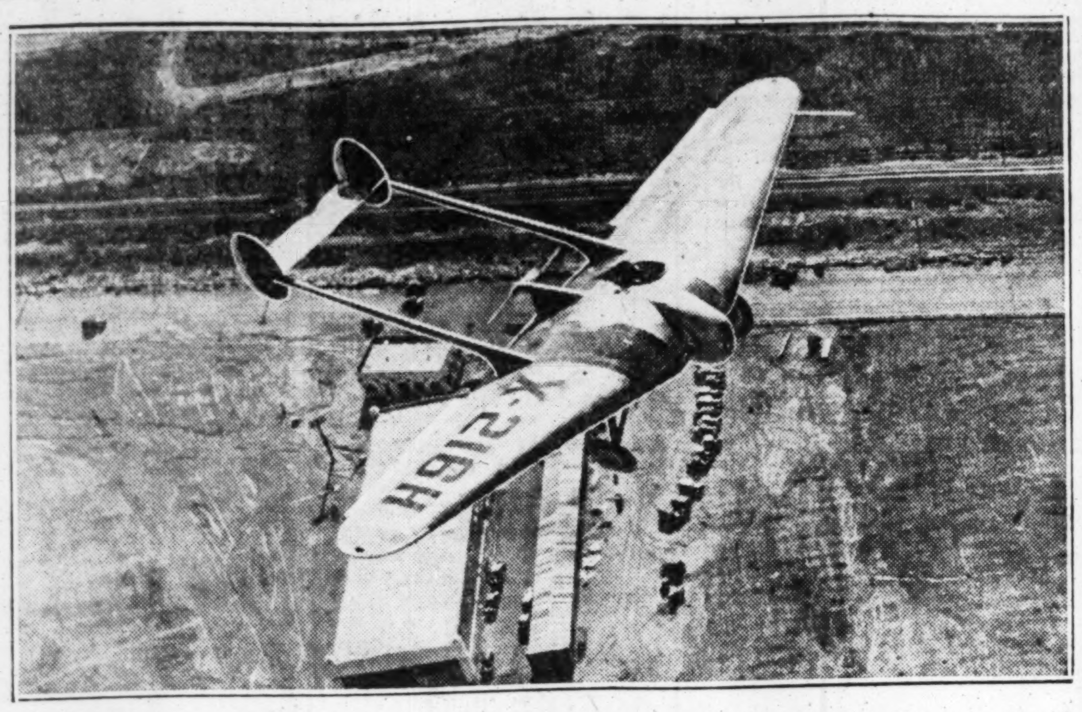
Until tests were completed during the last 10 days at Wright field, the army's material division, near Dayton, O., no United States manufacturer had succeeded in building a military type plane capable of a speed of 200 miles an hour. A Boeing fighting plane, equipped with a Wasp motor and Venturi cowling, in tests at Wright field, maintained an average of 196 miles an hour and reached a top speed of between 205 and 206 miles per hour. A plane of somewhat similar design manufactured by the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor company is understood to have yielded a similar performance.

Even greater results, it is understood here, are expected from a new Boeing high wing monoplane which was given its first flight test yesterday at the plant of the Boeing Airplane company at Seattle, Wash. This plane is definitely expected to have a flying speed in excess of 220 miles an hour.

Mother Dies in Audience as Son Declaims and Wins

Winona, Minn., Feb. 8.—(AP)—Unaware that his mother, Mrs. Albert Thrune, was stricken with a heart attack which caused her death while sitting in the audience, Eugene Thrune continued his declamation and won first place in a Winona High school contest last night. Eugene noticed the commotion but did not know it was over his mother.

NEW TYPE OF AIRPLANE PASSES FLYING TESTS



The Northrop "flying wing" plane as it would appear in the air. The all-wing monoplane has completed flying tests at Burbank, Cal. The plane has a wing spread of thirty feet and utilizes a pusher motor.

All in Wings

Burbank, Cal., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Completion of successful flying tests for an all metal "flying wing" airplane were announced here today by W. K. Jay, president of the Northrup Aircraft corporation, a division of United Aircraft and Transport corporation. Test flights have been made in secret over a period of several months at Dry lake, in the Mojave desert, according to Mr. Jay.

The test model is a two place plane with a wing spread of 30 feet. Tail surfaces are attached to two metal outriggers and a pusher motor is installed btween these supports. It is powered with a 70 horse power engine and is said to be capable of attaining a speed of over 100 miles per hour. The motor, cockpit, and landing gear are all fitted into the wing when in flight. The landing wheels are retractable.

John K. Northrup, designer of the Lockheed plane, is the creator of the new "flying wing." He stated today that he has preliminary plans for a multimotored transport plane based on the test ship.

Chiropractor Refuses to Be Vaccinated; Isolated

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 8.—(AP)—Dr. J. R. Drain, president of the Texas Chiropractic college, who has been a prisoner in the college building here since Thursday because he refused to be vaccinated for smallpox, was removed today to his home outside the city limits, where a quarantine was established.

ONE CONVICTION DOES NOT BAR OTHERS, RULING

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Constitutional safeguards against double jeopardy are ineffective in Michigan, according to a ruling today of Wilber M. Brucker, attorney general, in which he holds that convictions under city ordinances do not bar convictions under state laws.

Charles Button, city attorney for Marquette, asked for a ruling. Mr. Brucker contends that the fact that a city adopts an ordinance covering an offense already subject to penalty under a statute does not relieve the county prosecutor of his responsibility to apply the state law even if a conviction has already been obtained under the ordinance.

The attorney general had ruled previously that prosecutions of the same offense might be undertaken under both state and federal laws. The extension of the principle to city ordinances makes it possible, it is pointed out, for the violator of certain prohibition laws to face triple prosecution as cities, state and federal government frequently have similar laws in force.

Nonpartisans Want Brant to Govern North Dakota

Bismarck, N. D., Feb. 8.—(AP)—F. H. Brant of Linton was indorsed for the Republican gubernatorial nomination by the nonpartisan state convention here today. He was named on the sixth ballot, receiving 50 votes, while William Langer, Bismarck, got 14 and A. T. Lynner, Fargo, 21. A platform was adopted, one of the planks calling on the United States attorney general to seek dissolution of large banking systems.

EVEN SOUTH POLE CANNOT ESCAPE CONDUCTED TOUR

32,000 Mi. Cruise in 4½ Months for Blase.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 8.—What is practically the only tourist-free part of the world, now that it is possible to go into the interior of Africa on a conducted tour and climb Mount Vesuvius, which is private property, is threatened by a travel agency ready to conduct antarctic tours.

The scheme of running a luxury travel ship to the limit of southern navigation has been conceived by Capt. J. R. Stenhouse, who commanded Sir Ernest Shackelton's Aurora in 1914, and who is teh only captain who has navigated Ross sea during all seasons of the year.

Skipper Highly Honored.

Capt. Stenhouse, whose skill was lauded in Sir Ernest Shackleton's book, "South," is a veteran of antarctic voyages. He holds the highest credentials from the admiralty and colonial offices. He is a fellow of the Royal Geographical society, holds the distinguished service order, the distinguished service cross, the croix de guerre, and the antarctic medal. He was made a member of the order of the British empire for his antarctic work.

The project for taking a passenger vessel into the antarctic seas is perfectly feasible, Capt. Stenhouse said today.

The first antarctic cruise is planned to leave Southampton Dec. 10, 1930, depending on the financing of the company. Capt. Stenhouse is engaged in making financial arrangements, and hinted that American money will back the project to open those entirely untrodden areas to the feet of tourists.

32,000 Miles in 4½ Months.

The fascinating itinerary of this tour covers about four and one-half months for a total distance of 32,000 miles. The equator and the antarctic circle are each crossed twice, and various ports of the under side of the world are visited.

The list of projected stops of one to three days includes New York, Havana, Panama Canal, Galapagos islands, Tahiti, Auckland, Ross sea, Hobart in Tasmania, Melbourne, Fremantle in west Australia, Colombo in Ceylon, Aden in Arabia, Suez canal, Port Said, the channel and island of Malta, and Gibraltar.

Any of the passengers who so desire may stop over in New Zealand while the ship spends seven days in Ross sea in the antarctic, but, it is expected, the visit to the antarctic will be the cruise's big drawing card.

May Also Visit Byrd's Camp.

Passengers will see whaling fleets in operation, and a visit will be made to Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd's antarctic base. Arrangements may be made to spend a couple of days riding sledges and living in tents on the antarctic continent.

When the ship arrives at Framheim to visit Roald Amundsen's base in the Bay of Whales the travelers will have reached the farthest south navigable water on the globe and will be only 700 miles from the south pole.

The ship which Capt. Stenhouse has in mind is a 17,000 ton cabin ship built for trans-Atlantic service. The ship will be strengthened against ice and equipped for antarctic navigation.

It is believed that the majority of passengers on the first trip are likely to be Americans, not only because they have more money to spend but because they are more open to the appeal of something new under the sun.

MEXICO ARRESTS PARENTS OF MAN WHO SHOT RUBIO

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 8.—(AP)—The chief of police today announced that the father, mother and two brothers of Daniel Flores, who shot President Ortiz Rubio on Wednesday, were arrested at San Louis Potosi and have been brought to Mexico City to be turned over to the military authorities who are investigating the case.

Previously it had been reported that Flores' mother died of shock when her two sons were arrested, but police denied this as fantastic.

The chief said the only person being held by the police was Tina Modotti, who was described as a communist and who was being held for questioning. He is an Italian photographer who was with Julio Antonio Mella, Cuban communist, when the latter was assassinated about two years ago. All the others arrested are in charge of the military authorities.

POPE OPENS WAR ON WAR AGAINST GOD IN RUSSIA

Calls on Christian World to Help Him.

BY ROBERT SAGE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Feb. 8.—Launching a vigorous counter-offensive against religious persecution and the reign of godlessness in soviet Russia, Pope Pius XI. today announced that he would personally celebrate a mass of expiation, propitiation and reparation for the Russian offenses in St. Peter's basilica March 19, or St. Joseph's feast day.

The pope's announcement, couched in exceptionally strong terms, takes the form of a letter to Basilius Cardinal Rompili, vicar general of Rome, reprinted in today's issue of Osservatore Romano, the official Vatican newspaper.

At the conclusion of the document the pope expressed the ardent hope that all Christendom will join in a ceremony aimed at imploring divine intervention in the persecution of Christians by bolsheviks.

"Wish to Pervert Youth."

"This impious war has not only been waged against priests and adult believers," he stated. "The organizers of the atheist campaign and authors of the anti-religious offensive wish, above all, to pervert youth, taking advantage of its ingenuousness and ignorance. Instead of teaching youth science, culture and civilization, which, like honesty, justice and general welfare cannot prosper without religion, they organize them into bands of 'militants against God' and spread moral, economic and cultural decadence by means of agitation which is as sterile as it is inhuman.

"Children are urged to denounce their parents, destroy and defile religious edifices and emblems, and, even more, to contaminate their souls with all the vices and most shameful materialistic illusions. The promoters of these things attack and hit at religion and God, but they are only bringing about the ruin of intelligence and human nature itself."

The pope pointed out that recently processions passed through Moscow in the presence of foreign diplomats with young people spitting at the cross as they walked by. He also referred to one float bearing a Christmas tree, on which were suspended dolls representing Catholic and Orthodox bishops, hanging by the neck.

Condemns Wrecking of Churches.

Besides bemoaning such affairs, the pope condemned wrecking of religious places, closing churches, burning religious emblems, suppression of Sundays, and particularly the soviets' action in forcing workmen to sign a pledge that they do not believe in God under penalty of losing their bread card, the sole means of obtaining sufficient food.

The pope's letter was inspired specifically by the detailed reports of sacrilegious Christmas processions, which he has been studying assiduously for the last two weeks.

He also takes to task those governments which failed to accept his suggestion to demand freedom of religious worship and respect for church property as a condition for diplomatic recognition of soviet Russia. He advanced this suggestion at the Genoa conference in 1922.

"If the suggestion had been accepted," the pope said, "many evils would have been spared Russia and the whole world."

Pope's Request to Germans.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 8.—Officials of the Centrist party in Germany, who work closely with the Catholic church, have received a request from Pope Pius XI. to use their influence in campaigning against German coöperation with Russia and to fight the communist influence.

Struck by Ice Falling from Building; Sues Bank

Hugh E. Armstrong, president of the Radium Extension Service, 185 North Wabash avenue, yesterday filed a $10,000 damage suit in the Superior court against the Foreman State Trust and Savings bank. Mr. Armstrong avers that he was struck by a piece of ice which fell from the sill of an upper story window on the bank building, injuring his head, shoulders and arms.

Farm Union to Cut Wheat Planting 25% in Idaho

Genesee, Idaho, Feb. 8.—(AP)—The Genesee Farmers' union, which controls one million bushels of wheat, announced today that it has decided to curtail planting by 25 per cent during 1930. The federal farm board recently suggested that less grain be planted to make sure that overproduction will not occur.

New Militia Bureau Chief Here

NORSEMEN START NEW VOYAGE TO 'FIND NEW WORLD'

PALOS, Spain, Feb. 8.—(AP)—Norse sailors, whom sagas credit with discovery of the American mainland five centuries before Christopher Columbus found an island of the West Indies, are literally following in his nautical footsteps after a lapse of more than 400 years since his historic voyage of 1492.

The Norwegian ship Roald Amundsen, built like the small but sturdy craft in which Leif Erickson and his men are supposed to have reached Labrador, sailed from Palos today for the West Indies and South America. It was from Palos that Columbus set out with his three little ships to find a westward route to India.

The Roald Amundsen's crew is dressed in the garb that early Norse art shows was the fashion among sailors in Leif Erickson's day. Unlike the steamers of the mechanized twentieth century, its power comes from the wind and the arms of the Norwegians.

The Roald Amundsen will land in Havana and South America. It carries messages from the municipal authorities of this port to the presidents of Cuba, Brazil and Argentina.

HOLD UP GARAGE MAN.

After asking for water for their automobile at the Western Avenue garage at 2345 West 111th street yesterday, two bandits held up Elisha Alford, 6208 Prairie aveue, colored.

Inspects Guard

Maj. Gen. William G. Everson, newly appointed chief of the militia bureau, came to Chicago yesterday on a nation-wide inspection of the national guard organizations. While here he held a conference with Col. John P. McAdams, chief regular army instructor for the Thirty-third division. He left later in the day for Fort Wayne, Ind.

The general was pleased with the guard regiments and stated that they were in the best of shape. New uniforms, with turn-down lapeled collars, Pershing caps, and garrison belts will be available for the guardsmen the latter part of this month, he announced. Gen. Everson is traveling by plane, train and automobile.

Boy Admits He Shot Girl "On Purpose"; She Is Dead

San Luis Obispo, Cal., Feb. 8.—(AP)—Following a coroner's jury verdict that 14 year old Margaret Pennington had died "from a gunshot wound," juvenile authorities were puzzled today as to how to proceed against James Ashton, 11, who, officers say, has admitted he "shot her on purpose." He is being held at the detention home here. The girl was shot as she sat at the dinner table with other members of the family in their Santa Margarita home. The bullet was traced to a window in a nearby hotel and the boy found in a room there.

LAWYER NAMED TO FIGHT BRIDGE RULING BY U. S.

Goldstein Will Present Case for Aldermen.

Attorney Benjamin F. Goldstein, 10 South La Salle street, who has represented the city of Chicago in several important lawsuits yesterday was appointed special attorney to the city council bridge committee to aid in the coming fight to eliminate the open bridge evil.

B. F. GOLDSTEIN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Corporation Counsel Ettelson named Mr. Goldstein, who will advise the committee headed by Ald. Guy Guernsey [6th] and the subcommittee under Chairman William A. Rowan [10th] on protests against the war department ruling denying the city council the right to extend the present closed hours for bridges in accordance with growing traffic demands.

The ruling, approved by Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, prevented the passage of a contemplated ordinance which would force tugs to wait for closed hours before calling for open spans. High water levels last summer reduced clearance to a point where the towboats, unable to clear, opened the bridges at all times, including rush hours.

Studies Bridge Controversy.

Mr. Goldstein began an intensive study of the bridge controversy to enable him to present arguments for the subcommittee when it goes to Washington to ask a reconsideration of the ruling.

"This is one of the problems arising from the development and expansion of our urban centers which involves the reconciliation of private property and the public welfare," Mr. Goldstein said. "It also involves the coördination of federal control over interstate commerce with the local interests of a particular community. These problems have been and are being solved by balancing the interests of the respective parties and a solution must be found along such lines."

Last Wednesday the Rowan subcommittee unanimously passed a motion presented by Ald. James G. Coyle [17th] which calls for a junket to Washington to ask the war department for a reconsideration of the case. Mr. Goldstein will accompany the aldermen and will argue in behalf of the city and the many civic organizations interested in uninterrupted passage over the bridges during the hours when the law assures such passage.

Graduate of Harvard.

Mr. Goldstein is 34 years old, a graduate of Harvard law school, and first came into prominence in 1927 when he represented the legislative grain marketing committee in its inquiry into the failure of the Grain Marketing company. As a result of this litigation he wrote the new warehouse act and a special report on grain marketing which later was published in book form.

He recently has represented the city in the telephone rate litigation.

Red Radio Talks in German Bring Protest from Berlin

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 8.—Germany is protesting against Russia broadcasting communist propaganda in German from its most powerful station near Moscow, which, five times a week, floods Europe with its appeal for the "proletarians of the world to unite for a world revolution." Germany fears the world will believe the Red propaganda is being sent out by Germany.

IN NEW POSITION

Alfred G. Barry, an authority on criminology and lately head of the University of Wisconsin's extension school for policemen, served his first day yesterday as new superintendent of the Juvenile Detention home. Mr. Barry said he had no theories to advance on how a juvenile detention home should be run until he has become familiar with this institution. He did, however, have something to say about law and order. For instance, he thinks policemen may become scientific and sympathetic men who understand human conduct, instead of remaining the traditional "hard-boiled copper."

IF GONE A YEAR DON'T HUNT FOR ME, WILKINS ASKS

ADELAIDE, South Australia, Feb. 8.—(AP)—In view of the anxiety caused by the silence of Sir Hubert Wilkins, antarctic explorer, who has been unreported since Jan. 28, a letter made public here today has attracted wide attention. The letter, which the explorer wrote to his brother from Montevideo, Uruguay, last fall just before leaving for the anarctic, follows:

"You may not hear from me for 12 months; if nothing is heard after 12 months you will know I am lost and it will then be too late to send out a rescue party. I have fine fellows with me in whom I have every confidence—good mechanic, good plane. I want you to use all your influence and power to discourage anything in the way of sending out a rescue party if we are reported lost."

Sir Hubert and his party are somewhere in the great area of broken ice south of the Melville, base vessel of the expedition at the Deception islands. The Scoresby is bearing the explorer and his airplane pilot to a point whence a flight to the polar cap can be attempted.

COLOMBIA PICKS ONE OF FOUR AS PRESIDENT TODAY

BOGOTA, Colombia, Feb. 8.—(AP)—Colombia tomorrow will hold elections for the presidency to succeed Dr. Miguel Abadia Mendez. Four candidates are in the field.

The Liberal party, presenting a united front, is backing the candidacy of Enrique Olaya Herrera, Colombian minister in Washington. The Conservative party presents two candidates, Alfredo Vasquez Cobo and Guillermo Valencia. Finally, the Socialists support Alberto Castrilion.

Although political meetings were suspended today, through concerted action of the parties, in order to prevent possible encounters among partisans of the four candidates, police vigilance was strictly maintained. Police were watching certain communistic elements, fearing these might take advantage of the occasion to create disturbances.

FIRE ROUTS 50 WORKMEN.

Fifty men employed in the machine shop of the Crane company at 4100 South Kedzie avenue were driven from the building yesterday when oil soaked woodwork in the shop caught fire. The blaze was extinguished with $1,000 damage.

PORTO RICO SEES 8,000 MORE JOBS WITH U. S. RELIEF

Prosperity Dawns if Only Sugar Harvest Is Good.

BY HARWOOD HULL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Feb. 8.—Employment for 8,000 people for a period of two years will be provided by the expenditure of $2,000,000 of the $3,000,000 recently authorized by Congress with the approval of President Hoover for additional hurricane relief of Porto Rico. This is the estimate of Gov. Gen. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., at whose suggestion the major part of the amount was specified for road work. The other $1,000,000 will be loaned to farmers.

According to the governor not only will the larger part of the money coming from Congress go into wages, but will be widely distributed. In a surprisingly short time it will all find its way back to the United States in the course of ordinary trade transactions.

Save $400,000 on Roads.

If, as at present planned, the money is used for asphalting highways, it will make possible savings in road maintenance of upward of $400,000 a year.

The new appropriation, following that of a year ago of $8,000,000 for hurricane relief, has revived confidence in the belief that the island will come back in better shape than ever. With the sugar harvest the island is nearing its seasonal peak of wage earning.

Despite the recent statement which Gov. Roosevelt made in a letter which Resident Commissioner Felix Cordova Davila read to Congress that if the sugar tariff were not increased many of the island sugar companies would fail when the present crop was liquidated, there is a somewhat more hopeful side to the immediate sugar situation here.

Expect Big Sugar Crop.

While at present prices it is certain that many of the sugar companies cannot make money on the present crop it is confidently believed by persons familiar with the situation that there may be a saving margin owing to the small cost, relatively, with which the crop now being harvested was grown.

The present crop is credited with being produced for less money than any previous crop, simply for the reason that many of the planters had no funds with which to finance cultivation. Fortunately, weather conditions were extremely favorable throughout the growing season. Harvesting began with the finest crop ever seen in Porto Rico.

VISITOR CARRYING $4,000 IN CHECKS KILLED BY AUTO

Motorcycle Cop Loses Life Chasing Speeder.

Chester R. Thompson, 70 years old, of Marion, Ia., an agent for the Chicago and North Western railroad, was injured fatally last night when struck by a hit and run automobile as he was crossing the intersection of North and Clybourn avenues. He died a few minutes later at the Alexian Brothers' hospital.

Pinned to Thompson's underwear the police found $4,000 in travelers' checks when he was undressed at the hospital.

Trace License Number.

Witnesses of the accident gave police a license number and Lieut. Edward Kelly of the Hudson avenue station was searching for the owner of the car to whom the number was traced.

Thompson's death and four others yesterday raised the 1930 Cook county motor toll to 75. The other victims:

Harry S. Olsen, 32 years old, 5507 Artesian avenue, a Lincoln park motorcycle policeman. Fatally injured when he crashed head on into an automobile driven by Ben Strauss, 5220 Kimbark avenue while he was pursuing a speeder on the outer drive between Belden and Webster avenues

Stanley Minsky, 40 years old, 3305 North Ridgeway avenue. Fatally injured when he was struck by an automobile driven by John Rogner, 2940 Fletcher street, at Belmont and Milwaukee avenues. Rogner was held.

Frank Sankovich, 50 years old. Died in the South Chicago hospital of injuries suffered on Friday night when he was struck by an automobile at 101st street and Commercial avenue. The driver, Mike Klasja, 11616 Torrence avenue, was held.

Casimir Kezierski, 18 years old, 2928 North Lawndale avenue. Died in the Keystone Avenue hospital of injuries received on Friday when he fell from an automobile at Milwaukee and Hamlin avenues. The car was driven by Michael Russin, 3614 Augusta street.

BOY SCOUT CHIEF IS RADIO SPEAKER ON ANNIVERSARY

Describing scouting as a "great game" and advising American boys "to play it to the best of your ability." Walter H. Head, president of the Boy Scouts of America, last night broadcast a message over the National Broadcasting system in celebration of the 20th anniversary of scouting in America.

Mr. Head repeated the Scout oath and Scout law while many thousands of radio listeners in the United States and Canada joined him.

"On this 20th birthday," Mr. Head said, "I want to impress upon every boy his importance as a scout. It is your privilege to be a member of the greatest organization of youth in history. Our membership at the close of 1929 was 832,000. The esteem in which the Boy Scout movement is held throughout the world is due in great measure to the manner in which scouts generally live up to the scout oath and law."

The value of scouting to the Milwaukee railroad was told yesterday by A. W. Smallen. The railroad maintains a department for organizing scout troops along its lines and has organized about 70 troops. Mr. Smallen said those trained as Boy Scouts make courteous and dependable employés.

GOFF TEARS INTO TARIFF THEORIES OF LA FOLLETTE

Senators Debate Move to Cut 1922 Rates.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Hot words between Senators Guy D. Goff [Rep., W. Va.] and R. M. La Follette [Rep., Wis.] featured a spirited clash of regular and radical Republicans in the senate today over the attempts of the coalition to slash industrial rates carried in the 1922 tariff bill.

With the first tap of Vice President Curtis' gavel today La Follette offered an amendment providing for a reduction of the rate on spirit varnishes, including so-called gold size, or japan, from 25 per cent to 20 per cent. The row consumed the entire session and La Follette's amendment never reached a vote.

Slump Traced to Uncertainty.

Both Senators Goff and Simeon Fess [Rep., O.] charged that much of the present industrial uncertainty and unrest was due to the attacks of the radical Republican-Democratic coalition on industrial tariffs and they warned the senate that unless assurances be given promptly that the rate levels of the 1922 law are to be maintained a further slump may be expected.

La Follette assailed Goff's contention that, where the house or the senate finance committee failed to recommend a rate change, the doctrine of estoppel should prevail on the senate floor as a new version of "the vested rights of industry to a high tariff." And he characterized Goff as "an ultra-reactionary."

"I am not surprised at the senator's position," continued La Follette. "His reactionary record since he has been in the senate is a clear indication that he regards the interests of property paramount to the interests of humanity. If this bill can be sent to conference without any reductions below the rates of 1922 the consumer will be bound, gagged and delivered."

Proud of Party Record.

"I am proud of the fact," retorted Goff, "that I am a regular Republican. And if I were not, I would not sit on this side of the senate chamber and accept Republican places on committees. The senator from Wisconsin also has referred to me as a 'reactionary' Republican and I am glad to say that I belong to the party that has been responsible for the prosperity of this country.

"I hope the senator from Wisconsin is as proud of his radical socialistic record as I am of being called a 'reactionary.'"

"I do not intend to engage in any discussion of my record in this body with the senator from West Virginia," declared La Follette. "That record was submitted to the Republican constituency of Wisconsin, and, apparently, it was sastifactory to the great majority of that constituency, because I was returned to the senate by a majority of more than 500,000.

"The senator from West Virginia will shortly have an opportunity to submit his record in this chamber to the people of West Virginia."

Unemployment Discussed.

In the course of the debate La Follette digressed to attack the records of both the Republican party and President Hoover on the unemployment problem, charging that the latter, during his tenure as secretary of commerce, had specialized in encouraging "mass production" with resultant unemployment in many industries.

The Wisconsin senator asserted that following the recent stock market crash the President held a series of conferences with industrial leaders on the business outlook but failed to take advantage of the opportunity to send a special message to congress recommending some sort of legislation to assist in the solution of the unemployment problem.

ROBBER CAPTURED IN HOLDUP.

Joseph Bega, colored, 23 years old, 4645 Michigan avenue, robbed a United Cigar store at 316 East 47th street of $15 yesterday and then backed out of the store into the arms of Policeman Cazell Whitley, colored, who disarmed him and took him to the Wabash avenue station.

SENATE VOTES TO PUBLISH LETTERS OF WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—(AP)—The George Washington bi-centennial commission would be authorized to prepare as a congressional memorial to the first President a definitive edition of all his essential writings under a bill passed today by the senate and sent to the house.

Introduced by Senator Fess [Rep., O.], the measure would provide for the publication of all of Washington's public and private writings, except the diaries, including personal letters from the original manuscripts or first prints, and the general orders.

Three thousand sets of the editions in 25 volumes would be printed. Two thousand would be sold by the superintendent of public documents and the remainder disposed of as the bi-centennial commission directed. An authorization of $157,975 would be provided for this purpose.

CARRY SAFE OUT OF STORE.

A United Cigar store at 191 North Wells street was robbed of more than $200 early yesterday when burglars broke into the place and carried away the office safe.

GERMAN OPERA TO CLOSE WEEK IN CITY TODAY

Critic Praises Treatment of Wagner.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

With "Die Götterdämmerung" at the Auditorium last night, the German Grand Opera company sang the last item in its répertoire of this season, though the repetition of "Der Fliegende Hollaender" this afternoon will make its departure from the city one day later than was originally announced.

It has been an uncommonly satisfactory week for those who developed the habit of attendance. The complete competence of the company in the performance of tasks of large dimensions has made that habit easy to acquire and pleasant to experience.

Cast Highly Praised.

Last night's performance was a fair sample of what has been happening throughout the week. Mme. Johanna Gadski's superb if veteran art was applied to the rôle of Bruennhilde, with the result that Bruennhilde was both a personage of song and drama. The Waltraute was Sonia Sharnova, and her brief scene compared favorably with Mme. Sharnova's Braengaene and Fricka in earlier performances. Isolde von Bernhard appeared as Gutrune, another excellent impersonation.

The Siegfried was Rudolf Ritter and the Gunther, Gotthold Ditter. The two are not to be confused, though their family names rhyme so accurately. One is a tenor and the other a baritone. Their point of resemblance comes in the fact of both being first class artists. And more than ever there is inclination to applaud the Hagen of Carl Braun, he of the magnificent bass voice that rolls out so easily and so resonantly. He is distinctive in every note and every gesture.

Make Proper Omission.

The customary prologue, the scene of the Norns, was omitted in this performance, and this, too, was reason to approve the way the company treats its Wagner. For in a way the musical world has caught up with its appreciation of Wagner and hence is able to approve more completely his brilliant inspirations when some of his duller passages are thrown overboard. The scene of the Norns distinctly registers among the duller passages. Neither dramatically nor musically does it add the slightest trace to what Wagner has done better elsewhere in the score, and its omission is a great improvement to the work.

$500,000 ANTIQUES BURNED IN NEW YORK WAREHOUSE BLAZE

New York, Feb. 8.—Antiques valued at $500,000, including rare period furniture, tapestries, and objects of art, were destroyed by a fire which started in the cellar of a furniture warehouse on East 38th street at noon today and mushroomed to the third and fourth floors of the east and rear wings of the buildings where the most valuable pieces were stored.

Firemen tried to salvage the antiques from water damage by covering them with rubber sheets, but the fire had gained so much headway that only a small part of the furniture could be saved.

The scene of the blaze, the smoke which drove out ten families living in apartments in the west wing, was a five story brick building owned by the Bristol antique shop, and part of its space was used by the firm of Lans, antique dealers.

RUSSIA CHARGES POLAND HATCHES BALTIC UNION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, Feb. 8.—Another link in the chain binding the states situated along the Russian frontier was forged today when the Esthonian president, Oscar Strandmann, passed through Latvia en route to Warsaw.

The Esthonian delegation's special train avoided entering the station at Riga, so the Latvian officials went outside of the city to greet President Strandmann. On his return from Warsaw next week, President Strandmann will spend a half day in Riga, being entertained by the Latvian president, Gustav Jemgals.

The Moscow press today expressed indignation at this visit, hinting that both Esthonia and Poland are attempting to form a league of Baltic states. The Lithuanian government is indignant because the Esthonians have consented to visit their ancient capital, Vilma, which was taken by the Polish in a putsch in 1920.

EASIER DIVORCE FROWNED ON BY NEW YORK'S BAR

Proposals for Nine More Grounds Opposed.

BY TOM PETTEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Divorce specialists in this state must continue to advise long sea voyages or else say "Go west, young woman," for it became increasingly evident today that New York is not soon going to alter its stringent statutes governing matrimonial alliances. The Association of the Bar of the city of New York has officially frowned on this year's crop of divorce reform bills pending in the legislature.

A real effort to remedy a situation termed by social workers as intolerable in many instances had been begun by liberal legislators at Albany. Where there now is only one cause for absolute divorce, that of adultery, there had been proposed ten additional causes. Other bills governing alimony and domestic relations law were drawn. They were frowned on collectively by the bar group.

Former Changes Opposed.

In the past less important legislative attempts to modify New York state's divorce laws have been scotched by religious bodies. The Catholic church societies have vigorously opposed any change in the law and they have been joined by all except the most liberal Protestant groups. The federal council of churches of Christ has gone on record as being opposed to divorce law changes.

The bill which drew the ire of the bar association was introduced by Assemblyman Louis A. Cuvillier, a Democrat and a Catholic. The Cuvillier measure would augment the causes for which absolute divorce may be obtained by ten. The causes would be:

Repeated and extreme cruelty to endanger life and health, conviction of a felony or infamous crime, insanity, physical incapacity, habitual intemperance, fraud, refusal to cohabit, desertion for a period of three years, want of age of consent and incestuous marriage.

Legal Tangle Feared.

The inclusion of these causes, according to the bar association committee would present "a grave legal situation" and in several instances do away with the distinction between divorce and annulment which is one of the "fundamentals of our present system of matrimonial legislation."

In case the legislature should ever broaden the cause of divorce the bar committee recommended that all sections of the civil practice act dealing with divorce and separation should be rewritten.

"To make insanity, fraud and physical incapacity grounds for a divorce," said the barristers, "would open the road to endless fraud."

Want Father to Head Family.

The place of the father as head of the household also was zealously guarded by the bar committee. The bill under attack proposed making the father and mother of a minor equally entitled to the earnings and service of the minor. "The effect of this amendment," says the committeee, "is to remove the father as head of the family."

Another bill, introduced by Assemblyman Harry A. Samberg, a Bronx Jew-Democrat, seeks to make conviction of a felony and a sentence to prison for ten years or more grounds for divorce.

In the past domestic relations measures disapproved by the bar association always have failed of passage.

MISS CLEAVENGER'S $450,000 JUDGMENT IS CUT TO $150,000

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 8.—(AP)—Judge Homer Ferguson today reduced to $150,000 the $450,000 judgment given Miss Bertha Cleavenger by a jury in her breach of promise suit against John H. Castle, wealthy real estate operator.

Judge Ferguson declared that the jury's award was "grossly excessive and not warranted by the evidence." At the same time he overruled a motion of the defendant for a new trial, but left the plaintiff a choice of accepting the reduction or retrying the case.

New York, Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Andrew Carnegie's estate has increased from $24,755,940, as of the inventory of Aug. 11, 1919, to $35,201,133, according to an accounting filed in the surrogate's office today.

Among the items causing the increased value are collections, sale of transfer of assets, $2,157,066; income amounting to $4,234,445, and moneys received through a reversion of interest on the trust funds created for the payment of annuities, $4,051,572.

The accounting covers the period from the date of the inventory to Aug. 31, 1928. Mr. Carnegie died in 1919. Payment to the decedent's widow, Mrs. Louise Whitfield Carnegie, of $293,596 in specific legacies and of $2,408,568 on account of her residuary bequest is disclosed in the accounting.

Annuities set up by Mr. Carnegie's will included one of $10,000 for William Howard Taft and two of $5,000 each for the widows of Grover Cleveland and Theodore Roosevelt.

GIRL, 3 OTHERS SAVED FROM SHIP BOUND IN ARCTIC

TELLER, Alaska, Feb. 8.—(AP)—Leaving North Cape, Siberia, and the icebound ship Nanuk, was more like saying farewell to an old friend and home than to the prison it has been for more than four months, Marion Swenson, Seattle high school girl, said here today after flying across the Siberian strait yesterday.

Capt. Pat Reid brought Miss Swenson, her father, Olaf Swenson, Capt. Milovscrov of the Stavropol, Russian vessel icebound at North Cape, and William Hughes, a mechanic, across almost 500 miles of frozen sea in a flight, lasting about four hours.

"The priciptous, rocky cape was like a comfortable weather beaten home that sheltered us from the grinding crush of the arctic ice pack as we waited aboard our little Nanuk for aid from the outside world," the girl said. "It is there, where old skeletons of whales, polar bears, walrus, and even porticns of human bones can be seen scattered half buried, that American, Russian, and Canadian airmen are holding their planes and attempting to find the bodies of Carl Ben Eielson and Earl Borland, the lost aviators."

TWO ROB LABORER OF $3.

Samuel Elsus, a laborer, was robbed of $3 early yesterday by two bandits who held him up as he was on his way to his home at 1449 South Spaulding avenue.

GRANT WITHERS' EX-WIFE SEEKING MONEY FOR SON

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 8.—(AP)—Mrs. Inez Withers, former wife of Grant Withers, screen actor, today filed a new complaint in Superior court seeking to obtain $300 monthly maintenance for their five year old son, Robert. The action was the sequel to her failure yesterday to obtain an increase in alimony from $60 to $300 monthly.

Withers, who recently married Loretta Young, 17 year old film actress, successfully contended yesterday that the increased alimony petition was illegal, as his mother, and not he, had instituted the annulment action in 1925 which cut his marital ties to Mrs. Inez Withers. Mrs. Withers alleged that her child should be allowed the increase because her former husband now is earning $700 weekly.

Former Ann Seton Sues Her Professor Husband

Reno, Nev., Feb. 8.—(AP)—Mrs. Ann Seton Cottier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Thompson Seton, filed suit for divorce today against Hamilton Cottier, Princeton university professor, charging cruelty. They were married at Greenwich, Conn., June 30, 1923. Custody of a daughter and son is disposed of by agreement.

Don't envy teeth like these—

Yours, too, can look attractive

—this modern dentifrice is winning millions

YOU have your favorite dentifrice—but lay it aside for one month while you try this new one which has won more than a million users in the last four years.

Listerine Tooth Paste is its name—made by the makers of Listerine. There can be no question of its quality.

Note how quickly it removes tartar and discoloration from dull, off-color teeth. Note how their natural whiteness becomes apparent. See how it makes them glisten—a brilliant luster such as nature intended.

Observe how it penetrates tiny between-the-teeth crevices and washes out matter that causes decay.

And then—note the wonderful, fresh, clean feeling it imparts to the mouth, that sense of invigoration you associate with Listerine itself. Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.

Yes—Only 25¢ the large tube

Buy what you want with what you save

You can, for instance, get a toaster with that $3.00 you save by using Listerine Tooth Paste. Its cost (25¢ a large tube) is about half of that of the ordinary dentifrice. And millions, both men and women, having proved that it cleans teeth whiter, are glad to take advantage of this economy.

LISTERINE TOOTH PASTE . . . . 25¢

CANADIAN STARS BEAT ELDER IN MILLROSE MEET

Ray Conger Takes Wanamaker Mile.

New York, Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Diving over the finish line and landing sprawling onto the table that glistened with silver trophies, Eddie Roll of the Newark A. C. furnished the biggest sensation of the 23d annual Millrose A. A. athletic carnival at Madison Square Garden tonight by capturing the Millrose 600 from three of the fastest men at the distance in the country.

Overtaking Phil Edwards with less than a half circuit to go, Roll electrified a crowd of 17,000 by fighting off the home stretch challenge of Reginald Owen of the University of Pittsburgh, the national and intercollegiate quarter mile champion, to win by less than six inches.

The terrific speed of his finishing drive carried Roll along an extra ten yards and off he went from the banked track and onto the table where he unconsciously clutched the huge cup that had stood as the goal of all the starters. Roll's time was 1:15 1-5.

Three Records Fall.

Roll gave the audience that jammed the Garden its thrill, but other athletes furnished it with three new world's records. First the bespectacled Monty Wells of the Boston A. A. glided over the 50 yard hurdles in new figures of 0:06 4-10 to erase the old mark of 0:06 6-10 made by Karl Anderson and Charles Moore in 1924.

Then a bobbed haired girl from Cleveland, Miss Stella Walsh, slipped down the fifty yard stretch of gray pine boards in 0:06 in her semi-final, and in 0:06 1-10 in her final to twice dip under Miss Helen Filkey's standard of 0:06 2-10, while conquering three Canadians. Later on in the evening four New York university sprinters, Sol Furth, Irving Gold, John Trachy, and Hitch Girrith defeated a picked Canadian four in 1:32 8-10, to remove from the Almanac the Newark A. C. figures of 1:33 4-10.

Those two defeats were not the only ones that the international talent suffered tonight. Of eight events on the program in which foreigners competed, the Americans were victorious in seven.

Canadians Beat Elder.

The lone triumph to go out of the country came in the men's invitation sprint when Jack Elder of Notre Dame conquered his fellow football star, Cy Leland of Texas Christian university, in the 60 yard heat and then was outsped by Leigh Miller of Canada and Johnny Fitzpatrick, a member of the Maple Leaf Olympic team, to finish third in the 50 yard final.

They all were even at the half way mark and crossed the line inches apart, Miller nosing out Fitzpatrick, and Fitzpatrick in turn edging out Elder.

In the three hours it took for the meet to roll along into history enough features were packed to provide for almost an enitre season. Ray Conger of the Illinois A. C. came on with his famous last lap kick to win the Rodman Wanamaker mile from Orval Martin of Purdue, in the ordinary time of 4:21 4-5.

Fred Veit of the New York A. C. stood over the worsted to nip at the tape Dr. Paul Martin, veteran Swiss campaigner; the little known Paul Rekers, Pen State cross country runner, who was far in the ruck in the intercollegiate championships, administered a sound defeat by 20 yards to Stanislaw Petkiewiecz of Poland in the latter's second race in this country and Bert Nelson of Butler high jumped six feet four inches to vanquish Bob King, the Olympic champion, in the invitation jump where King finished tied with Leo Sexton of Georgetown, for second place at 6 feet 3 inches.

It was the women's sprint that caught the fancy of the crowd as much as anything. The surprising fashion with which Miss Walsh won her heat by five yards appealed to the audience and they were all keyed up for the final where Miss Walsh was the lone American standard bearer against three Canadian girls.

But Starter Johnny McHugh had troubles in trying to get the high-keyed girls off the mark. Six times they broke and then when they got away McHugh's pistol cracked the recall and Miss Walsh fled down the track alone while the Canadians ...

Hunter of Old Beats Seligson for Net Title

New York, Feb. 8.—[U. P.]—Displaying the best form he has shown in recent years, Francis T. Hunter, veteran Davis cup competitor, today won the national indoor tennis championship, defeating the youthful Julius Seligson of Lehigh university, 6-3, 6-2, 6-2.

The victory gave the 36 year old New Rochelle, N. Y., publisher his second national indoor singles title. He beat Frank T. Anderson for the championship in 1922. Since that time he has won three doubles championships and has been runnerup on three occasions.

Merritt Cutler and Perrine G. Rockafellow of New York won the doubles championship, defeating Harris Coggeshall of Des Moines, Ia., and Richard Murphy of Utica, N. Y., 6-2, 6-4, 2-6, 6-4.

Gets Leg on New Trophy.

Hunter's victory today gave him the first leg on the new trophy. The old one was retired by Jean Borotra of France, who defeated Hunter in the finals last season, but did not defend his title this year.

Seligson fought gamely and played up to the standard of his preliminary matches, but this standard was not high enough to prevail against his more experienced rival. The veteran internationalist, for many years a comrade-in-arms to William T. Tilden, displayed far more versatility and superior generalship.

Neither player had much advantage in driving, but Hunter outclassed his foe at volleying and placing. He used his backhand to good advantage in preparing the way for devastating forehand smashes.

During the first set the games went with service until Hunter broke through on the eighth with an adroit change of pace. The break carried the set for Hunter, who won at 6-3.

Chases Foe Around Court.

Seligson led off with the service on the second set and the games followed service to 2 all. On the fifth game Hunter opened up with his burning speed and chased Seligson all over the court, finally winning with a service ace. He followed through by winning on his own service and easily ran out, 6-2.

In the final set Hunter went out to beat Seligson quickly. He cracked the service of his rival in the second, fourth and sixth games. Playing sensationally at the net, changing pace adroitly and placing cleverly, he made a runaway of the set to win, 6-2.

The doubles finals produced little excitement. Cutler and Rockafellow outclassed the Harvard team and never were in danger. Coggeshall and Murphy rallied to win the third set, but were unable to hold the pace and lost the fourth set, and match.

SILVER SKATES WINNERS CARRY ON

Elizabeth Dubois, Chicago girl who won the 220 yard title yesterday in the North American ice skating championships at Ottawa. Her victory was the only one of the day for United States entrants. She also placed third in the 880 yard event.

MRS. POTTER AND ROBINSON WIN IN OTTAWA MEET

Three of the winners in the North American skating meet at Ottawa yesterday are former Silver Skates winners. Mrs. Lela Brooks Potter won The Tribune Derby in 1925, while Ross Robinson took the Silver Skates in 1927. Elizabeth Dubois won the women's skates in 1929.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 8.—(AP)—Two world's skating records were shattered today by Mrs. Lela Brooks Potter as he Toronto flash carried off the honors of the ladies' North American outdoor speed skating championships held in connection with the Ottawa winter carnival.

Mrs. Potter first clipped 4 3-5 seconds off the half-mile record held by Loretta Neitzel of Detroit, and a few minutes later lowered her own three-quarter mile mark by 10¼ seconds. The time for the half-mile dash was 1:30, while she covered the longer route in 2:21 3-5.

Robinson Wins 4 Races.

Another Toronto skater, Ross Robinson, was enthroned as Canada's premier men's speed skater when he won four races. In a series of sensational performances Robinson accounted for the three mile, the 440 yard, the one mile and 880 yard events. Throughout the meet Robinson's chief threat was Irving Jaffee, New York City speedster. Time and again Jaffee dashed out in front of Robinson only to be forced out of his lead in the closing stages.

The senior ladies' three-quarter mile race, in which Mrs. Potter made one of her records, saw the disqualification of Hattie Donaldson, also of Toronto, after she had been awarded second place. She was disqualified for pushing Jean Wilson, another Toronto entry, as the final dash for the wire started. Miss Wilson was placed third with Sybil Beattay of St. John, N. B., getting second.

Pay Tribute to Cole.

The crowd of 4,000, including the governor general, paid tribute to the memory of Chester "King" Cole, former world's junior speed skating champion, who died in New York City last night from infection following an injury. The program activities were halted, men stood with bared heads and what a few minutes before had been a throng cheering wildly over a close finish, was turned into one-minute of silent homage for the former 17 year old Sackville, N. B., champion.

The United States broke through for only one victory of the day, Elizabeth Dubois of Chicago winning the 220 yard event for senior women. She also placed third in the 880 yard race.

Mrs. Lela Brooks Potter of Toronto, who shattered two world's records yesterday at Ottawa. The former Silver Skates winner clipped 4 3-5 seconds off the half mile mark and lowered the three-quarter record by 10 1-4 seconds.

BUCKEYE MAT TEAM DEFEATS PURPLE, 31 TO 3

Northwestern's lone win came in the 155 pound match, in which Garrigan of the Wildcats gained a 2:33 decision over his opponent.

GOPHERS JOLT ILLINI TITLE HOPES, 26 TO 21

Score Second Big 10 Win of Season.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Minnesota's revamped basketball team, encouraged by its victory over Ohio State a week ago, won its second consecutive western conference victory here tonight by defeating Illinois, 26 to 21. The defeat dropped the Illini to a fourth place tie with Northwestern at 3 won and 2 lost.

With the score 9 to 9 at the half, the Gophers returned to the floor and immediately took the lead. However, the Illini found themselves and forged ahead, 21 to 19, but baskets by Schoening and Loose in the last four minutes clinched the game for Minnesota.

Schoening Leads Gophers.

Schoening led Minnesota with three field goals, while Harper did best for Illinois with a like number. Karsner was an outstanding performer at guard for the Gophers.

The victory was the first scored over Illinois since 1926 and marked the first time in three years that the Gophers have won more than one conference game in a season. Lineup:

INDIANA, 26; OHIO, 22

Columbus, O., Feb. 8.—[U.P.]—Ohio State fell victim to the accurate basket tosses of McCracken, Indiana center, and the Hoosiers won a hard fought Big Ten game, 26 to 22, at the Coliseum here tonight.

The Buckeyes showed surprising strength during the first half and held the Bloomington five on even terms, the score at the end of the period being tied at 12. The lanky McCracken hit his stride early in the final half and unloosened a deluge of tosses, a large number of which found their mark and spelled victory for his mates. He scored 11 of his team's 14 points in the last half.

Ervin, Ohio State forward, played his best game of the season, bagging four field goals and a like number of charity throws for a total of 12 points. Capt. Fesler was the main cog in the Buckeye defense. The lineup:

WISCONSIN WHIPS CARROLL

Madison, Wis., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Returning to the hardwood after two weeks of vacation provided by examinations, Wisconsin defeated Carroll college of Waukesha, Wis., tonight, 22 to 13. Carroll was undefeated.

Inability to find the basket marked Wisconsin's play in the first half, when no less than 15 shots were attempted before a field goal was scored. The score at half time stood 12 to 7 in favor of the Badgers.

Carroll spurted at the start of the second half on two successive baskets by Hinckley, bringing the score to 16 to 13, the closest that the Pioneers came during the contest.

Bud Foster, leading scorer in the Big Ten, was high point man of the game with four field goals and three free throws. Hinckley scored 9 of his team's 13 points, tallying all of the field goals.

Jensen, a basketball Carnera, interposed his 6 feet 7 inches between Hawkeye scorers and the goal and dropped in eight baskets for Creighton during the game.

Figg, a sophomore, playing his first game of intercollegiate competition, made 11 points. Corcoran, Bluejays' guard, functioned well defensively, while Capt. Kinman for Iowa held Vanackeran scoreless.

Crisler Hears Day's Rumors; Spikes Them

H. O. Crisler of the University of Chicago last night still was awaiting notification of his appointment as head football coach at the University of Minnesota.

Meanwhile it was reported in Minneapolis that students had wired Crisler advising him not to accept on account of the turbulent condition of Minnesota's athletic department. His insistence of a free hand in the coaching of the Gopher eleven was the reason for the delay in announcing his appointment, it was said.

Cristler plans to dismiss all but one of the present Minnesota assistant coaches, according to dispatches from Minneapolis.

"Just bunk," was Crisler's comment on the reports.

"I have had no word from any one advising me not to accept the position, if I am appointed," he said. "Furthermore, I have no intention of 'firing' anybody."

Salary terms officially were not named, but are said to call for a starting salary of a little less than $10,000 a year.

PITT FIVE BEATS NOTRE DAME ON LAST TRIP WEST

Notre Dame, Ind., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Pittsburgh Panthers, making their last invasion of the west, whipped Notre Dame, 26 to 15, tonight before a capacity crowd of 6,000.

Led by Charley Hyatt, all-American forward, the Panthers ran wild in the second half after being held to an 11 to 11 score in the first period. Hyatt collected eight points to lead both teams in scoring.

Notre Dame was out in front, 11 to 6, at one point. The Panthers pulled up and tied the count on Baker's basket just as the half ended. From this point until the closing minutes of the second period Pitt had things its own way.

Tom Conley, captain elect of the Notre Dame football team, was presented with the Albert Russell Erskine trophy, symbolical of a national championship, between halves. Lineup:

TILDEN DISPUTES DECISION, NEARLY BREAKS UP MEET

CANNES, France, Feb. 8.—(AP)—Bill Tilden and his partner, Fräulein Aussem of Germany, won two matches in the Carlton tennis championships today, but a dispute between the United States ranking player and Umpire A. Wallis Myers, British writer, nearly broke up the tournament.

The conflict between Tilden and Myers occurred when the former disputed the Englishman's decision on a service ball. Myers resented Tilden's attitude and left the court. Efforts to enlist another official failed, so the play continued without an umpire or lineman.

The American-German combination defeated Mrs. Satterwhaite and Louis Worms of Denmark, 1-6, 6-0, 6-3, and then took the measure of Mme. Jung and Baron H. L. de Morpurgo.

MAROONS TRAIL AT HALF, 25-9, THEN SINK 'EM

Fourth Victory for Boilermakers.

BY HARLAND ROHM.

Buried by a smooth working Purdue basketball machine in the first half, Chicago's much abused Maroon quintet last night came back after the rest to fight the Boilermakers off their feet. Purdue won, as was to be expected, but the score of 37 to 25 was far closer than even the most sanguinary Maroon fan hoped.

STRETCH ... [MUR]PHY.

The game was Purdue's fourth conference victory without defeat, and, though Stretch Murphy didn't go on any of his scoring sprees, his four baskets, all in the first half, and five free throws moved him into the lead in individual scoring with 62 points in four games. It was Chicago's sixth conference defeat, but the Maroons appeared to better advantage than in any earlier game.

Chicago Comes Back Strong.

The game wasn't as close as the score indicates. The Boilermakers built up an advantage of 25 to 9 in the first half and, while the Maroons began to pull up later, the Old Gold and Black never were in danger. Apparently the Boilermakers went into the second half with a bit of overconfidence and Chicago's rushing game caught them off their stride and actually outscored them, 16 to 11, in the period.

Chicago's starting lineup consisted of a center and four guards, but Glen Harmeson spoiled the theory of that strong defense by sinking three baskets in quick time, a long shot, a hook from the side and a toss from the foul line. Temple scored after Harmeson's second basket, but from then on Purdue pulled away.

The Boilermakers had 11 points—none by Murphy—when Stephenson made Chicago's second two points with a brilliant one handed shot, but Murphy got two more baskets before Fraider sank another shot for Chicago. Wooden stole a ball from Fish and scored from under the basket, and Murphy got two more short ones. Kellar and Changnon each got one before the end of the half.

Game Becomes Rougher.

The second half was a bit different, for Purdue scored only two baskets, making eight of its 12 points on fouls. The game grew far rougher with the crashes about equally divided. Chicago started off as fast as Purdue had opened the game. Boesel's hook shot, Ashley's on a rebound and another basket and free throw by Changnon brought the score to 26 to 16.

Purdue took its turn, a basket by Kellar and free throws bringing its total to 30. Fish then scored from under the basket and Changnon caged a one handed shot, leaving the Maroons only ten points behind. Wooden's two free throws, another by Murphy and a foul toss by Changnon and a basket from midfloor by Fish once more left them separated by ten points, 33 to 23.

Kellar caged the second and last basket Purdue got in the half and Boesel, Chicago center who played his best game, went out in his fourth foul. Murphy sank the free throw. Fish dropped in his third basket from close in and Wooden ended the scoring with his fifth free throw. Lineup:

CUBS RETURN PITCHER WALSH TO COAST CLUB

August Walsh, who had entertained hopes of a chance in a Cub uniform this spring, will continue to labor for the Los Angeles ball club. Transfer of his services to the Coast league organization, which is a part of the William Wrigley baseball chain, was announced here yesterday by William Veeck, the Cub president.

Walsh, who at one time was a member of the Phillies, was the outstanding worker on the Los Angeles staff last season, rolling up a record of 21 victories against 14 defeats.

Hit in Eye by Pecan Shell; May Lose Sight

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—(AP)—The eyesight of Harold P. Meenan, Georgetown university football and basketball player, may be permanently impaired as a result of being struck by a pecan shell, playfully tossed at him by a fellow student.

The accident occurred in a dormitory room at Georgetown and a physician advised an immediate operation. Surgeons said today they must await removal of the bandages from the eye before being able to determine whether the operation was a success.

Two bicycle riders were injured and several bruised in amateur races at the Chicago Stadium last night. The boys, attempting to emulate the performances of professional racers as they whirled around the steeply banked track, crashed in a wholesale series of spills.

In the final of the half mile amateur handicap, Henry Schreiner of the German American Cycle club, crashed through a rail and was taken to the Keystone hospital. A large splinter was removed from his groin by track attendants.

Henry A. A. Rider Hurt.

Otto Stender of the Henry A. A. fell and was so severely bruised he also was taken to the hospital. Others were badly shaken and scratched but they recovered after emergency treatment.

The amateur races were held in conjunction with professional match events, in which riders who will compete in the six day race starting tonight, will compete.

John M. Chapman, the director of the race, has gathered an evenly balanced field made up of outstanding foreign and American riders. This array includes ten riders who never have competed here before.

Infield Is Not Reserved.

At the last race the infield was reserved as the highest priced section in the building, but for this week's race the infield will be open to the general admission fans.

Reggie McNamara, the iron man and world's greatest six day rider, and Gaetano Belloni, Italy, shape up as one of the strongest teams. McNamara and Belloni won the last race here and then went to New York and finished fourth. They are one of the best jamming teams in the cycling game.

This will be McNamara's fifty-ninth six day grind, and he has won fourteen, more than any other rider in the world. McNamara also has suffered more hard knocks than any three other riders. He has suffered a fractured skull, broken nose, broken jaw, broken leg, three broken ribs, and has had his collarbone broken three times. In a recent six day race in Germany McNamara put his hand on the wheel to slow himself up, caught his hand in the spokes, and received a broken finger.

Spencer, Winter Popular.

Freddie Spencer and Charley Winter probably are the most popular American team in the race. They won a race in New York a year ago and will be favorites here. Gerard Debaets and Tony Beckman form the Belgian-American team. They have won a Chicago six day race and also have taken first honors in Detroit. Jimmy Walthour, the popular blond youngster, and Franze Deulberg, Germany, will have many fans rooting for them. Deulberg and Walthour were victors in the Coliseum a year ago last November. Alfred Letourner and Paul Brocardo, the French red devils, finished second in New York twice, and also second here twice. They are out to break their jinx and win a race.

Ernest Hy Kockler, the Chicago milkman, will ride with Norman Hill from San José, Cal. There also will be an all Chicago team in Eddie Merkner and Mike Rodak, two of the best amateurs ever developed here.

AMONG THE FOLKS IN HISTORY

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—[Special.]—The boys in the semi-final bout at the Madison Square Garden were twining in a series of fond embraces, round after round, and to relieve the boredom of their half hour under the lights I slid out of my chair and up the aisle to the corridor where the better known men about town convene on fight nights, talking and teetering on their heels, some of them with their shoulder blades planted firmly against the walls. This appears to be a habit or instinct with some of the better known men about our big towns nowadays. This planting of the shoulder blades against a wall when idling in public leaves only the front exposed and the hazards of existence are diminished to a considerable degree.

Down in the tunnel, standing well out from the wall, as though to express a clear and defiant conscience, stood Mr. Francis Albertanti, sometimes known as the bookmakers' husband, because he is supposed to support quite a harem of bookmakers in decent comfort with his three horse parlays, which almost never win. It seems that he won a three horse parlay one day many years ago, collecting about $1,000 for a modest investment, and ever since has belonged to that speculative band of hope, those indomitable hay-chasers, the society for the support of bookmakers—the parlay players.

Attache of Carey, President of Garden.

Mr. Albertanti is doing very well these days, being secretary and a sort of conversation man attached to the royal person of wealthy Will Carey, the president of the Garden corporation. I remarked as much and he said:

"Yes, everything is very pleasant at this time, although my third horse was left at the post today just as I was reaching for the marbles which amounted to a considerable sum. Everything is much more pleasant than I found things when I was a small boy around this town, say 35 years ago.

"I was wading through the snow tonight, and it reminded me of how poor my family used to be, because when I was a little kid we always used to think back to the time that my dad made forty dollars in one week repairing shoes for the neighbors down in Hester street in the blizzard of 1888. That was the year before I was born so, naturally, I did not remember the time my dad made forty dollars in one week, but my mother and some of the other kids told me about it.

Born Too Late to Benefit by "Riches."

"I was like one of those little Russian princes born after the war, too late to live in a castle with slaves and flunkies all over the place, but it was nice to hear about it. When I would tell the other little wop and Jew kids that my dad once made forty bucks in a week they naturally called me a liar, and I can't blame them, because it did sound crazy.

"For the first nine or ten years of my life my dad made only a dollar or a dollar and a half a day, and we all lived in one room in a basement in Hester street. We always were praying for and against another blizzard of '88 when I was a kid. We prayed for it so the old man again could make forty in one week and against it because a blizzard is no fun to a poor family in a basement where the slush backs up through the scupper into the room for days afterward.

"There were 14 kids in the family. It seemed that every time I would come home from school in the afternoon there would be a new kid in the room. No doctors; no midwife; just neighbor women in from upstairs and from the other basements in the block. Then in three or four days my mother would be up and around, and back at her sewing on piece work for the sweatshops. All but two of us kids died. I guess it was bad for the health of a big family to live in one room in a cellar, although we never were as badly crowded as sixteen in a room, because some of the kids were always dying off and making room for the others.

Dad Hammered Shoes While Mother Sewed.

"My dad would hammer away in one corner of the room on rotten old shoes to keep up his average of a dollar fifty a day, and my mother would sit by the cellar window where the light came down sort of gray through the grating in the sidewalk, sewing from breakfast until midnight or even later on piece work for the sweatshops. The older kids would make daily trips to the sweatshops for big bundles of overcoats or jackets or pants, and all of us would have to rush home from school and sew on buttons until it was time for bed.

"If we worked fast and sewed on a certain number of buttons we were allowed to go out from 8 o'clock until 9 in the evening, but if we were lazy or careless we couldn't go out. The sweatshop rate was ten buttons for one cent.

"Then I got to selling papers and found I could make more money that way. After a few years of that I got a job as office boy in the old New York Evening Mail. Then, one day, because they specialized in cheap help, the Mail raised me to $15 a week and made me a regular reporter. This was about the time of the Rosenthal murder, and it happened that I knew everybody connected with the job, because they were all fellows from my neighborhood.

Pal Saves Him from Knocking Off.

"Many a night I had slept in the same baths with Leftie Louie, Whitey Lewis, Dago Frank, and Gyp the Blood. Whitey Lewis came around to knock me off one night for writing a roast in the paper about the old Roma Fight club, which was a fire trap on the second floor at Grand and Orchard streets. Hester street Jimmy Kelly heard Lewis was looking for me, and said, 'Lay off that kid; he is my pal.' So I have been Jimmy's pal ever since.

"I was still a kid when the Mail sent me up to cover the executions of the four gunmen at Sing Sing. It was a hard night for me, because I had known them socially, as you might say, having slept with them so often. But of a whole room full of reporters in the execution chamber, Martin Green of the World and I were the only two who didn't pass out cold before it was over."

In 1912 when Francis told his mother that he was making $85 a week as sport editor of the Evening Mail the overcoat on which she was sewing buttons slid from her lap and she fell to the floor knocked out by the shock. It was about this time that he popped into a telephone booth one afternoon and listened with an ear to the wall of the adjoining booth while Arnold Rothstein, always a manipulator, to speak with the utmost kindness of the dead, was phoning a three horse parlay to his commissioner.

"I figured that anything he bet on was as good as paid off," Francis said. "So I hurried around the corner and bet thirty bucks on the same proposition. Naturally I won, so I used the money for the down payment on a home for my mother and dad in Jersey, and she never has sewn a button and he never has cobbled a shoe since then.

"You can laugh at parlays if that's your idea of a joke, but when they pay, they pay plenty, and one of these days I'll hit again. When I ride by you in my great big car I will tell my chauffeur to hit the puddles and squirt mud in your eye for laughing at parlays."

ILLINOIS RING COMISH LIFTS BAN ON WALKER

The Illinois State Athletic commission yesterday declared a brief armistice in its battle with Mickey Walker to permit the Olympia arena at Detroit to go through with plans for a nontitular battle between the middleweight champion and Leo Lomski, Feb. 14.

Walker and the Illinois commission have been at odds since July 10, 1928, and subsequently the champion was suspended from Illinois rings by the parent organization, the National Boxing association, which also is affiliated with the Michigan athletic commission.

The Michigan commission, however, said it never had received formal notice of Walker's suspension and, therefore, it had granted the Olympia arena permission to promote the Walker-Lomski match. Because of this and the fact that the Olympia arena had spent considerable money in promoting the match, the Illinois commission announced it would vote a temporary lifting of Walker's suspension so he could go through with his contract there. After the fight, Walker will return to the suspended list, Maj. Gen. John V. Clinnin, chairman of the Illinois commission, said.

CHASE SKATERS WIN 4 EVENTS IN SMALL PARK MEET

Skaters from Chase park won four of the seven events as several hundred boys and girls competed yesterday afternoon in the annual small park skating events held on the north pond of Lincoln park.

LORETTO CAGERS BEAT AQUINAS IN GIRLS' TOURNEY

One upset, one team scoring 55 points, and an individual player contributing 32 points were the high spots in the first round of the Catholic high school girls basketball tournament played yesterday at the Victorian Athletic club.

Acquinas, favored to win for Loretto, lost 20 to 18. St. Mary's triumphed over Marywood of Evanston, 42 to 4. Florence Cashman ran up a total of 32 points for the victors. St. Catherine, winner of the tournament last year, defeated Nallinckrodt of Wilmette, 55 to 10, to end the day's schedule. The next round will be played next Saturday.

N. Y. RANGERS AND OTTAWA TIE IN OVERTIME, 2 TO 2

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 8.—(AP)—The New York Rangers and Ottawa Senators battled seventy minutes to an overtime National Hockey league tie tonight, 2 to 2.

Lamb scored six minutes after the start of the game, but Keeling tied it up for the Rangers just before the period ended on an individual play.

The Rangers went into the lead on Murdock's goal in the second period and held it until Hec Kilrea tied it up in the third period. Neither team took any chances in the overtime.

In the Wake of the News

GOLDEN GLOVES BOXING.

WHETHER or not you frequently become disgusted with professional boxing, we advise those with a penchant for the so-called manly art of self-defense to attend THE TRIBUNE Golden Gloves amateur tourneys.

In these bouts you will see action, plenty of it. You will know there are no "fixes" or chaps waiting to take a dive at the first opportunity. Occasionally you may see stage fright in some of the preliminaries, but you seldom see lack of courage. In fact, no amateur boxer who lacks courage can reach the finals of the city tourney or the title tests against New York.

Now The Wake does not say you will see the finished products of the professional arena. Not infrequently contenders in the preliminaries are crude—their blows launched from all points of the compass, but how they go to it! There's a pep about the amateur not found among the seasoned pros.

On the other hand, you see good performers by the time the finals and title bouts are reached. No youngster can go through that bunch of entries in elimination affairs and survive to the finals unless he has something. In fact, several of these former amateurs are now doing well in the professional class.

What we like most about the Golden Gloves events is the earnestness of the contestants. We never have witnessed an evening's entertainment which did not provide a greater amount of action than any pro card we ever attended. Even if our employers should insist on our taking our 1929 vacation now, we'll be back in time for those contests against New York in March.

This is the third inter-city meeting. The New York News, co-sponsor with THE TRIBUNE for the event, conducts the eastern trials. When the Gothamites came here in 1928 the result was a tie, considerably to the easterners' surprise. In New York City a year ago, Chicago's squad was outpointed and outgeneraled, somewhat to our surprise. Coöperation of other middle western newspapers to bring out the best talent in this section should materially strengthen the western team for this year's bouts.

AMATEURS START GOLDEN GLOVES QUEST TUESDAY

Bouts Scheduled in Two City Sectionals.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Are Chicago boys fighters? You'll be able to judge for yourself this week when preliminaries are held in two sectional meets of THE TRIBUNE'S third annual Golden Gloves tournament.

Among the record breaking list of entries are boys who know how to handle their fists. They will be seen in action at the Ashland Boulevard Auditorium Tuesday and Wednesday nights in the central district trials and at the Fronton for the north sectionals Thursday and Friday evenings.

Boxers in the south section have until Feb. 17 and 18 to prepare for their trials.

Four from Each Division.

Winners of the first four places in each class at these trials will qualify for the grand finals at the Coliseum Feb. 25, 26, 27, and 28. The winner and runner-up in each class at the Coliseum will be members of the Chicago team which will meet New York's Golden Gloves squad at the Chicago Stadium March 19.

All profits of the shows will go to the Forty and Eight club for the maintenance of its camp in the forest preserve for disabled world war veterans. Last year THE TRIBUNE turned over $25,000 to the fund, and in the previous year $9,000. Indications are another large sum will be realized.

Ninety-six Chicago boys will qualify for the Coliseum finals. They will match their skill with at least 100 out of town amateurs selected through a series of tournaments in ten cities and towns. Four more have yet to be held. The city and country boys will clash in what promises to be the greatest amateur tournament ever held in the central states.

Governing Bodies Coöperate.

The Golden Gloves trials, finals, and the intercity bouts have been sanctioned by the A. A. U. and state athletic commissions. These governing bodies are coöperating to make the event one of the greatest ever held.

Opening night at the Coliseum, Feb. 25, will be American Legion night. Drum and bugle corps will be on hand, and all posts will be represented. Feb. 26 will be Army night, with the band from Fort Sheridan, together with ranking officers of the service, present. It will be Navy night Feb. 27, with the Great Lakes band and officers of the station and the naval reserve in attendance. The final day will be Chicago night. Indications are the Wabash avenue building will be taxed to capacity each evening.

Entrants in all local tourneys are reminded to remember the following rules:

1. Contestants must report by 6 o'clock to be weighed and examined; drawings will be held at 6:30 o'clock and the first bouts will be staged at 7.
2. All contestants must be registered with the A. A. U. Cards may be obtained from Capt. Roy E. Davis, 538 South Clark street.
3. One pound will be allowed in all classes. If a contestant is more than one pound overweight he must compete in the next class.
4. Each round will be two minutes. At the Coliseum finals each round will be three minutes.
5. Contestants must furnish their own towels. None will be permitted to compete without a cup.
6. Each contestant will be permitted to have one second. The Tribune will have a professional second to furnish first aid; physicians will be present throughout the bouts.
7. Every effort will be made to keep fighters from the same club meeting each other in the sectional trials; this plan will not be followed at the Coliseum finals.
8. Light gauze bandages will be permitted, and each fighter's hands will be examined before the gloves are adjusted.
9. All boxers will be compelled to fight at least twice each night.
10. Boxers must compete in the district trials in which they live.

Prominent Referees Picked.

Men prominent in boxing will officiate. The referees will be in charge of Phil Collins, Johnny Behr, Davey Miller, and Jabber Young. They either will work or assign others to the trials. The chief judges will be Ed Klein, George Mason, R. H. Bell, and I. L. Cook. S. H. Darwent, Charles Sidebotham, and J. J. Lipp will be chief timekeepers.

Harry Berz, nationally known official, will be in charge of the weights and drawings. Berz has been doing this work so many years contestants always respect his decisions. Al Smith, Leonard Sterling, and Frank Kalteux will be the announcers, and Eddie Mahlke will be in charge of the clerks.

Following is the list of officials in charge of the various trials and finals at the Coliseum:

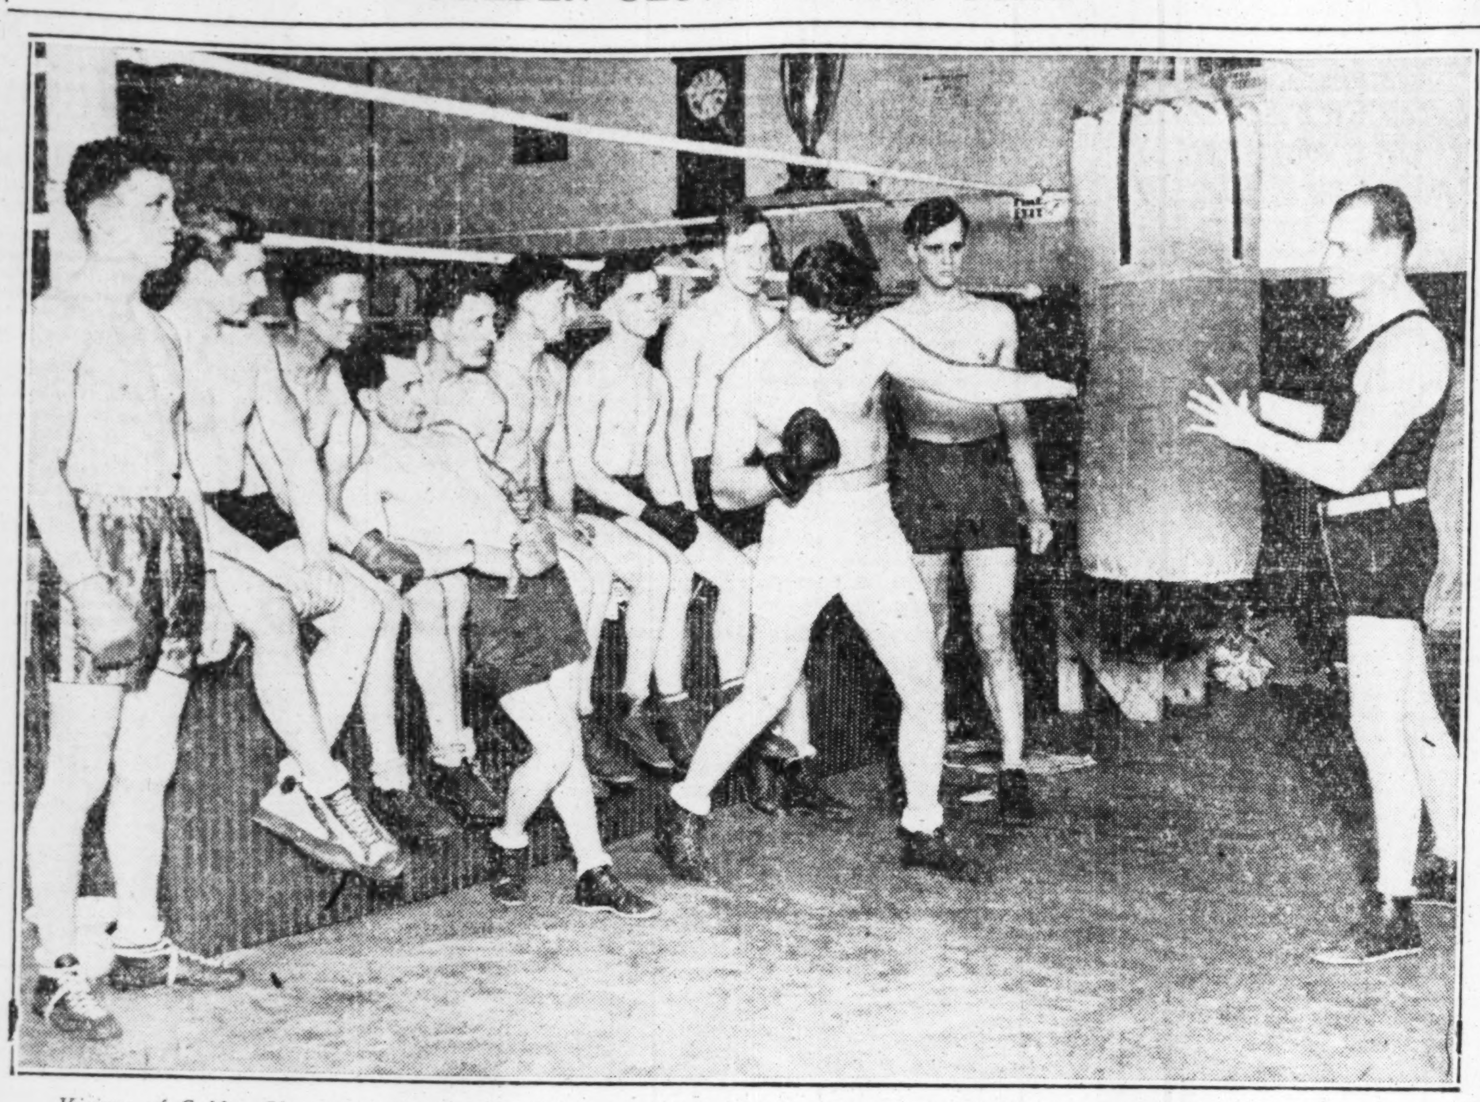
GOLDEN GLOVES THEIR GOAL



Visions of Golden Gloves and the glory of victory keep these husky youngsters of the Belle Plaine A. C. hard at it every day in preparation for The Tribune Golden Gloves tournament. Some of them will step into the ring Tuesday evening, when the qualifying bouts begin at the Ashland Boulevard Auditorium. Ninety-six Chicago boys will win their way to the grand finals at the Coliseum Feb. 25-28, when they will match their skill against 100 other fighters of the central states.

Golden Gloves Trials Remain in 4 Centers

Sectional Schedule

Vincennes ......Tuesday and Wednesday
Michigan City...Tuesday and Wednesday
Danville ......Wednesday and Thursday
Benton Harbor..Wed., Thurs., and Friday

BY FRENCH LANE.

The champions of four more out of town sections will be picked this week to compete in THE TRIBUNE'S Golden Gloves tournament at the Coliseum, starting Feb. 25.

When the boys in Vincennes, Ind.; Danville, Ill.; Michigan City, Ind., and Benton Harbor, Mich., get through tossing punches at each other 14 great teams representing all sectons of the middle west will be ready to invade Chicago. They are coming here to fight for a Golden Gloves title and for a place on the Chicago team which will battle New York at the Chicago Stadium on March 19.

About 100 fighters will come to Chicago as members of the sectional teams. There will be a dozen heavyweights in the lot, more than a dozen light heavyweights, and the teams will be at full strength in every other division.

Crane Among Danville Entrants

The tournaments scheduled this week are to be conducted by the Vincennes Sun, Danville Commercial News, Michigan City Dispatch, and the Benton Harbor News-Palladium. About 50 boys are to compete in each city. Among the battlers at Danville will be several University of Illinois football players, including Russ Crane, 1929 football captain, who will seek the heavyweight championship.

Teams have been selected during the last two weeks at Davenport, Ia., Springfield, Peoria, Streator and Rockford in Illinois, and at Lafayette, South Bend, Fort Wayne, Gary, and Kokomo in Indiana. The boys who won sectional championships are in intensive training for their bouts in Chicago. Professional boxers have been engaged to coach and train most of the sectional champions.

More than 50,000 have watched 750 boys fight for the sectional championships. Capacity crowds have been present in every city. In some centers the fans rioted and stormed the doors in an effort to see the amateurs fight their way up the ladder.

May Follow Favorites to City.

The fights pleased the big crowds. It was the greatest boxing ever offered in most of the cities. Many boxing and athletic fans who were present at the sectional meets will follow their teams to Chicago. Special trains are to be run from some of the cities.

Chicago amateurs who are to begin qualifying this week for the Golden Gloves tournament should not expect any setups in the boys who are coming from the tall corn country of Iowa, from all parts of Illinois and Indiana, and from Michigan and Wisconsin.

These boys from the near and far corners of Chicagoland may get whipped. Some of them must lose. But before they permit an opponent's hand to be lifted by the referee as a signal of victory they will toss at that opponent the last ounce of fight and gameness in their systems.

SHELLEY NAMED WASHINGTON PARK RACE SECRETARY

William S. Shelley, racing secretary at Lincoln Fields since that track opened, will serve in the same capacity at Washington Park.

The switch in dates for the Kentucky tracks makes it possible for Shelley to officiate at the Kentucky and Illinois courses.

Shelley will be at Lexington for the spring meeting and from there he goes to Churchill Downs, where he will remain until the running of the Derby. He then will depart for Washington Park to supervise racing at the Homewood track. At the conclusion of the Washington Park meeting he will leave for the 37 days of racing at Latonia and then return here for Lincoln Fields' program. In the fall he will be back at Latonia and then Churchill Downs.

Baseball Worth Remembering; How Cobb Instigated Strike

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

(This is the sixth of a series on interesting baseball events of the past. Another will appear next Sunday.)

AMONG the many records carried by Tyrus Cobb when he departed from the major leagues is one seldom mentioned. He had the distinction, enviable or otherwise, of having instigated the only player strike ever placed on baseball's threshold. For two days, because the entire Detroit team stood with Cobb on a suspension that was merited by his own act of climbing into the stand at New York and beating a spectator, who was crippled, the American league faced the biggest problem it ever encountered, aside from the 1919 scandal. It was wiped out by the refusal of President Ban Johnson to be awed by threats.

For Cobb's conduct at New York, Johnson plastered him with an indefinite suspension. The Detroit players to a man realized the fiery Georgian had violated one of the American league rules aimed to raise the standard of the game. In the face of this knowledge and with no thought of loyalty to their employer, they met at Shibe park, Philadelphia, the morning of May 17, 1912, and decided to inform President Johnson that unless the punishment inflicted on Cobb were rescinded before the next day they would not play another game.

Johnson Receives Players' Ultimatum.

Johnson was attending a banquet in Cincinnati when the telegram, signed by all the members of the Detroit team, except Manager Jennings and Cobb, was handed him. From other sources came the information that the Athletics were threatening to remain off the field and that players of other teams were already in communication with the Tigers on the matter of organizing a players' protective fraternity. Johnson left the dinner table and hopped a train for Philadelphia.

Meanwhile Manager Jennings had prepared for an emergency. Not desiring to jeopardize his own position or subject his owner to a $1,000 fine for not placing a team on the field for a scheduled game, Jennings dispatched emissaries who returned with players from a nearby college team.

By using these youngsters as well as McGuire, an old catcher, and Sugden, another old backstop, who played first base, Jennings was able to recruit enough players for a battle with the Athletics the afternoon of May 18. A kid named Travers, who could scarcely throw the ball up to the plate, pitched, and the Mackmen whipped him, 24 to 2. Jack Coombs, Carroll Brown and Herb Pennock hurled for the winners.

Radicals Prepare to Make Their Stand.

Enraged over a burlesque of this kind, Johnson, upon his arrival in Philadelphia, prohibited the final game of the series. Meanwhile the American league magnates were hurrying toward Philadelphia in response to a summons from Johnson. At the same time members of several players in the league held a meeting at Philadelphia to lay the foundation for their own organization.

When the American league went into session Johnson warned the owners that it was not the time to show the white feather. He recited the facts in the Cobb outbreak at New York, how Ty had climbed into the stand to whip a spectator he claimed had been taunting him and how he intended to convince Cobb and other players that the league would not countenance such conduct. The owners agreed to back their chief to the limit.

Rebels Surrender to Ban's Verdict.

Notice was sent to the recalcitrant Detroit players that the suspension of Cobb would stand until such time as Johnson saw fit to reinstate him and that each man participating in the mutiny would be fined $100. When the players learned they were to be severely dealt with they surrendered but the last game of the series scheduled for the next day, Monday, May 20, was not played. The strikers consented to resume work at Washington, May 21. Cobb remained under suspension for another week.

The players' fraternity that grew out of this tangle was short lived. Dave Fultz, a New York lawyer and former big leaguer, was elected president. After a brief existence the organization fell apart without having accomplished anything. There was no need for its existence, as the players learned.

NEW HAMPSHIRE WINS DARTMOUTH WINTER CARNIVAL

Hanover, N. H., Feb. 8.—(AP)—The University of New Hampshire today won its fourth consecutive Dartmouth winter sports carnival by gathering 44½ points out of a possible 88. Dartmouth was second with 25½, McGill third with 17, and Massachusetts Aggies fourth with one.

The other five colleges entered, Bishops, Williams, Pennsylvania, Worcester Tech, and Vermont, failed to score.

Young Skiers Contest Today at Riis Park

Youthful ski jumpers of the Chicago district will compete this afternoon at Jacob Riis park, Fullerton and Meade avenues, under the auspices of the northwest parks commissioners. Oscar C. Johnson, chairman of the recreation committee, has had a fleet of trucks busy hauling snow to the slide to have it in shape for this afternoon.

The response of the youthful ski jumpers to enter this, the first meet of its kind ever held in the local parks systems, has encouraged the commissioners and officials of the Norge and Ogden Dunes Ski clubs, who are helping to make the tournament a success, to believe that the entry list will reach the goal of 100.

In addition to the competition in the various classes, there will be exhibitions by the star jumpers of the Norge and Ogden Dunes clubs. MAINE TOWNSHIP, SCHURZ MERMEN DIVIDE HONORS

Four Marks Fall, One Tied in County Carnival.

Four meet records were broken and one equaled last night in the finals of the third annual Cook county high school relay swimming carnival at the Lake Shore Athletic club. One Central A. A. U. mark also went into the discard when Walter Laufer, Lake Shore A. C. ace, covered the 300 yard medley in 3:43 4-5, one-fifth of a second slower than the world's mark held by Walter Spence of Brooklyn. Laufer won as he pleased over Dick Hinch and Bob Howlet of Northwestern university.

Maine Township high, which ran away with honors in the preliminaries, was forced to share first place laurels with Schurz last night. Each school captured three events. Englewood took two firsts and Fenger one.

Fenger Provides Upset.

Although Maine played second fiddle in three races it was expected to win, two records established Friday were swept away. Des Plaines gained a measure of solace by stepping out in the 200 yard senior back stroke in the record time of 2:06. It also bettered one record set last year, first and second teams finishing one-two in each event. The new mark set up was 2:17 3-5 in the 200 yard junior back stroke.

Fenger seniors provided the major upset by coming from behind on the final lap to beat out Maine by a touch and set a mark of 2:31 4-5 in the 250 yard medley. Englewood accounted for the fourth new meet record by clipping two seconds from the mark set Friday by Maine in the 300 yard junior free style. The time was 2:51 2-5.

Schurz Equals Record.

Schurz equaled the new record it set Friday in the 200 yard junior breast stroke to top off a brilliant display of speed which saw nine meet marks established during the two days of competition.

The Inquiring Reporter

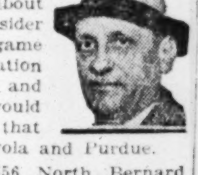
Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send your name and address with your question to "Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question James Brice, 5043 Quincy street, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Which sport do you like better, basketball or hockey?

The Answers.



Fred Strasser, 3903 Ellis avenue, musician — Basketball, especially because I know little about hockey. I consider basketball a real game and an ideal recreation for both men and women. I surely would have liked to see that game between Loyola and Purdue.

F. J. Ryan, 5656 North Bernard street, electrical signs—Basketball, because I consider it one of the most healthful and invigorating exercises there is during the winter season. I have played basketball, and enjoy it. It is a great all around body builder for the growing youngster, and it can't be beat for keeping older folks in trim. I have a son who is on a team.

C. E. Wilson, Rockford, Ill., mortgage loans—I am sold on hockey. Rockford has prepared two rinks for hockey, and the city believes in encouraging the game. I have not played it during the last four years, but I am a great believer in it as a body builder. It is one of the fastest and most interesting winter sports.

George Zablocki, 830 Wolfram, student — Basketball, because in playing the game the mind is refreshed, and at the same time one gets good exercise. I have played it quite a bit. Hockey is a fine game, but the season is too short. Its natural place is outdoors, not indoors.

William F. Hagels, 6321 North Talman avenue, architect —I like hockey better because it is the faster game. The professional hockey players at the Stadium provide a spectacle that other sports can't equal. Basketball is a great game, but hockey is in a class by itself.

ESPINOSA SHOOTS 139, LEADS FIELD IN HOUSTON OPEN

Houston, Tex., Feb. 8.—(AP)—Al Espinosa, Chicago professional, today turned in a card of 139 to top all entrants after the first 36 holes of the Houston open golf tournament had been played over tricky Rio Rico Country club course.

In the morning round, Espinosa, 1929 runner-up in the national open and P. G. A. tourneys, scored a par 72, but in the afternoon he sailed around in 67, five under perfect figures. His approach shots for the most part were dead to the pin during the afternoon round, leaving little work for his putter.

Three other prominent golf professionals trailed Espinosa by four strokes with scores of 143. They were Harry Cooper of Buffalo, N. Y., with a 70—73; John Golden, Paterson, N. J., 74—69; and Bobby Cruickshank, 70—73. Low scores included:

Tom Creavy, New York	72	72	144
John Rogers, Denver	72	73	145
Clarence Clarke, Tulsa	72	73	145
Walter Murray, Gary, Ind.	71	75	146
Julius Ackerbloom, Little Rock	69	78	147
Hank Decker, Kansas City	75	72	147
Tommy Butler, Corpus Christi	76	71	147
Mike Heaney, Pottsdown, N. Y.	72	75	147

More than 400 will compete today in the annual speed ice skating Derby of the Cullen A. C. at Columbus park. Full fields are entered in each of the ten races, which have been sanctioned by the Western Skating association. The first event will be held at 1 o'clock.

EDDIE MURPHY.

Oneil Farrell of the Opal A. A. and Eddie Murphy of the Barrett A. C., who represented the United States in the last Olympic games winter sports carnival, will compete in the class A field against some of the best skaters in the country.

In the girls' division, the Barrett A. C. team of Helen Bina, Erica Bock and Marie Fierce is entered. This trio has won all of the championships in their class in this section of the country.

The races for the younger skaters in both the boys' and girls' classes have attracted a field of playground skating stars. All of the municipal and board of education playgrounds as well as the public parks will be represented.

Special events also are carded for the afternoon's program. Among these is a special race for police officers of the west parks. A band will be on hand and there will be a fireworks display.

Officials for the meet will be headed by Judge Walter P. Steffen, West Park Commissioner James J. Cullen and other members of the Western Skating association.

BRICKIES VISIT OLYMPIA SOCCER FIELD TODAY

The Bricklayer soccer team will play the Olympias today at Olympia field, 47th avenue and 19th street.

This will be the Brickies' second visit to the west side this season. The last time they lost to the Olympia, 2 to 1, their only Midwest league defeat this season.

The Bricklayers will introduce Alec Smith, a new center forward who comes from Scotland.

Sparta will clash with the Carpenters in the Triner cup competition at Sparta field, 22d street and Kostner avenue.

Keeps Hair Neat

Rich-looking, Orderly

IF your hair lacks natural gloss and lustre, or is difficult to keep in place it is very easy to give it that rich, glossy, refined and . . . orderly appearance . . . so essential to well-groomed men.

Just rub a little Glostora through your hair . . . once or twice a week . . . or after shampooing, and your hair will then stay, each day . . . just as you comb it.

Glostora softens the hair and makes it pliable. Then—even stubborn hair—will stay in place of its own accord.

It gives your hair that natural, rich, well-groomed effect, instead of leaving it stiff and artificial looking as pastes do.

Glostora also keeps the scalp soft, and the hair healthy by restoring the natural oils from which the hair derives its health, life, gloss and lustre.

Try it!—See how easy it is to keep your hair combed—any style you like—whether brushed lightly or combed down flat. If you want your hair to lie down particularly smooth and tight, after applying Glostora, simply moisten your hair with water before brushing it.

FOREIGN HORSES TO MEET FLEET $100,000 FIELD

Keen Competition Even with Reigh Count Out.

European horses coming overseas for the inaugural of Arlington Park's $100,000 international special will have to step briskly next July no matter what the distance of that race may be. American competition will be keen even if Reigh Count, American 3 year old racing king in 1928 and winner in England last June of the Coronation cup revival, is not to take part.

Reigh Count will not start because of the decision of Reid Walker to retire Invershin, the horse which beat the son of Sunreigh and Contessina in the Ascot Gold cup renewal after Reigh Count's victory in the Coronation cup. There would be no object in bringing Reigh Count back to race with the American distance runners he mastered in 1928. In the Coronation and Ascot Gold Cup revivals he outran virtually everything European racing had to offer in the distance running line, barring Invershin.

Disappointed by Refusal.

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Hertz were disappointed when Walker turned a deaf ear to the appeal to send Invershin over. They promised another $100,000 as an inducement to Walker as they wanted to give Reigh Count a chance against Britain's stoutest and most famous distance runner under the conditions of American racing.

It is going to take a mighty good European horse to lick over a distance of ground such matured campaigners as Sun Beau, Diavolo, Display, Misstep, Distraction, Blue Larkspur, Twink, Grey Coat, Clyde Van Dusen, Windy City, Naishapur, The Nut, Curate, Double Pay, Marine, Sortie, Bois de Rose, Ben Machree, Hard Tack, Flag Day, African, Panchio, Frisius, Bay Beauty, Jack High, Buddy Basil, Inception, Vanity, and Beacon Hill, which proved last year and the year before that they could carry on. There also will be available the 3 year olds Whichone, Gallant Fox, Caruso, Dedicate, Gone Away, Spinach, Broadway Limited, Sumair, Gallant Knight, Woodcraft, Desert Light, Black Majesty, Gowan, Goldbrook, Porphyry, Fortunate Youth, Mokatam, Grattan, Flyer, Limbus, Ned O., Hi Jack, Sarazen II., Maya and Plucky Play to help out the oldsters.

Horses in Winter Quarters.

Most of these are now in winter quarters. Diavolo and Distraction are at Aqueduct with Gallant Fox, Hard Tack, Flag Day, Frisius, and some thirty other horses James Fitzsimmons is training for Mrs. H. C. Phipps and William Woodward. Sun Beau, which stepped the second fastest mile and a quarter of American racing history when he won last fall's revival of the Hawthorne Gold cup in 2:01 3-5, is at Willis Sharpe Kilmer's wintering place—Sun Briar Court—at Binghamton, N. Y.

Misstep, The Nut, Bay Beauty, Curate, Ben Machree, Clyde Van Dusen, Windy City and Blue Larkspur are in Kentucky—Blue Larkspur and Bay Beauty at Edward Riley Bradley's Idle Hour farm near Lexington, where there is a fine mile course over which Behave Yourself and Bubbling Over trained for their Kentucky Derby victories.

Four at Belmont Park.

Bois de Rose, an Empire City Derby winner, also a brother of Espino, is at William Zeigler's place in Loudoun county, Virginia; African, Sortie, Double Pay, and Vanity are at Belmont Park; Beacon Hill at Harry Payne Whitney's Brookdale farm in Monmouth county, New Jersey; Porphyry and Fortunate Youth at Sylvester W. Labrot's Hollybeach farm in Maryland; Ned O., at Bowie race course; Hi Jack and Jack High at Erdenheim farm near Philadelphia, the birthplace of Iroquois, the only American horse that ever won a British Derby.

Naishapur, winner of last March's Tiajuana Derby, and Plucky Play are at Agua Caliente, the former training for the Agua Caliente handicap, the latter for that race and the Agua Caliente Derby. Inception, a distance running son of Sporting Blood of the highest promise, is at the Fair Grounds. Display, the second biggest gleaner of American racing—he has won upward of $265,000 in stakes and purses—is at Miami, whence he will presently go out for the Agua Caliente handicap.

It is impossible to say now how many of these horses will make the first international at Arlington. Training casualties and sickness play havoc with the best laid plans of trainers of thoroughbreds. But it is a good bet that eight or ten of the best will get to the post. Most of them will be trained specifically for it and will do little earlier racing.

WILDCAT NINE TO PLAY SEVEN TRAINING GAMES

Seven games are included in the itinerary of the spring training trip to be taken by Northwestern university's baseball team as announced yesterday by Coach Paul Stewart. The Wildcat squad will leave Evanston Sunday, April 13.

Two games each have been scheduled with Central college of Fayette, Mo.; Southern Methodist university of Dallas, Tex., and the University of Texas at Austin. On the return trip home the team will stop off at Columbia, Mo., for a game with the University of Missouri.

Starting Monday, April 14, the team plays every day of the trip with the exception of Sunday. Coach Stewart already has started indoor practice with his pitchers and catchers, and as soon as the basketball season is over he will send out a call for candidates for the other positions. The basketball floor does not give the ball players room to work out at present. The itinerary follows:

April 14—Central college, Fayette, Mo.
April 15—Central college, Fayette, Mo.
April 16—S. M. U., Dallas, Tex.
April 17—S. M. U., Dallas, Tex.
April 18—University of Texas, Austin, Tex.
April 19—University of Texas, Austin, Tex.
April 21—University of Missouri, Columbia, Mo.

Miami Racing Feature Won by Jack Howe

Miami, Fla., Feb. 8.—(AP)—Amid the cheers of 10,000 fans Jack Howe raced to a brilliant victory in the Miami high weight handicap today.

Under an impost of 129 pounds, a part of which was the little apprentice, Merlin Knight, the four year old gelding sped over the six furlongs in 1:12 to win $2,780 for J. C. Etlis. Only once during the dash over the fast track was Jack Howe back of first place and that was only for a brief time as the field of ten swung into the curve out of the back stretch.

Coming down the stretch Knight had Jack Howe out in front by a length, but Gun Royal closed fast under Slim Robertson's ride. At the finish only a head separated the pair, with George D. Widener's St. Prisca third.

Gun Royal, which carried 133 pounds, was the favorite at 5 to 1, but Jack Howe was the third choice at 7 to 1. Greenock, packing 136 pounds, finished far back.

SLATTERY, SCOZZA MEET TOMORROW IN TITLE BOUT

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 8.—[U. P.]—The world's light heavyweight boxing crown, deposited on the shelf last year by Tommy Loughran of Philadelphia, will be handed by the New York state boxing commission Monday to either Jimmy Slattery or Lou Scozza.

Scozza and Slattery, both making their home in this city, meet here in a 15 round bout, the winner to be declared holder of the light heavyweight championship. The match was clinched last month when the boxing fathers declared the men the outstanding contenders. Awarding of the title, however, was made with the proviso the winner defend it within sixty days against Maxie Rosenbloom of New York. Slattery is a ten to seven favorite.

Damen-Carroll Tilt Features K. of C. Card

West and central division games will be among the high spots in today's schedule of twenty contests in the Knights of Columbus Basketball league. The west division feature will be the clash between Damen, former league champion, and Carroll, the only club in the section to have beaten them this season. Setters vs. Barry is expected to be a close contest.

In the central section, where practically every team is still in the running for a place in the finals, Madonna vs. De La Salle and St. James vs. Fort Dearborn will have an important bearing on the sectional title races.

The other three divisions also list important games. The southwest, playing at the Lions' club gym, 4300 West North avenue, has Oak Park vs. Lafayette and Ridge vs. St. Augustine as its features. Ravenswood and O'Connor, tied for the north division lead, meet tough foes in University and De Sota, while the hot race in the south division is likely to be even more complicated by any of the four games at White City. The schedule:

SOUTH DIVISION.
[White City.]
Englewood vs. La Rabida.
Perez vs. Loyola-Hyde Park.
McHale vs. Auburn Park.
Calumet vs. Dowling.

WEST DIVISION.

WASHINGTON-LEE WINS.

Lexington, Va., Feb. 8.—[U. P.]—Washington and Lee's Generals maintained their victorious pace in the Southern conference basketball race here tonight by defeating Sewanee, 35-30.

Six Day Race Forces Hockey Out of Stadium

Inasmuch as the six-day bicycle race will crowd the Chicago Stadium this week, the Chicago Blackhawks find themselves without a home. Dates for the bicycle merry go round had been under contract before the Hawks switched to their home ice, so the two games scheduled for this week were transferred to later in the season.

The Hawks' game with Boston scheduled for tonight was transferred to March 13 and the game with the New York Americans scheduled for Thursday was set back to Feb. 18. All of which means the Hawks will be idle for ten days, from their game with the Maroons last Thursday until next Sunday night when they engage Les Canadiens.

The lay-off will give their two chief rivals, the New York Rangers and Detroit, a chance to gain a bit, for both play Pittsburgh, the weakest team in the league, Detroit tonight and the Rangers Thursday. Both, however, have another and stiffer contest against the Montreal Maroons. The Rangers play the big fellows at Montreal Tuesday and the Maroons invade Detroit Thursday.

Toronto's rising young Maple Leafs have the hardest assignment of the week with three games, two of them against the potent Boston Bruins, and the third with the New York Americans. The Montreal Maroons also play three games—against the Rangers, Pittsburgh, and Detroit.

Games This Week

TONIGHT.
Toronto at N. Y. Americans.
Pittsburgh at Detroit.

TUESDAY.
N. Y. Rangers at Montreal.
Toronto at Boston.

THURSDAY.
Ottawa at Les Canadiens.
Pittsburgh at N. Y. Rangers.

MOTORS — TRAFFIC — HIGHWAYS

TOO MANY SIGNS INCREASE GRADE CROSSING HAZARD

Motorist Is Apt to Take a Chance.

Curing the grade crossing evil could reduce traffic tolls by 10 per cent in a very short time, according to the monthly report of the street traffic committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

"Effective reduction of these crossings is a practical possibility by selecting first those which involve heavy traffic," the report of the committee states.

"Railway and motor transportation leaders are equally interested in this problem," says the report, "and will work on it jointly under the auspices of the national conference on street and highway safety.

"The last accident report of the California railroad commission shows that a great number of disasters occur at obstructed and unprotected crossings. These facts bear out the earlier findings developed two years ago by the bureau of public roads from interstate commerce commission figures.

Would Omit Blame.

"The first step in our approach to reduction of grade crossings is to forget the subject of blame," the report suggests. "The railroads can prove a large number of accidents where motor cars have run into trains, with the trains not even in motion.

"On the other hand, the motorist can point to the great number of unprotected crossings and crossings obscured from view a short distance in either direction.

"While such facts are indeed pertinent in the study of the subject, progress can be made only by considering them not in the spirit of censure of either party, but simply as facts to be dealt with in the situation.

"A program recommended for discussion seeking the elimination of grade crossing accidents suggests the following points:

1. Do away first with those grade crossings which have the heaviest traffic.
2. Place warning signs not less than 500 feet back from the railroad tracks.
3. Take down all signs from obsolete trackage.
4. Use traffic light signals instead of signs, if there are fewer than five trains per day.
5. Consider the possibility of scrapping all railroad signs, in favor of signals for use only when train is approaching.

"The last two points merit consideration first, because, though they are new doctrines, they seem the least expensive and most practical of application.

Too Many Signs.

"One reason why the motoring public pays too little attention to railroad warning signs is that such signs are used with far too great frequency.

"The motorist knows that only on rare occasions is there any danger at a railroad track. The result is that he gets so in the habit of not fearing danger that he fails to be on the alert when the need arises.

"There are thousands of railroad signs throughout the country at crossings where there is not more than a train or two per day. Rather than hold up or slow down all motor traffic crossing this unused road it would be better to have a signal light which would go on when there was a train approaching, but with no sign at all when the road was clear.

"Possibly the worst abuse of railway warnings are those put up at factory sidings where there is little activity. The freight loading on such sidings is usually active only during special hours, and the movement of trains crossing any adjacent highways could and should be protected by a man with a flag rather than by a permanent sign.

Another Abuse.

"Another abuse of the warning sign, especially in New England, is the use of it to protect trolley tracks which cross from one side of the road to the other. In these cases the trolley at all times has a clear view of the highway and should be able to traverse its course without the aid of extra signs asking the public to slow down before a rail crossing.

"If we remove from the highway every railway crossing sign and use light signals when, and only when, there is a train approaching you will then find that the motorists will be actively aware of danger ahead and will be, to a large degree cured of the temptation to take a chance. The fact is that under present conditions with 150,000 signs erected at crossings where in most cases there is little traffic chance taking does actually favor the motorist. Certainly 90 per cent of the time he can get by without difficulty. Of course, he is foolish to take the chance, but with such a high percentage in favor of winning he is almost certain to continue in that course. Issue positive warnings and issue them only when danger exists.

Give Adequate Warning.

"Such a program, however advantageous, will not be adopted by all states and all railroads at one swoop. The factor of inertia enters into any new program and we must face the fact that signs at relatively inactive crossings will be in effect for some time to come. Such signs, however, should be placed at least 500 feet before one comes to the tracks in order to allow for the increased speed of the automobile as compared with the horse and buggy. The location of the majority of signs was determined in horse drawn vehicle days.

"The encouraging element in the effort to abolish grade crossings hazards is that a thorough going program can cut down the traffic toll by approximately 10 per cent. The grade crossing tolls are now approximately 19 per cent of the total. They will be entirely done away with only by separation of grades, but can be substantially reduced."

"RAILSPLITTER'S TRAIL"

Proposed Lincoln Memorial highway from Springfield, Ill., where Abraham Lincoln was living when he was elected President of the United States and where he now lies in his tomb, to Hodgenville, Ky., where he was born. The state highway departments of three states—Illinois, Indiana, and Kentucky—have indorsed the project, which has been laid out so that it passes through many Lincoln shrines.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

PARKING AT CORNERS.

Chicago, Feb. 7.—One way to reduce accidents caused by automobiles hitting pedestrians is to insist that cars be parked a sufficient number of feet from the corners in order to permit the pedestrians to see whether an auto is approaching. Women in particular are too short to see over the parked autos.

Many times I have to go slowly, many times almost to the middle of the street, to perceive approaching cars. A tall person, of course, has the advantage over those of less height.

[MISS] ELIDA EVERETT.

FAVORS EXPENSIVE BRICK.

Streator, Ill., Feb. 4.—The writer has long considered THE TRIBUNE editorials the product of honest thought and enough study to thoroughly grasp, at least, the rudiments of any subject about which the editorial is written. But the editorial "Pick the Pavement for the Motorists," certainly gives evidence of having been written without investigation and the thought due such a momentous question as "What types of pavement shall we pick?"

A chief engineer of the federal bureau of public roads in classifying pavements according to service value, gives first place to brick on a concrete base. Four of the foremost highway engineers, acting in conjunction, rate stone block on concrete base first and brick on concrete base second. The United States bureau of public roads in their summary report give a very high recommendation for brick pavements.

Engineers generally accept the fact that a properly constructed brick road with adequate concrete foundation, and the space between the brick filled with asphalt, is really the last word in road construction, but they hesitate to advocate this type for roads because of its high first cost.

As for comfort to the motorist, I can only ask that before a haphazard guess is made, some of the modern brick roads and pavements in Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, and even a few in our own state, be tried out before a comparison, detrimental to one of Illinois' largest basic industries, is made.

HENDERSON, KY., PROTESTS.

Henderson, Ky., Feb. 3.—Our attention has been called to two issues of your paper carrying an article encouraging motorists, when driving to Florida, to use the route through Indianapolis and Louisville. We wish to protest against the injustice of it to both the tourists and the communities along U. S. highway 41 between Danville, Ill., and Nashville, Tenn.

U. S. highway 41 is by far the shortest and best route from Chicago, the midwest, and northwest to Florida. There is a splendid concrete road from Chicago to Henderson, Ky., with a high grade, state maintained gravel road from Henderson to Hopkinsville, Ky., a distance of eighty miles, which can easily be driven in one and a half hours and a high type surfaced road from Hopkinsville to Nashville, Tenn.

We believe you are interested in giving your readers the facts relative to routes and traffic conditions and, therefore, take the liberty of calling this to your attention and trust you may see proper to make due correction at any early date.

HENDERSON ROTARY CLUB.

PADUCAH VS. CAIRO.

Paducah, Ky., Feb. 4.—In THE TRIBUNE, there was an article headed, "Cairo Claims the 'Best Route' to Gulf Coast," criticizing an article by Hal Foust recommending the route via Metropolis and Paducah.

Here is my own personal experience in a decision to test the routes: I crossed on the Paducah bridge to Brookport and drove north to Murphysboro. I returned via Cairo on the route Cairo urges on travelers to the gulf. I arrived in Cairo a few minutes after 5. At some little time after 6:40, the ferry departed. The trip to Wickliffe took about twenty-five minutes.

At Wickliffe, a landing was made on a narrow high bank with barely room enough for a big car to stay on the landing stage. From Wickliffe on both federal routes 60 and 51 were in bad condition. Rains had produced scores of soft spots and deep ruts, making driving extremely dangerous, especially over high fills where the shoulders are badly sloughed.

Contrasting this crossing with the Metropolis-Paducah crossing, I find this: That if the bridge route is used, the gravel road from Metropolis to the Paducah bridge is in first class condition, under constant private maintenance. The length of time to cross the bridge is roughly five minutes as against the long ferry trip from Cairo, and the inevitable delay unless the ferry is met on the dot, as it operates on a two hour schedule.

Here is a situation that will be constantly debated unless some authentic source of information settles it. At any rate, I hope THE TRIBUNE, which is now so much looked up to in this section as an authority, can get the true situation established as far as the parties are concerned.

ELLIOTT C. MITCHELL.

THE CHANGING CITY.

Chicago, Feb. 8.—Having been away from Chicago for a few years, I returned the other day to find once wonderful streets in just the opposite condition. A hole in the street cost me $5 to have a new tire repaired. The hole was hiding under some inches of snow that used to be cleared away in the old days. What is the $10 wheel tax for?

DISGUSTED.

SOME STILL PAY.

Chicago, Feb. 7.—If the city is so hard up for cash why does it not collect the city vehicle tax on automobiles, or does any one pay this tax anymore.

ROBERT M. BALLARD.

UNAUTHORIZED SIREN.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—Recently I was driving south on Elston avenue just north of Lawrence avenue, when I heard what I thought was a police siren. I pulled over to one side as usual to let him go by. Other cars did the same.

I followed this car and took the number. I found out it belonged to a former Chicago police officer and also a former chief of police of a small town near here. People are trying to obey the law by getting out of the way of the fire and police department cars when they hear the siren and here is a man who violates the law by having a siren, who thinks he is somebody because he happened to be a retired police officer. Can't something be done to put a stop to this nuisance?

FRANK A. SHREKE.

CAN SOME ONE ADVISE?

Waukegan, Ill., Feb. 4.—I am a boy, 18, and in high school. Recently I bought an old coupe, and as it is quite dilapidated, I thought I would make a sport or racing body. Not having any experience of this kind, I am taking the liberty to ask you to give me some advice and pointers on how to make a body myself, either from my own design or from any other plan.

Also, could you tell me where I could buy a set of plans for my purpose? There are certain things to make allowances for, but that is what I don't know. I want to enclose the seat in the manner of a cabin monoplane.

WILLIAM W. HOWARD.

LIKES TRIBUNE SERVICE.

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 3.—I did not find time before this to express my utmost satisfaction with your maps, which certainly were absolutely accurate on our 2,800 mile trip.

In different places we accepted the road signs as official but found to our dismay, that they were miles off and your maps were absolutely correct.

Permit me to thank you for the way you laid out my trip, as it was a pleasure and not the least tiresome, as you arranged on the average of 200 miles per day, and we made it in 12 days comfortably.

Again I wish to thank you for the courtesy and prompt service, and hope that you will continue to give such efficient service to all travelers southwest. Respectfully yours,

E. BURNETT.

COMPLAINT FROM SOUTH SHORE.

Chicago, Jan. 3.—Being a resident of the South Shore district, I wish you would find space in your paper to print the following complaint, inasmuch as it may help to correct a condition which is dangerous to the public at large.

On Dec. 28, about 5:30 p. m., I was while crossing the tracks at 71st street while crossing the tracks at 71st street, the gates were suddenly lowered without warning, locking me in on the tracks. I blew my horn at the towerman, who was evidently asleep and the efforts of a pedestrian and a police officer to raise these gates were futile. All of this took about three minutes before the towerman awoke to my plight and lifted the gates. I was fortunate inasmuch as there was no train due at the crossing at this time. There have been a number of fatal accidents at this crossing and the I. C. should be compelled to employ only alert and intelligent men for this position.

N. A. MCKINNON.

Three States Have Laws Barring Hitch-Hiking

Maine, New Jersey and Minnesota have laws prohibiting hitch-hiking. Hitch-hikers in Maine are subject to a $50 fine for soliciting rides from a private vehicle. It was recently discovered in Arizona that disappointed hitch-hikers were responsible for the placing of glass and other tire destroying material upon the roads of that state.

OIL RUINS INSULATION.

Because oil has a disintegrating effect, not only on rubber, but on cotton and fabric as well, care should be taken to see that the wiring for electric lighting and engine starting system is well protected. If oil is permitted to seep onto the wiring, the insulation will in time be softened so that the slightest chafing will cause the copper to be exposed and a short circuit or a leakage of current follow.

ROAD BUILDERS LINK PLANS TO HOOVER PROGRAM

Expect Boom on Highway Construction.

Impelled by forces now getting behind public work of every character, and especially under the leadership of President Hoover, plans are in the making for increased activity in road building as one of the most far reaching and constructive agencies in national progress.

In preparation for this objective, and for the consideration of other matters concerning highway improvement, members of the American Association of State Highway Officials have just held their regular annual meeting at San Antonio, Tex. This body is composed exclusively of highway officials who represent every state in the union and who also coöperate closely with the federal government in the administration of federal aid. At this meeting, legislative and financial needs in highway work for the immediate future were discussed and a resolution was passed recommending to congress that the federal aid appropriation be increased to $125,000,000.

Would Finish Federal Roads.

In carrying on their part of the nation's work, highway officials are stressing the importance of completing the main federal aid project as originally planned. This plan, it will be recalled, was to complete state and interstate routes first in order to save motor vehicle revenues from the drain of excessive repair costs where roads are not built sufficiently strong in the first instance to sustain frequent and heavy traffic.

As to the wisdom of proceeding with increased activity on the original program, those in highway leadership assert that they are in line with President Hoover's engineering views on such matters. These views were expressed in one of his pre-election speeches at St. Louis and again on his recent visit to Cincinnati and Louisville in connection with waterway improvement. Tersely stated, it was the President's expressed judgment that trunk line waterways should be improved first, and highway officials in their recent conferences at San Antonio have again attested to the soundness of that principle as a means of conserving and making the safest possible use of highway construction capital.

Use of Highways Increasing.

Taking the country as a whole, the use of public highways is increasing at an amazing rate, likewise motor vehicle operating waste is increasing where highways have not yet been brought up to modern standards in construction. This situation may be taken as a lesson that not only should there be no let-up in road building, especially on routes that are heavily traveled, but that public work of this character should be intensified. It may be taken also as a reminder that there should be no evasion of the obligation due to motorists who have acquiesced in gasoline tax levies in the various states upon the assurance that the main traffic channels of the country would be pressed to completion as early as possible and thus take care of between 75 and 85 per cent of the country's traffic before attempting to stretch the federal aid principle beyond its present scope.

With the initiative which President Hoover is taking in all internal improvement matters, it is expected that highway building soon will be greatly increased and thereafter maintained at a speed that will insure not only sustained employment in that particular field, but great profit to the country.

AUTOS, GOOD ROADS BRING EDUCATION TO RURAL CHILDREN

Improved roads and motor vehicle transportation, which have brought modern education advantages to rural children, are a source of ever increasing danger to the school boys and girls in traffic centers.

This anomaly of the traffic situation is pointed out in a statement issued by the American Road Builders' association in a campaign for highway safety.

"Since 1928," the statement says, "according to the United States bureau of education, more than 35,000 small, inefficient rural schools have been closed; approximately 10,000 consolidated schools established and an average of about $24,000,000 expended annually in transporting pupils to school.

"These rural children are spared most of the dangers which have taken the lives of thousands of their city cousins. They encounter less traffic on their way to and from school. They have no dangerous streets to cross, with jangling electric cars, honking motor horns, huge trucks dashing hither and yon. They have vast fields and woods to play in. The very young are given more care by watchful parents."

CHECK THE ACCESSORIES.

Many car owners suffer much cold weather discomfort because they fail to look over the accessory store's list of comfort-giving devices.

EASY AND SURE CONTROL BUILT INTO NEW BUSES

Gas-Electric Vehicle Has Street Car Type Body.

BY HAL FOUST.

Electric service braking, individual drive from the electric motor to each of the four rear wheels, discharge of exhaust gases at roof, these are some of the features of the 40 passenger gas electric coach being produced by the St. Louis Car company.

This vehicle has a 210 inch wheelbase and mounts a street car type body, with the entrance at the right of the driver and the exit at the center. Ease and sureness of control are given as important advantages of the design. Arrangements for this consist of a foot pedal connected to the engine throttle and two other pedals for braking.

One of these works a controller which changes the motors into an electric brake, generating energy dissipated in grids mounted under the body. By its use the vehicle is slowed up to about three miles per hour. It is then brought to full stop by the application of the other brake pedal, which actuates through an equalizing lever a pair of disk brakes located in each of the rear axles, between the armatures of the G. E. 1131 electric motors.

Disk Type Hand Brakes.

A lever is also connected to the disk type hand operated brakes. At one side of this lever is another that works the main control switch, and connects the motors for series forward, parallel forward, or reverse. The starter button, ignition and lighting switches and door control buttons are all mounted on a small board on the side of the body to the left of the steering wheel.

The power unit, consisting of a Waukesha six-cylinder $4\frac{3}{4}$x$5\frac{1}{2}$ engine coupled to a General Electric No. DT-1132 generator, is mounted transversely under the full width rear seat. The engine exhausts through a stack in the right hand corner of the body to the roof. Air for carburetion is drawn in from the roof through a passage in the other rear corner.

Drive Unit Built Into Axles.

The drive unit is literally built into the rear axles, since the cases of the two motors form part of the two axle housings. That is, there are two electric motors in each of the two rear axles. From each motor a twelve to one gear reduction, made up of one set of helical and one set of spur gears, carries the power to the four wheels of the rear truck.

All six tires are 36x8 high pressure pneumatic. The complete rear truck, including the four electric motors, springs, and torque system, may be detached by loosening four bolts and then rolled out from under the frame. Similarly it is possible to disconnect any one of the electric motors, electrically and mechanically, so that the vehicle can complete its run without danger to the other motors.

VIRGINIA RELATES HISTORY TO TOURISTS IN ITS ROAD MARKERS

RICHMOND, Va.—More than 800 markers, inscribed with brief descriptions of historical and other interesting events, have been placed on the 2,500 miles of hard surface trails which trace this state.

References to George Washington, Lafayette, Rochambeau, John Smith, Pocahontas, Richard Henry Lee, Patrick Henry and Thomas Henry stand in bold type on almost every highway.

Modern history also is told along the roadsides. These inscriptions denote the location of world war training camps, the birthplace of Woodrow Wilson and digests dealing with initial transactions in this country of certain lines of commerce which have grown during the last half century.

Among the most interesting features of this method in emphasizing deeds of past and present are the signs outlining battles which took place. Cornfields now cover many scenes of conflicts in the war between the states, but the memories of deeds of valor contributed by the confederate and union forces are recalled by a number of metal signs.

New Brunswick, Canada, to Spend $10,000,000 on Roads

The province of New Brunswick, Canada, will have a system of hard surfaced trunk highways provided by a construction program extending over five years and involving an expenditure of $10,000,000, for which the provincial government will ask approval of the legislature at its next session, so actual construction work can be started early in the 1930 season. Announcement of adoption of this policy was made by the Hon. John B. M. Baxter, premier of New Brunswick, in a statement issued following a series of special cabinet meetings which have recently been held.

HARD STEERING.

Hard steering is due to lack of oil, misalignment of front wheels, or low pressure in front tires.

MIDWEST STATES PREPARING FOR 1930 ROAD WORK

Illinois Program Held Up by Gas Tax.

The extent of Illinois' paving program depends upon the outcome of gasoline tax litigation now pending in the Supreme court. If the high tribunal sustains the validity of the excise, the state will have approximately $25,000,000 for road building this year; if the fuel tax is nullified there will be about $6,000,000 available.

Neighboring states, however, do not face this uncertainty and are planning for extensive road improvements during 1930.

Indiana in 1929 built 350 miles of concrete and 100 miles of rock asphalt pavement and expects to lay 450 miles of hard surfaced highway this year.

Minnesota will pave about 230 miles in 1930, and will do about 230 miles of grading, 200 miles of gravel surfacing and 280 miles of bituminous treatment. This is about the same amount as in 1929, except paving, which is about double.

Iowa will pave about 1,000 miles, gravel 200 miles and grade 400 miles. The state highway commission estimates the construction expenditures will be $33,000,000. Iowa paved 733 miles in 1929.

Wisconsin expects to build 337 miles of pavement in 1930, to grade and surface with gravel or crushed stone 166 miles, and to grade without surfacing 20 miles. In 1929 Wisconsin built 344 miles of pavement and 475 miles of gravel or rock surfaced roads.

Missouri paved 400 miles, graveled 220 miles and graded an additional 264 miles in 1929. In 1930 Missouri will begin work under its $75,000,000 bond issue and the program includes 457 miles of paving, 486 miles of gravel surfacing and 365 miles of grading.

Michigan will have a total of $24,000,000 available for highway construction in 1930, as compared to $16,500,000 in 1929.

Ohio will spend $23,500,000 for construction in 1930 and spent $18,400,000 in 1929.

IS SOMETHING WRONG WITH 3 MOTORED PLANE?

Recent Crashes Bring Up Safety Question.

BY ROBERT WOOD.

Safety in flying has again become a matter of topical interest as a result of the recent series of air fatalities. While the air line operators and the department of commerce prefer silence about air accidents, the subject of safety is uppermost in the mind of a public which is not so much appalled by the crashes themselves as by the deep mystery which surrounds their causes.

Since the "hush, hush" policy of the air industry has hidden the facts there has been wide speculation of the general causes of crashes. Frequent accidents to tri-motored transport planes has given rise to this question: "Is there something wrong with the three motored design?"

The Newark Crash.

That question was first asked in the case of the Newark air crash. While the pilot's inexperience was generally regarded as the primary cause of that accident, it served to show some of the characteristics of the tri-motored ship in distress. A side motor of a heavily loaded Ford ship cut out. The pilot endeavored to maintain level flight and stretch his glide with diminshed power. The plane lost flying speed and fell in.

The comment of transport pilots with experience in flying tri-motored ships throws some light on the possible faults. It is common knowledge that the efficiency of the center or nose motor in this type of plane is greatly reduced because of their bulky fuselage which distorts the slip stream of the propellor.

Despite this, the full power of the center motor is often accredited in figuring the load a ship may carry. In one model of a widely used tri-motored ship the width of the cabin is five feet. The width of the propellor is eight feet. Thus only three feet of the propellor is able to function properly.

Failure of Side Motor.

That is why the performance of a tri-motored ship is not seriously impaired when the center motor cuts out. But the failure of the side motor is an entirely different matter. Besides taking 300 or 400 horsepower from the total power of the plane, the dead motor becomes a drag upon the progress of the plane and that, with the forward thrust of the propellor of the other side motor, causes the plane to turn toward the side of the dead motor.

This tendency to turn may be corrected by the rudder, but some pilots assert that it is often almos impossible to exert the necessary physical force upon the controls because of the tremendous wind pressure upon the rudder surface. Some claim that more rudder surface is necessary, although an increase in the size of the rudder means increasing the difficulty of operation.

There is another method of correcting this tendency to turn, although it is not generally known. One pilot with wide experience in testing tri-motored ships asserts that a plane with one motor dead may be made to keep in straightforward flight by dropping the wing on the side of the live motor. In this attitude the plane has a tendency to slip sidewise and this motion sets up wind pressure against the side of the fuselage, preventing it from turning.

The Altitude Factor.

The factors of altitude and load also have an important bearing upon the safety of a plane and this points to a need for a more accurate means of ascertaining the ceiling of a tri-motored plane with one motor dead and with a full load and full tanks. Such a plane tested east of the Mississippi may be able to maintain flight at 2,000 feet, but in the far west a much higher ceiling is necessary because of the high altitudes of the terrain.

Why not install the motors above the wing or in the leading edge of the airfoil as the Germans do? is a question often asked. There are certain disadvantages to this position for motors. Dornier sets the motors of his seaplanes above the wing to keep the propellors clear of the water. However, the high position of the motors tends to pull the ship over onto its nose. Especially is this true when the plane is taxiing on the water. The tendency is corrected with the stabilizer which sets up additional drag to the progress of the ship.

Prevents Even Wind Flow.

Aeronautical engineers opposed to the installation of engines in the wing edge point out that this arrangement decreases the efficiency of the section of the airfoil behind the propellor. A slowly moving propellor in such an arrangement prevents the even flow of air around the wing.

The power units of future planes of the multi-motored type may be arranged in tandem under the wing. There is a tendency in that direction, but it has been retarded by a lack of information regarding the performance of the tandem arrangement. The decrease in efficiency of the rear propellor caused by the interference of the forward propellor, is being corrected through the use of the variable pitch propellor.

The Human Element.

The subject of safety in airplanes cannot be discussed without reference to the pilot. Because it is up to him to meet all emergencies it is obvious that no pilot should be allowed to fly a tri-motored ship until he has proved that he is capable of handling it with a full load and a dead motor.

Safety often depends on the ability to land promptly in an emergency. Some lines, however, continue to operate land planes on long water jumps. THE TRIBUNE believes that, in the interests of safety, all planes flying near water should be equipped with pontoons or otherwise built for water landings so that every body of water would be a landing area.

QUESTIONS

Questions relating to aviation are answered in this section by Maj. R. W. Schroeder, famous world war flyer, who formerly held the world's altitude record. Inquiries should be addressed to the Aviation Department, Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Q.—Where can I secure all the information about the army flying course and their planes? Is flying in the army a steady job with pay?—J. M.—Chicago.

A.—Ask the information section, U. S. Army Air Service, Washington, D. C. If you were in the regular army, active duty has regular flying with pay.

Q.—Will you please tell me where I can address John Livingston. What is the correct pronunciation of Waco?—P. C. T.—Sycamore, Ill.

A.—Mr. Livingston can be reached at the Mid-West Airplane company, Aurora, Ill. "Waco" is pronounced with the "a" as in way.

Q.—Besides being a pilot, what are the opportunities for a university graduate in commerce, to work up in the aviation game? Where could I obtain literature on the subject?—G. E. F.—Chicago.

A.—Aviation has a lot to offer besides being a pilot. Aviation parallels the railroad and automobile industries. Air transport companies offer similar positions as railroad companies. The airplane manufacturing business affords the same opportunities as the automobile manufacturing industry. Quite naturally you must qualify. Schooling in some phases of aviation is highly desirable. Why not inquire of some of the aviation schools in Chicago.

Q.—How old must a person be before he can apply for a commercial license? Is the Curtiss Flying school approved by the department of commerce? I am 15 years of age and in second year high school, what would you advise me to do?—W. C.—Chicago.

A.—You must be eighteen, at least, to apply for a commercial pilot's license. The Curtiss Wright Flying school is approved by the department of commerce. If you could afford the time to go to an evening aviation school three nights a week, you would acquire the fundamentals so that when you leave high school you would be further advanced.

Q.—Is the lift of an airplane found by multiplying the unit of pressure by the speed by the velocity squared by the angle of incidence? If not, what does this equasion equal?—M. M. E.—Hermansville, Mich.

A.—The lift of an airplane is found by the formula; LIFT,—K Y A V 2; K Y being the constant lift factor for the particular wing section used, times the area times the velocity squared. The equasion you give I do not believe to be correct.

Q.—I would like to know if the stagger of the wings of a biplane is necessary and why is it necessary? Is the glider easier to fly than an airplane?—A. S. B.—Gary, Ind.

A.—Since stagger adds to the efficiency of a biplane it is considered essential though not absolutely necessary. On account of the interference between the planes of a biplane the lift is reduced and the drag or resistance is increased, this condition is known as biplane interference. Interference between the planes of a biplane may be reduced by placing the upper wing in advance of the lower—i. e.—by a positive stagger; in this way the lift may be increased as much as eight per cent with as much as four per cent gain in resistance. When the planes are staggered the stalling angle is reached less suddenly; the plane has slightly better fore and aft stability, known as longitudinal stability. Gliders are as a rule easy to fly if one will first make a study of the fundamentals of the art of gliding and if his glider is correctly built and flown over situable terrain.

San Diego Protests at Dirigible Anchor Site

SAN DIEGO, Cal.—Civic and commercial groups of this city have lodged a protest against the selection of a 1,700 acre tract at Sunnyvale, near San Francisco, as the site for the west coast dirigible anchorage. The selection was made by the west coast airship board. Congress is asked to set aside the board's decision. San Diego and Los Angeles interests are endeavoring to have the base located at Camp Kearney, where it is claimed the climatic conditions are better. Half of the 2,000 acre tract at Camp Kearney has been offered free to the government.

AIR TEACHERS TO MEET TO TALK OVER PROBLEMS

Sessions in St. Louis Feb. 17, 18, and 19.

The Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America has announced plans for a national conference on aeronautical education Feb. 17, 18 and 19 in St. Louis, Mo., to consider problems commonly faced by educators teaching aeronautics in universities, colleges, secondary, and elementary schools.

The conference, called by the educational committee of the organization, is the result of the widespread interest in aeronautical education built up during the past year. It will provide the first opportunity for educators in the several different fields of aeronautical education to study their common problems and to seek the aid of the industry in their solution.

Aircraft Exposition.

The three day meeting has been scheduled during the international aircraft exposition, sponsored by the chamber, so that professors of aeronautical engineering, instructors in aviation economics, and secondary and elementary school teachers may have an opportunity to see the latest products of aeronautical research during their attendance at the national conference.

There are 61 universities and colleges widely scattered throughout the United States offering courses in aeronautics. These institutions reported an enrollment of 2,406 students in aviation courses in a recent survey of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce.

Increase in Schools.

There are also 21 elementary school systems, 93 junior high schools, 130 senior high schools, 17 evening schools, 7 continuation schools, 3 trade schools, and 1 vocational high school offering aeronautical training of some kind to tens of thousands of students interested in the industry. During 1929 there was a tenfold increase in the number of secondary schools offering courses in aeronautics.

Prof. Roland H. Spaulding of New York university, chairman of the educational committee will be chairman of the conference. The Daniel Guggenheim fund committee on secondard and elementary aeronautical education is coöperating with the chamber in calling the conference.

Congress to Get Bill for Air Training at Colleges

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A bill to provide for aviation training at colleges and universities with the reserve officer training corps will be introduced in congress, Representative Melvin J. Maas, St. Paul, Minn., has announced.

The bill, he said, would provide for a four year ground school course. All students showing proficiency and promise in these courses would be given three months of flight training annually at an army air corps field for reserve commissions. Representative Maas recently completed a 12,000 mile inspection of army posts and flying fields and returned an enthusiastic advocate of aviation, it is said.

Airplane Lines Offering Special Excursion Rates

Excursion rates have come to aviation. Special rates for Saturday and Sunday pleasure trips or for week-end visits have been announced for three of the air passenger lines of the Universal Aviation corporation, division of the Aviation corporation. The Cleveland-Chicago, Chicago-Kansas City and the St. Louis-Chicago lines are the ones upon which the excursion rates have been put into effect.

Scott Field Has New Tank to Store Helium

A new tank for the storing of helium gas, used for the inflation of dirigibles, was recently completed at Scott field at Belleville, Ill., at a cost of $48,000. The tank has a capacity of 300,000 cubic feet. Another tank at the field has a capacity of 500,000 cubic feet.

U. S. AIRPLANES IN 1929 FLEW 200 MILLION MI.

New York, Feb. 8.—American aircraft flew nearly 200 million miles during 1929 to establish the United States as the leader in world air transport operations, according to a report of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America.

The report, which will be published in full in "The Aircraft Year Book for 1930," shows that civilian, commercial, and government planes flew 197,546,590 miles during the year. Civilian and commercial flight was more than three times as great as military and government activities, planes in the former class covering 149,579,451 miles as compared to 47,967,139 in the latter.

"America's major air transport lines, operating on regular schedules, flew more than twenty million miles during the year, carried more than seven million pounds of mail, and transported more than 165,000 passengers to double and treble previous peak figures," the report says.

Night Service Unparalleled.

"Passengers, mail and express, were being flown more than 90,000 miles every 24 hours, serving a territory with ninety million population. Scheduled transport lines were flying one-third of this distance between dusk and dawn on lighted airways, providing night service unparalleled anywhere else in the world.

"Although the number of air transport operators dropped from 32 to 27 during 1929 due to consolidations, the number of planes in service more than doubled, jumping from 294 to 619. Miles flown by the 27 major transport operators included in the survey totaled 20,242,891 as compared to 10,472,024 in 1928. Passenger business on air lines throughout the country tripled. In 1928 52,934 passengers were carried, while last year saw 165,263 people ride the air lines in the United States.

"Mail poundage reported doubled the 1928 figures, 7,096,930 pounds being carried in 1929 as compared to 3,632,059 pounds in 1928 and 1,222,843 poupds in 1927. Express carried was reported at 197,538 pounds.

"Mail and express lines flew a total of 13,344,172 miles, while passengers were flown a total of 14,889,850 miles during 1929," according to the chamber report.

These figures in the report include only scheduled operations on regular passenger, mail, and express lines and did not include short hops or chartered flights.

3,000,000 Passengers Go Up..

Statistical estimates based on reports of typical operators and computed to include 800 aerial service operators in the United States show that their planes flew 104,336,560 miles and carried 2,995,530 passengers. Private flying in the United States increased from twelve million to twenty-five million miles during 1929, according to the report.

"This phenomenal expansion of the lines can be traced to increased public support, which resulted in the active participation of major financial interests and the backing of established air transport lines, bringing about a transition from corporation effort to group control," the report states. "It was the formation of large groups and the stronger financial setups that resulted, that influenced the development of air transport during 1929 more than any other single factor."

JUNCTION FIELDS SUGGESTED FOR TRANSPORT SHIPS

Prediction that airports of a kind which may be termed junction ports will be developed in the future was made here recently at a convention of the industrial property division of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, meeting in St. Louis, by Philip R. Love of Love-Sultan, Inc., St. Louis, specialist in airport requirements.

The function of a junction airport would be much the same as that of a railroad junction and development of such ports would help to solve the present difficulty of getting proper landing fields for safe operation of the huge multimotored transport panes and at the same time landing passengers near enough to the center of the city to give air transportation the maximum value in economizing traveling time.

"Not all airports need to be, or can be, of a type to accommodate properly the larger transport planes," Mr. Love said. "Today it is practically impossible to draw a circle of a one hundred mile radius on the map of the more thickly populated states which would not include one or more recognized landing fields where service facilities are available."

AIR TRAVEL BUREAU.

The National Air Travelers association has been appointed as the official air travel bureau of the Chicago Motor club.

FAMOUS FLYERS TO BE GUESTS AT LEGION MEETING

Aviation celebrities from all over the country are expected here on Feb. 20 to attend the second annual reunion for pilots who flew in the world war. Preparations for the reunion are being rapidly completed by the Chicago Aviation post of the American Legion.

Various organizations are planning entertainment for the visiting flyers during their three day stay here. The annual reunion banquet is to be held in the Sherman hotel on the night of Feb. 20. Among the speakers on that occasion will be William P. MacCracken Jr., former secretary of commerce for aeronautics, and Clarence M. Young, who now holds that post.

Lieut. James Doolittle, famous stunting ace of the army, Capt. Frank Hawks, holder of two transcontinental speed records, and many other famous flyers have accepted the Legion post's invitation to attend.

Cigar Butts from Planes Cause of Forest Fires

Civilization has again attacked the forests, and this time from a most unexpected quarter. The forest service of the United States department of agriculture recently reported that sveral serious fires have been started from cigarets and cigars thrown from airplanes. A series of tests showed that two thirds of the cigarets discarded from airplanes at altitudes up to 1,000 feet were still lighted when they reached the ground, and that all the cigars recovered in the experiments were still burning even after a drop of from 500 to 1,000 feet.

U. S. HAS 6,482 LICENSED PLANES, 9,279 PILOTS

WASHINGTON, D. C.—There are now in the United States 6,482 active airplane licenses and 3,109 airplane identifications issued by the aeronautics branch of the department of commerce, according to Gilbert G. Budwig, director of licensing and inspection. Active pilots' licenses now number 9,279; students' permits, 28,738; active mechanics' licenses, 7,196.

Approved type certificates issued for aircraft now total 271, the director stated. Approved type certificates issued for engines now number 32, and 134 of these certificates have been issued for propellers. Flying schools which have been approved number 22; flying instructors approved, 88, and ground instructors approved, 129.

On June 30, 1928, 5,137 pilots' licenses had been issued, 4,587 renewed, 15,864 student permits issued, 4,379 aircraft licenses issued, 727 aircraft licenses renewed, 3,256 identication marks assigned, 3,264 mechanics' licenses issued, and 75 mechanics' licenses renewed.

New Airplane Clock with Four Hands Is Devised

A new aviation clock with two sets of hands, one mechanically operated and the other manually controlled, has been designed by the Pioneer Instrument company and the Waltham Watch company. A pair of red hands are set to mark the starting time of any particular flight. The difference between the starting and the landing time shown upon the face of the clock is a visual record of the flying hours.

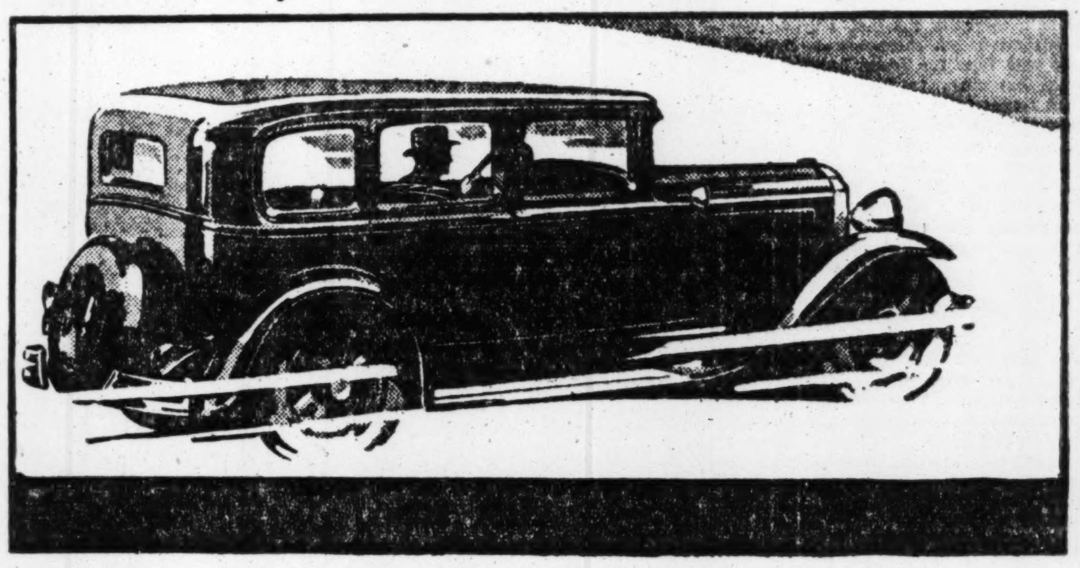
BUILT TO OUT-PERFORM

. . . the vital reason why BUICK outsells every other fine car by 2 to 1



Keep in mind, when you buy your car, that you are buying miles—and that you will get more and better miles in a Buick, as more than 2,400,000 owners have proved.

Buick builds so thoroughly—builds such extra strength and stamina into the Buick Valve-in-Head engine and sealed chassis—that many Buicks, five, ten or fifteen years of age, are still in service . . . and the speedometers of many of these cars register 100,000 miles and more.

You reap the full benefit of Buick's extra mileage whether you drive your Buick 10,000—50,000—or 100,000 miles. You enjoy finer, more faithful performance, day after day and mile after mile. You obtain greater motoring satisfaction all the way through—greater power, greater stamina, greater value.

Buick is built to out-perform. This, together with the beauty and comfort of Buick's Bodies by Fisher, explains why America is driving 700,000 more Buicks than any other car in Buick's price class . . . and why Buick today wins from two to five times as many buyers as any other car priced above $1200.

Come, see Buick's wide range of body types. Then take the wheel! A single drive will convince you that Buick is the big motor car value of the day.

WAR OR THREAT OF WAR USED TO GAIN TERRITORY

Extend Boundaries by Main Strength.

BY CLIFFORD RAYMOND.

Nearly every square mile of American territory, continental or insular, was obtained for present day uses by force or threat of using it, by war or threat of war. [Naturally, because another people, in the case of each acquisition, either had the land or wanted to get it.]

Some of it, in the end, was acquired peaceably, but even when the transaction is to be classified as transfer by purchase there had been the pressure of force, the threat to use it on one side and the fear of its being used on the other.

Most of the Indian claims were satisfied, ostensibly, by some sort of a treaty, but that, of course, only indicated that the conflict was resulting as was foreordained by the relative resources of the contestants and that the victims of it were making the best of their fate. It was sardonic that Mr. Penn's Quaker attempt to have a just settlement without compulsion resulted in giving Pennsylvania one of the bloodiest Indian records.

Bound by Treaty.

The treaty of Paris, which ratified the success of the colonies' desire and struggle for independence, left them with a great area not possessed when they went to war, the Northwest territory, later made into the central states north of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi. By the Quebec act of the British parliament in 1774 this territory had been added to Canada. Great Britain had been cooping its unruly children up.

George Rogers Clark added this territory to the domain of the United States by invading it with a small but hardy band of frontiersmen, occupying the French towns of Kaskaskia and Cahokia, on or near the Mississippi, and capturing the British garrison in the French town of Vincennes on the Wabash. [Clark's force of some 170 against Vincennes was nearly half composed of French villagers along the Mississippi, won over by his tact and forcefulness. It may be less well known that Spain made a furtive attempt on the Northwest territory in 1781, capturing St. Joseph, Mich., from the British.]

Put to Hard Test.

The material developments from this use of force, insignificant in its man power but indomitable in its leadership, are simply astonishing. The new nation, gaining its freedom, had an invaluable thing, public domain, a bond of common possession, requiring some cessions of various state pretensions and claims, a unionizing influence, something to legislate for as a federal holding and dispose of as a nation for its advancement. The Northwest territory, even as a moral value, can't be overestimated. It was gained by force, just a little force, applied at just the right time in just the right manner, by just the right man.

A Giant Real Estate Deal.

The story of the purchase of the Louisiana territory may seem to be one of a real estate deal in which the desire of the purchaser to buy was aided opportunely by the necessity of the possessor to sell, but within that transaction and preliminary to it were hair raising possibilities which required resolution and a strong front. Here are some of them: 1. That Napoleon would seriously undertake the planting of a French colonial empire in the Mississippi valley. 2. That if he did, the British would attack to checkmate him and seize the valley and its beyond, to add it to Canada. 3. That if he succeeded and the British did not, he would add Canada to French Louisiana. 4. That before anything else could be done the western Americans would break loose and attack the Spanish on the river to open it without restriction to their trade.

Jefferson, who put through the purchase, threatened to make war if he could not have his way. He desired it to be intimated to the First Consul that French obduracy would force an Anglo-American alliance, the navies of which would control the seas and drive every other nation back within its national confines.

The Virginia philosopher nowhere appears more bellicose, more concerned with questions encircling the largest territorial importance, or more willing to insist upon continental pretensions for the American future. He did not need external promptings. His internal urge was enough.

Fell Back on Basic Principle.

Jefferson for the basis of his policy nearly always fell back upon a moral principle in preference to a theory or a legalism. In the instance of the Mississippi the basic principle was the droit des gens, the right of people to their natural advantages, natural law coincident and coöperating with the natural rights of the individual—the right to the enjoyment of what God had given him, a natural right which could be maintained by an individual or by a people. The right to the Mississippi as claimed by the United States was a droit des gens.

The matter was touch and go for a long time, with war involved at a step, but Jefferson's persistence and Napoleon's needs combined to prevent. The British were ready to send an expedition to occupy the Mississippi valley. April 10, 1803, Napoleon called in his two ministers Talleyrand and Lebrun, and told them he regarded the proposed colony as lost. The treaty of sale was concluded May 4, signed May 8, and dated April 30. Un-

BY FRED HARVEY.
(New York stock list on page 9.)
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 8.—Again the stock market confounded the wise ones by staging a neat little advance as a climax to a week fraught with trial to traders in both camps.

They thought, the experts did, that the trend would continue downward what with the course pointed by yesterday's operations, and those of the day before and the inevitable week-end profit taking everything. They had agreed among themselves that the market was "tired out" by two weeks of steady advance and in need of rest, and that nothing more of a constructive nature could be expected until something developed to stimulate speculative interest.

But once more, it must be gently urged, that one never can tell about a stock especially. It was on the cards that prices should tilt upward as a climax to the week and tilt they did some a fraction, some a point, and some even four or five.

Aggressive Buying.

Aggressive bullish activities in a number of special groups, notably the railroads, tobacco and food shares, turned the trick. Buying of some of the carrier and tobacco issues was especially spirited, most of the tobaccos, including American Tobacco B, Lorillard, Porto Rican B, Liggett & Myers mounting to new higher for the year.

There was a tale around the street that manufacturers are planning another increase in the wholesale price of cigarettes in the very near future and although an official of one of the concerns involved issued an official denial of the report, it kept persisting and evidently received influencial credence.

Railroad stocks were in the spotlight throughout the abbreviated trading session. Dealings in Canadian Pacific which have been greatly stimulated by news that the shares are to be split four for one, soared to a new high record price and went into the week-end record with a net gain of 5 points to add to the 17 point advance of yesterday. Pennsylvania, Chesapeake and Ohio and New York Central, among others, sold at their best recent price, some of them being turned over in comparatively heavy volume.

Trading in Western Union.

Evidently the rails have many friends who have been merely waiting for some good excuse to bid up their stocks and they seem to have found one in development in Canadian Pacific.

Rumors of an impending splitup in Western Union brought increased buying in that old line favorite and at one time it was a good four points above last night's closing level. Realizing rubbed out most of the gain before the close, however.

Simons ran into further selling but managed to rally a bit in the late dealings. The oils continued heavy. Coppers and motors eased anew in the early trading but stiffened a bit toward the last.

CHICAGO BANK STOCKS CONTINUE MOVEMENT TOWARD HIGHER MARK

Chicago bank stocks continued to show an upward trend last week, with the most pronounced strength being evident in Northern Trust company, which was carried up another 55 points to 925 bid, offered at 935. Foreman-State National also kept in the foreground, being in demand at 785 with limited offerings at 790, up 15. Peoples Trust & Savings was lifted 10 points to 495 bid, 502 asked, and First National 10 points to 705 to 708.

The remainder of the list was dull and slightly irregular. Closing prices follow: Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, 689 to 692; Union Bank of Chicago, 325 to 332; Harris Trust, 850 to 855; National Bank of the Republic, 149 to 152, and Central Trust Company of Illinois, 401 to 404.

New York, Feb. 8.—(AP)—Production of steel ingots during January, as computed by the American Iron and Steel institute, totaled 3,786,319 tons, and reflected the revival of activity in the industry since the first of the year. Operations averaged at 71.51 per cent of rated mill capacity, compared to 59.07 in December.

SYNDICATE BUYS INDIANA SITE FOR NEW STEEL CITY

Will Be Christened Port Williams.

Port Williams is the name of a new steel city which is to make its appearance soon in the great industrial section of northern Indiana, according to Roscoe E. Woods, of Roscoe E. Woods & Co., Hammond real estate firm. This town, Mr. Woods said, is to serve the giant plant which the National Steel corporation has announced it proposes to erect near Gary within the next few years at a cost of between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000.

Mr. Woods stated yesterday that he represents a syndicate composed of Chicago and northern Indiana business men which has secured control of approximately 1,390 acres of land near the proposed plant site through contract of purchase. When the contract is completed—sometime this spring—Mr. Woods said engineers would lay out a skeleton plan for the town.

Nine Miles East of Gary.

The land acquired by the syndicate is nine miles east of Gary, between Burns Ditch and Baileytown, and lies between the Dunes highway and the Michigan Central railway.

"I expect that Port Williams will be a city of from 30,000 to 50,000 people within ten years," Mr. Woods predicted. "When the development is completed it should represent an investment of about $50,000,000. This, of course, would include private building. In laying out the city site we shall set aside grounds for schools, small parks and other public uses. The owning syndicate proposes to complete a skeleton plan and then to market the ground on a wholesale scale, leaving the actual development to private interests.

Mr. Woods said that the National Steel corporation, which bought its 1,100 acre site from Insull interests early in January, proposes to build a harbor—based on Burns Ditch—for the reception of ships carrying ore. It will be the fourth Indiana port on Lake Michigan, the others being Indiana Harbor, Michigan City and Buffington—the Universal Atlas Cement company's private harbor.

Named for Steel Chief.

The National Steel corporation, it will be recalled, is a merger of the Weirton Steel company, the Great Lakes Steel company, and subsidiaries of the M. A. Hanna Steel company of Cleveland. When Ernest T. Weir, chairman of the board of the big steel firm, announced plans for the Chicagoland development he said that work should start within three years. The Chicago district development is to follow completion of the firm's Detroit plant, now under construction, which is to cost $25,000,000.

Port Williams is being named for John Williams, president of the steel company. It will be served by the South Shore Electric line, the New York Central railway, the Indiana Harbor Belt and the Michigan Central.

INVESTMENT TRUSTS NOW SEEK PUBLICITY, IS SPONSORS' CLAIM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 8.—The rules of the stock exchange concerning annual statements of investment trusts are not proving onerous to these companies, according to their sponsors.

While only a dozen investment trusts have applied for listing on the exchange, many other companies are considering the step, and this is held to be proof that the requirements of full publicity do not constitute a hardship to the trusts. During recent months, scores of investment trusts have voluntarily made public the complete list of their holdings, as a result of the trend toward greater publicity.

Commenting on this trend in a recent report, State Senator Nelson W. Cheney, chairman of the joint executive committee which investigated the investment trust situation declared that there was no need of special laws requiring the trusts to make their investments public, since it was becoming increasingly difficult for trusts to market their securities without giving full facts and figures concerning their operations.

Despite the recent rise in investment trust stocks, many of these issues are still selling at a discount of from 10 to 30 per cent compared with their break-up value. As long as this condition prevails, according to brokers, investment trusts will seek to bolster the price of their issues by announcing their complete list of holdings and the exact status of the company at regular intervals.

Cites Change in Trend of Tax Levying

BY SCRUTATOR.

Those who maintain that reforms in taxation to take a greater portion of the burden from the general and special property classifications are needed have a case. Yet it is seldom pointed out that the trend is already away from this form and that taxes on incomes, licenses, and permits are taking on a greater importance year by year.

The federal government, according to a survey published by the national industrial conference board, derives more than 65 per cent of its revenues from income taxes. This compares with 4 per cent in 1912. The government does derive an important amount of money from estate taxes, which are in effect a levy on the right to make a will.

Although the maximum charge against estates has been reduced to 20 per cent, with credit given for such taxes paid to states, and although the rate is much less than in some European countries, this tax has the bad features of the general property levy and the additional one that it tends to destroy income taxes in the higher brackets, or even to destroy wealth.

Reduce Proportion.

State governments steadily are reducing the proportion of their revenues that come from property taxes. In 1927 they got only 34.7 per cent thus. They got 37 per cent of total revenues in 1926 and 50 per cent in 1922 from these sources.

It is well known that in the last seven or eight years the federal government has been reducing its collections, a movement that probably has reached an end. On the other hand the states and smaller taxing bodies have been adding to theirs. The burden for the states' increase has not fallen most heavily on land, realty improvements, and property in general in the last seven years.

In 1927, collections for state purposes levied against motor vehicles were 18.4 per cent of the total, general business licenses were 18.7 and gasoline taxes were 12.2 per cent. Approximately half the money available for spending by states on the current basis came from these special taxes, and more than 30 per cent from the automobile owner. Figures for the last two years are not available, but they will unquestionably show a growth in such special payments.

Lean on Property Tax.

The county, municipal, and other local bodies are the ones which lean on the property tax. They obtain 93 per cent of their revenues by assessing general property. The money, usually, is spent within a few miles of where it is collected. It goes to schools, to streets, to police protection and to services that generally benefit the property that pays the bills. Proximity to schools and good local highways are valuable for the sale of all real estate.

All the talking points are not on the side of those who want to have general property taxes relieved by increased levies against incomes, against the doing of business or against the motorist. Some states do not even put all the gas tax money in roads. A recent communication related that insurance company license taxes go only in part to support insurance departments. Injustices are not confined to any one form of taxation.

SHUBERT CORP. EXPLAINS LOSS ON OPERATIONS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 8.—Difficulties with stage hands and musicians, light attendance at shows due to the stock market collapse, and talking picture competition are given as the reasons for a net loss of $972,055 by the Shubert Theater corporation during the six months ended Dec. 31, 1929, according to the semi-annual report of the company issued today.

In the corresponding months of 1928 the corporation made a net profit of $470,882 after interest, depreciation and federal taxes, equivalent to $2.51 a share.

The report, however, states that with the beginning of January operations of the company turned profitable and have been profitable each week since. In discussing the loss shown, the report says:

"The Shubert management is not pessimistic as to the future of the industry. Theater attendance is recovering from the effects of the stock market crash and the limits of talkie competition are becoming defined. The management expects gradually to eliminate non-profitable theaters."

Confirms Report of Pennsy. Voting to Boost Capital

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 8.—(AP)—Official announcement by the company has confirmed reports from New York that the stockholders of the Pennsylvania railroad at their annual meeting in April would be asked to authorize an increase in the capital stock to the extent of $170,000,000 for future issue. When the recent issues are completed, only about $30,000,000 of the present authorized stock will be available for issue, so that the creation of new stock is essential for the company's future needs. The company's present authorized capital is $700,000,000.

State, Local Govts.' Bonded Debt Exceeds 12½ Billions

New York, Feb. 8.—(AP)—The national industrial conference board has announced that combined net bonded indebtedness of state and local governments in the United States in 1928 totaled $12,678,900,000, a new peak year. This figure compares with $7,264,200,000 for 1922 and $3,196,200,000 in the pre-war days of 1913. The conference also noted that the indebtedness per capita rose from $33.11 in 1913, to $85.49 in 1925 and more than $100 in 1928.

BANK RATES ARE NOW RELAXED TO MEET CHANGE

Make 33 Reductions Since October.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 8.—The worldwide relaxation of credit which has followed the collapse of the stock market speculation here last October has been reflected in an unusually large number of reductions in central bank rates.

Since the end of October last no less than 33 reductions in central bank rates, involving 16 banks of issue, have taken place. Some of these banks, like the Bank of England, have effected four successive cuts. The Federal Reserve Bank of New York, the Reichsbank and one or two other institutions have made three successive reductions in the last few months.

From a condition of world-wide credit strain, the direct result of the absorption of funds in security speculation here, the money markets have declined to a position of ease approximating that which obtained two years ago. In the case of the Bank of France, which now maintains the lowest rate in the world, 3 per cent, the charge for member bank borrowing has dropped to levels which last obtained in 1912, before the Balkan wars.

Reversal of Trend.

The recent decline in central bank rates reverses a trend which occupied the major part of last year and which gave rise to grave concern in international banking circles. The Bank of England rate was forced up from 4½ per cent at the beginning of 1929 to 6½ per cent on Sept. 26. The Reichsbank rate was lifted from 6½ per cent to 7½ per cent and the rediscount rate of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York advanced to 6 per cent.

The downward movement in central bank rate began immediately after the first severe deflation in the stock market here. On Oct. 31, the Bank of England and the Federal Reserve Bank of New York took the first step with a reduction from 6½ per cent to 6 per cent by the former and from 6 per cent to 5 per cent by the latter.

Ten European central banks followed the initiative of the Bank of England during the following month, November, two of them, those of Holland and Danzig, effecting two reductions in the same month. In addition, one South American central bank reduced its rate, having advanced it earlier in the month. This was the Reserve Bank of Peru, which lifted its rate from 7 per cent to 8 per cent on Nov. 13 and Nov. 23 reduced it to 7 per cent again.

November Slashes.

Following are the central banks which reduced their rates in November:

Nov. 1, Bank of the Netherlands, 5½ per cent to 5 per cent; Nov. 2, Reichsbank, 7½ per cent to 7 per cent; Nov. 2, Bank of Danzig, 6½ per cent to 6 per cent; Nov. 4, National Bank of Hungary, 8 per cent to 7½ per cent; Nov. 14, National Bank of Belgium, 5 per cent to 4½ per cent; Nov. 15, Federal Reserve Bank of New York, 5 per cent to 4½ per cent; Nov. 15, Bank of Poland, 9 per cent to 8½ per cent; Nov. 16, Bank of the Netherlands, 5 per cent to 4½ per cent; Nov. 21, Bank of England, 6 per cent to 5½ per cent; Nov. 22, Bank of Norway, 6 per cent to 5½ per cent; Nov. 23, Austrian National bank, 8½ per cent to 8 per cent; Nov. 23, Bank of Danzig, 6½ per cent to 6 per cent; Nov. 26, National Bank of Rumania, 9½ per cent to 9 per cent; Nov. 28, Reserve Bank of Peru, 8 per cent to 7 per cent.

Besides the advance made during the month by the Reserve Bank of Peru, prior to the reduction of its rate, one other South American central bank, that of the Republic of Colombia, advanced its rate during the month from 8 per cent to 9 per cent.

More Moderate Pace.

The movement toward lower central bank rates continued at a more moderate pace during December, the Bank of England again leading the procession with a reduction from 5½ per cent to 5 per cent. During December, the following banks reduced their rates:

Dec. 12, Bank of England, 5½ per cent to 5 per cent; Dec. 13, Bank of Sweden, 5½ per cent to 5 per cent; Dec. 27, Bank of Denmark, 5½ per cent to 5 per cent; Dec. 28, Bank of Norway, 5½ per cent to 5 per cent; Dec. 29, Austrian National bank, 8 per cent to 7½ per cent.

In January eight European central banks and one South American institution lowered their discount rates. The most noteworthy of these changes was the cut in the Bank of France rate from 3½ per cent to 3 per cent. The Bank of France had maintained its low rate all during the period in which other central banks had been forced to higher and higher levels. The reduction in its rate came as the result of a heavy influx of gold to that country which had lifted French gold holdings to the highest point in history and second only to the gold holdings of the United States.

Central Bank Cuts.

Following are the central banks which reduced their rates in January: Jan. 1, Bank of Belgium, 4½ per cent to 3½ per cent; Jan. 1, Bank of Sweden, 5 per cent to 4½ per cent; Jan. 14, Reichsbank, 7 per cent to 6½ per cent; Jan. 16, Bank of the Netherlands, 4½ per cent to 4 per cent; Jan. 25, Austrian National bank, 7½ per cent to 7 per cent; Jan. 25, National Bank of Hungary, 7½ per cent to 7 per cent; Jan. 31, Bank of France, 3½ per cent to 3 per cent; Jan. 31, Bank of Poland, 8½ per cent to 8 per cent; Jan. 14, Central Bank of Ecuador, 10 per cent to 9 per cent.

Thus far in February three important central bank changes have been recorded, those of the Reichsbank, the Bank of England, and the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. They will undoubtedly be followed very shortly by reductions on the part of other central banks, since the majority of the banks of issue of the smaller countries follow closely the lead of these important institutions.

The Reichsbank on Feb. 5 reduced its rate from 6½ per cent to 6 per cent, making the third reduction for that institution since Nov. 1 and bringing the rate down to below where it stood a year ago.

Effect of Reversal.

Last Thursday the Bank of England announced a reduction in its rate from 5 per cent to 4½ per cent and the same day the rediscount rate of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York was reduced from 4½ per cent to 4 per cent. Both rates became effective on Feb. 7.

The rapidity with which the adjustment from tight credit conditions to easy credit conditions has been accomplished is in keeping with the sharpness of the stock market decline here. The insatiable appetite of our securities markets for credit drew to this country large amounts of European funds which were not released until there had been drastic liquidation of stock market loans and an abatement of the demand for fresh credit. The immediate effect of this reversal was a heavy outflow of gold from this country to Europe at the close of last year. That flow has now ceased and the adjustment of world credit appears virtually complete.

CHICAGO STOCKS STRONG; INSULL ISSUES CLIMB

Commonwealth Edison Co. Up 17 Points.

Unusually heavy trading in the Insull public utility and investment issues gave the Chicago stock market an active and strong week-end session yesterday. The total turnover for the two hours was 258,300 shares, making one of the most active Saturdays in recent weeks.

Middle West Utilities led in activity with more than 83,000 shares traded and advanced two points to 33½, a new high for the current movement. Commonwealth Edison soared 17 points to 280 and Public Service of Northern Illinois no-par stock jumped 11 points. At the same time gains ranging to more than two points were established by Central and Southwest Utilities, Midland Utilites, and Central Public Service "A."

Assets Appreciate.

Insull Utilities Investment common and second preferred mounted 2¾ and 4½ points respectively, while the 6 per cent bonds were up 2¼ points. Corporation Securities added another point to its recent advance. These issues were influenced by reports that the recent advance in the Insull utilities issues have resulted in considerable appreciation of their assets since the end of 1929.

Chicago Corporation common moved up a small fraction but the preferred was fractionally lower. Chicago Investors common and preferred made fractional gains. Continental Chicago finished unchanged, as also did Railroad Shares.

The automotive and radio groups held firm. Zenith and U. S. Radio advanced more than a point each, while Grigsby-Grunow gained a bare fraction. Borg-Warner and Bendix made fractional gains. On light trading, Winton Engine and Nachman Springfilled rose a point or more but Pines Winterfront sagged a point.

In the general list, Brown Fence "A" and "B" advanced 1½ and 3½ points respectively on announcement of regular dividend declarations, concerning which there had been adverse rumors. U. S. Gypsum jumped 3¾ points and Gleaner and Unit Corporation preferred gained a point each. Fractional gains were recorded by Art Metal, Associated Telephone Utilities, and Jefferson Electric. Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line, Inland Utilities, and Seaboard Utilities finished unchanged. Cities Service lost a small fraction.

List Minor Gains.

On light trading gains of a point or more were made by Fitz Simons and Connell, Lincoln Printing, Modine Manufacturing, and North American Light and Power. But American Equities and Kalamazoo Stove declined more than a point each.

The fifty most active stocks traded on the Chicago exchange last week had a market value of $2,355,210,968 at the close of business yesterday, compared with $2,254,253,097 at the close of the previous week, according to a compilation by Swift, Langill and Henke. This represents an increase of $100,957,871, or 4.47 per cent. The analysis shows that 28 of these stocks were listed and traded in last year. These stocks had a market value of $640,225,114 yesterday, compared with $514,597,181 on Feb. 8, 1929, an increase of $125,627,933, or 24.41 per cent.

The Bragg-Kliesrath Vacuum Booster Brake corporation, Long Island, N. Y., was added to the acquisitions of the Bendix Brake corporation yesterday with the announcement from Vincent Bendix that his concern had purchased the Long Island concern.

OFFERINGS OF BOND ISSUES SHOW LETUP

Total of New Financing Is $70,403,000.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 8.—There was a noticeable falling off in new offerings of bonds this week, compared with the heavy bond financing done during the previous weeks. The total for this week was $70,403,000, against $127,441,000 last week, $177,431,324 two weeks ago and $293,398,000 three weeks ago.

Although fair increases in the amount of foreign and railroad financing were noted this week, public utility financing was sharply lower and municipal financing was down slightly.

The principal offering this week was the issue of 35,000 debentures of Siemens & Halske A. G. of Germany, priced at $933 each, by Dillon, Read & Co. Of this amount, a substantial block was taken by International General Electric company, and a portion was also placed in the European market. The issue matures in 1,000 years, with the interest rate based on the payments made on the common stock.

Rail Financing.

The railroad financing this week consisted of two issues of bonds of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad company, one of $15,000,000 first and refunding mortgage 4½s, priced to yield 4.74 per cent, and $5,000,000 of the road's unified mortgage 4s, priced to net 4.65 per cent. Both issues were brought out by J. P. Morgan & Co.

The only other piece of railroad financing done this week was that of an issue of $2,500,000 Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee Railroad company 6 per cent notes, marketed by Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., to yield 7 per cent.

Largest Municipal Loan.

The largest municipal loan of the week was the issue of $4,750,000 commonwealth of Massachusetts 4s, which were offered at prices to yield 3.80 to 4.00 per cent. Most of the bonds were placed in Boston. Only seven other municipal loans were placed on the market during the week, ranging in size from $225,000 to $1,400,000.

With several important pieces of railroad and public utility financing now being discussed with bankers, there is a likelihood that next week's bond offering may exceed this week's total. Municipal financing will be relatively small unless the state of Arkansas officials decide to go ahead with plans to market an issue of $18,000,000 on Wednesday.

One of the most elaborate summer homes on Lake Geneva has changed hands. The residence, built by the late N. W. Harris of the Harris Trust and Savings bank, has been sold by Haddon MacLean, vice president of the Harris Safe Deposit company, to Walden W. Shaw for a reported price of $160,000.

WALDEN W. SHAW.

Henry T. Davis has announced plans for a $1,800,-000 hotel to be erected at the southeast corner of Davis street and Hinman avenue, Evanston. There are to be 189 apartments of one, two, and three rooms. There will be no "children not wanted" sign in the lobby. On the contrary, there will be special features, including a playroom in the basement for youngsters residing in the apartments.

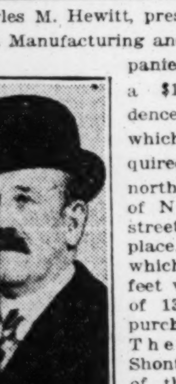
Charles M. Hewitt, president of the Hewitt Manufacturing and other companies, is to erect a $100,000 residence on land which he has acquired at the northeast corner of North State street and Burton place. The lot, which fronts 60 feet with a depth of 130 feet, was purchased from Theodore P. Shonts, president of the Interboro Metropolitan railroad of New York City, for $48,500. The property, which is vacant, was purchased by Mr. Shonts about ten years ago.



C. M. HEWITT.

Henry H. Getty has purchased from Jesse S. Hildrup the property at the northwest corner of Halsted and 116th streets, 296x171 feet, and 216 other lots in the same subdivision for $36,-376. About 225 lots altogether were conveyed.

Mandel Brothers, through the agency of R. E. Ismond & Co., have leased the second floor of the Jevne building at 109-11 Wabash avenue, 48x150 feet, for five years from May 1 at $3,200 a year. The building is five stories high and is only partly tenanted. Mandel Brothers occupy the building to the south and will get access to the floor leased by constructing archways in the wall.

Story & Clark have leased the four story and basement building at 255-57 Wabash avenue, 40x180 feet, from Mrs. Louisa Joy for five years at $9,000 a year.

CHEMISTS WORK TO CONVERT FARM WASTE INTO GOLD

Value to Agriculture Is Growing.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Chemistry, which has become the all important servant of industry, is likewise becoming increasingly valuable in agriculture. That this is recognized by the federal department of agriculture accounts for the fact that some 120 projects have been under way in the field of chemistry and soils during the last year.

"Widening of markets, better prices for various farm products, and the development of new lines of industrial manufacture are objectives of our work," Dr. Henry G. Knight, in charge of the bureau that has specialized on utilization of farm and industrial wastes, explained.

The development of cornstalk paper of great bursting strength and folding endurance and the making of fiber board from cornstalks have been investigated and progress is being made to utilize this great farm waste in cooperation with state experiment stations.

Use Sweet Potato Culls.

The possibilities of utilizing lignin, one of the three great components of agricultural wastes, have been carried to the point of producing eugenol and guiacol, products of value to druggists and possibly other industrial fields. Lignin comprises 30 per cent of the dry material of all vegetation and is wasted at the rate of about 40,000,000 tons annually, Dr. Knight states.

Even sweet potato culls are expected to contribute their mite to the chemists' diligent efforts. Hitherto great quantities of spuds, too small to market, have been wasted in southern states. Now these scientists show how they can be used in the form of starch. A factory has been erected, designed to extract starch from sweet potato cullings.

"Cane cream," a new product developed by the federal bureau from cane sirup made from low purity juices, is now being produced commercially. Experiments indicate that better grades of molasses may be produced by methods of clarifying juices without reducing the sugar yield. American sugarcane planters may find this of some value in their marketing, chemists believe.

Products of Forests.

Improvements in methods of gathering and handling turpentine, rosin, pine oil and other resinous forest products, which constitute an annual valuation of $60,000,000, were made recently. Specific gravity tables now make it possible to regulate weights of turpentine. Similar efficiencies have been reported in the hides and leather business, which has developed methods to eliminate expensive wastes in skinning practice.

Prevention of dust explosions in industrial plants has been another object of attack for these delving students. By studying causes of the explosions, effective measures can be adopted based upon recommendations of the bureau. It has been found that practically all kinds of combustible dust are explosive when mixed with air in certain proportions, and that nearly 30,-000 industrial plants have dust explosion hazards, with possible loss of life as well as property.

Continue Pasteur Problems.

Industrial fermentations, the object of years of work by Louis Pasteur, are still presenting new problems for these diligent chemists to solve. Special studies are being made on the possible fermentation of by-products of corn.

As an example of this line of endeavor, it has been found that a certain mold organism would produce large quantities of gluconic acid from glucose. Mold fermentations have been conducted on a basis leading to wide use of calcium gluconate, which, if added to chicken feed, promotes thick shelled eggs. This may lead to valuable feed combinations for high producing dairy cows, which frequently suffer from calcium required for such large amounts of milk being taken from the cow's bone structure.

Says Life Insurance Companies Favor Farmer

Taking issue with recent statements which he attributed to Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, A. A. Zinn of Kansas City, president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, stated yesterday that "life insurance companies have never been more favorable to the farmer." Secretary Hyde, he stated, charged insurance concerns with contributing to farmers' distress by foreclosing mortgages and refusing renewals. This Mr. Zinn denied, saying renewals and extensions had been liberal. Reading reports from 20 companies which he said hold 50 per cent of all farm loans held by life insurance concerns, he asserted that life insurance firms have about two billion dollars in farm loans outstanding. There is more money available for farm loans, he asserted, than there are customers for the loans. Farmers, he added, reduced their indebtedness to life insurance companies by $44,-000,000 during 1929.

NATL. AMERICAN CO. TO VOTE ON ITS LIQUIDATION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 8.—A meeting of the stockholders of the National American company has been called for March 12 to vote on a proposal to liquidate the company. National American is a holding and management company, established in 1927 to cover the assets of a company of the same name and the Realty Foundation company, as well as two mortgage concerns. At one time the company dealt actively in the securities of local banks and trust companies, obtaining and disposing of what were believed to be controlling interests in several cases.

According to the plan for the liquidation, National American will sell to the State Title and Mortgage company a block of 99,000 shares of the General Surety company which it holds, receiving one share of State Title and Mortgage for every share of General Surety. The total holdings of State Title stock will then be distributed to shareholders of the National American company.

WAR OR THREAT OF WAR USED TO GAIN TERRITORY

Extend Boundaries by Main Strength.

der pressure of force the United States had bought almost half a continent, but very little defined in the mind of either seller or buyer. [The price was $15,000,000, a fourth of the sum to be used to satisfy claims of American citizens against France for maritime damages.]

Jefferson's Foresight.

The Louisiana territory was of most ambiguous boundary. The French were not prepared to say, nor were they at the sale much interested, exactly what Spain had turned over by the secret treaty of St. Ildefonso. Where did it go as to the northwest? Where as to the land of the Tejas? [Texas.] How about the Floridas?

Jefferson—never was there a more active Roman emperor—sent out the Lewis and Clark exploring party toward the Pacific to find out what he had in the northwest. He accepted the fact that he didn't have the Floridas—that they still remained with Spain—but did so with the most naïve and charming realistic philosophy. In a letter to a friend he wrote that it was only a delayed opportunity; presently Spain would be engaged in a war and—"If we push them strongly with one hand, holding out a price with the other, we shall certainly obtain the Floridas, and all in good time."

Swallowed Up.

He profited by his experience with the first consul and threatened Spain with war for West Florida. Spanish troubles presented an opportunity in 1810 and the United States moved into West Florida, taking possession of all but the Mobile region. That it took over in 1813, in the war with Great Britain. The map used here gives the date as 1803, which is right as a claim, but actual occupation was later.

There still remained East Florida, the arm reaching south to inclose the water approaches to the west and to what is now the Panama canal. There Spain remained in incompetent and trouble making jurisdiction until 1819. To Georgia, particularly, Spanish Florida had become intolerable. Runaway Negroes crossed the line and banded themselves with Creek Indians who took refuge, after depredations, in Spanish territory. The British had disregarded Spanish neutrality and sovereignty in the war. In the treaty of 1795 this very probability had been anticipated by the American government and a specific obligation had been written that Spain must keep its Indians and unruly elements in control.

A Thorn in His Thumb.

There was, then, a justification when Calhoun, Monroe's secretary of war, ordered Andrew Jackson, commanding the military district, to proceed against the disturbers in December, 1817. Jackson acted with a celerity inspired not only by his talent for it but also by his enthusiasm for this particular assignment of duty. Florida long had been a thorn in his thumb. He construed his orders in their largest sense, marched his force 450 miles in quick time to Fort Scott on the Georgia frontier, and dashed in. In a short while he had done enough to raise the possibility of at least two wars.

He seized St. Marks, moved eastward and took Suwanee, hanged the respectable old Scotch tradesman Arbuthnot to a yardarm of his own ship as an instigator of Indian trouble, shot the British ex-marine officer, Ambrister, with a firing squad and took Pensacola. Spanish dignity had its hat knocked off. Its authority was treated as nonexistent and Great Britain could go to the devil. A large man's work by a man's sized man who had told his government that if it wanted Florida he would make a present of it in sixty days. Castlereagh in London, when he heard what had been done to Arbuthnot and Ambrister said to the American minister, Rush, that war could be brought on by lifting a finger.

He Raised His Voice.

Spain demanded apologies, reparations, and signal punishment for Gen. Jackson. Things then took an odd turn. Calhoun was for bringing Jackson to book for unpardonable conduct. The secretary of state, John Quincy Adams, the man who was to beat Jackson in his first try for the presidency, told Spain that the general not only would not be punished but that its own derelictions and rascalities only had brought the whole thing down upon it. No neighbor could tolerate such a thing as this Spanish government on its border. For Spain there was only one thing to do. A treaty of "amity, settlement and limits" was signed Feb. 22, 1819, ceding the Floridas. The price was $5,000,000, but to be paid to American citizens who had claims against Spain. Florida was admitted to the Union as a slave state when Iowa could be brought in free. Two by two in slave and free the new states entered the American ark.

A Belated Addition.

The map shows a triangle west of Lake Superior, brought into the American domain in 1818. That belated addition of territory had to do with geographical uncertainties. When the British and American commissioners agreed on a boundary in 1783, the territory, itself undefined, had the western boundary and the American-Canadian line was to run from the northwesternmost point of the Lake of the Woods due west to the Mississippi river. Later it was discovered that the source of the Mississippi was almost due south of the Lake of the Woods. In the treaty revision after the war of 1812 this geographical mistake was taken up and with it the question of the northern boundary of the Louisiana purchase. The agreement was to draw a line down from the northwestern point of the lake to the forty-ninth parallel and then take it to the Rocky mountains.

The Mexicans' Error.

Spain having lost the war with its own revolutionists, its continental American possessions were in other hands and the Mexicans repeated an error which history nearly always finds disastrous. They invited into the territory north of the Rio Grande settlers and colonists from a nation of superior civilization and achievement, the hardiest and most adventurous men of a country which was pushing out its boundaries by fighting wars. Few other frontiers have seen such redoubtable frontiersmen as came down from the United States toward the Rio Grande.

At first they were welcome. There was plenty of room on the vast plains and the initial contact was not irritating. It soon became so. Many of the settlers were slave owners. Mexico abolished slavery. Its mass of population was composed of Indians, half-breeds, and peasants, with an ineffective aristocracy and a negligible middle class. The portents of trouble were numerous and the United States made several attempts to buy the land occupied by Americans, but without success. Mexico prohibited settlement in Texas after 1829, but the order had no effect and in 1836 Texas declared its independence and won the war necessary to achieve it.

The Mexican War.

The annexation of Texas to the United States at first was expected as the natural course and until the slavery question entered there was little opposition, but when it did it kept Texas out for nine years, in which Texas diplomacy made a play of turning both to Great Britain and to France. A suspicion of British enterprise in California also was entertained at Washington.

The Mexican war, which disposed of the matter, is frequently entered in the book by Americans as a discreditable one. That is a concession which doesn't consult all the facts. It's a conclusion resting largely on the assumption that because Mexico did not prove able to defend itself in the war it persisted in risking, mistaking both its own strength and its enemy's, there was a taint on the larger nation which fought and won it. The situation was an impossible one and if it could not be relieved by diplomacy and by purchase it had to be relieved by war and so it was.

The United States paid Mexico $15,000,000 and acquired 522,568 square miles of territory.

War Threatened.

Before President Polk fought with Mexico to relieve and extend Texas and to get the rest of the territory which so compactly makes the rounded out United States of America he fairly well laid himself open to a war with Great Britain over the Oregon country. The American contentions rested largely on the fur trading enterprises of New England shipowners and on the Astor undertakings. Great Britain had a counter list of activities which went back to Drake. Spain and Russia, other claimants, had been eliminated by time and circumstances, but by 1844 the United States and Great Britain were deadlocked in a controversy of constantly growing seriousness in which British reasonableness more than American prevented war. The American war cries were "All of Oregon or none" and "Fifty-four forty or fight."

In those days Uncle Sam was the fighting kid, although generally out of condition. At one time the American government had offered to accept the forty-ninth parallel, but the British negotiator was ill advised enough not to take it. The boundary question was settled on that basis in 1846, but "Polk was almost too aggressive to be wary, and the country was undoubtedly wrought up and ready for a fight. Great Britain, facing an angry nation with which she had tried conclusions twice before when it was much weaker, and having to deal with a delicate and complicated situation from the standpoint of world politics, was pacific and conciliatory far beyond her wont. It is much to her credit that the ultimate decision was not recorded in blood." (George Pierce Garrison, vol. 17, "The American Nation.")

The Gadsen Purchase.

Down in the southwest corner of the map there is to be observed the Gadsen purchase. With its story the continental domain of these United States in its essential outline has been sketched. In the Gadsen purchase we get one of the neat little ironies which history has a way of packing up and delivering to embarrassed recipients. This awkward bit of territory, bounded on the north by the Gila river, on the east by the Rio Grande, and on the west by the Colorado, was a sort of left-over in the boundary settlements of the Mexican-American treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo. Article XI. of the treaty imposed on the United States the obligation which an earlier treaty had imposed on Spain in the Floridas—that of keeping Indians and disorderly characters under control. The United States had neglected these obligations, and in consequence claims for damages against it amounted to a maximum of $30,000,000. The Gadsen treaty corrected the boundary as seen in the map. Mexico was paid $10,000,000 and agreed to forego claims for damages.

Thus continental America was rounded out from sea to sea, from gulf to lake, set in its unity, a nation made and preserved by force, by war and threat of war, molded into a union required for its own continuity and, as it now seems, for the peace and stability of the world. It was an accomplishment by force, and now the achievement is considered, because of its consolidated power, the greatest insurance peace has.

LONDON MARTS INFLUENCED BY RECOVERY IN N. Y.

See Long Period of Cheap Money Ahead.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 8.—Wall street's recovery acted as a favorable factor in the London stock markets this week as far as international favorites were concerned, producing a welcome activity in this particular section, but otherwise there was little improvement recorded in the general business of the house.

Gilt edged securities momentarily received a stimulus from the reduction of the New York and London bank rates, chiefly professional interests, the latter now being optimistic that Wall street's concrete signs of recovery may be definitely reflected in permanent operations on this side. There is still a good deal of uncertainty in the outlook; however, recent political developments and ministerial statements not being of an encouraging nature, with the budget fears exercising a restraining influence.

Comes as Surprise.

So far as London is concerned the reduction in the bank rate was not expected this week, and the German rates certainly had an important bearing on the situation, and the fact that the New York reduction immediately followed London's indicates coöperation, influential quarters here believe. Cheaper money will tend to stimulate speculation, but after last year's debacle it is unlikely that another period of excessive gambling will eventuate. But financial interests here are of the opinion that there is a long period of relatively cheap money ahead—which is generally synonymous with comparatively slack bouts in speculation and general trade.

Such a situation, however, presents a better case for high class investment securities, which are likely to benefit from the employment of idle funds. Already city circles are speculating as to what advantage can be taken of the cheap money period to deal with the international debt problem. The recent efforts towards cutting the expenditure for armaments and facilitating reparations payments is cited as significant indications.

Savings on Debts.

Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer, recently hinted that lower money rates would give the government an opportunity for dealing with the question of reducing the staggering burden of debt charges, and financial leaders here now foresee a good opportunity of effecting a substantial saving on debts in due course. The basis of British government credit shows signs of strengthening, which should greatly facilitate the operations of the treasury.

The gold position is continuing to improve, but the exchange is not altogether satisfactory. As an explanation of the weakness of the sterling-dollar exchange in New York many city quarters are inclined to view the continuous discussion of British unemployment and "dole" as introducing a bad impression in America, painting a black picture of this country's general industrial position.

A good sign is the revival of capital issues. One of the largest is that of issues of $2,916,000,000 in a 6 per cent India government loan at 99 per cent, the underwriting for which is in progress this week-end. The loan is repayable in 1932 and 1933, and the proceeds of this short term issue is to be utilized in repaying $2,916,000,000 of India sterling bills falling due at the end of this month. India government stocks show a general improvement at the end of the week.

PARIS BOURSE LOWER

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 8.—The violent reaction in Turkish funds, due to the report published in London that the Angora government had asked that its debt moratorium be extended for five years, affected the entire Paris market this week. Prices fell quickly in all sections.

In addition, speculators have been disappointed by the recent statement of Minister of Finance Henri Cheron before the chamber of deputies, indicating that no further cuts in the taxation of stock exchange transactions are contemplated. Pessimistic reports from foreign markets also caused a gloomy atmosphere on the Paris market.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Financing for Utah Power and Light company in the form of an additional issue of $4,000,000 first mortgage 5 per cent bonds is planned for this week by Harris Trust and Savings bank and Coffin and Burr, Inc.

Stockholders of the White Rock Mineral Springs company have approved an increase in the common stock from 200,000 to 250,000 shares. They also assented to the plan whereby the company's second preferred stock was exchanged for common on the basis of five shares of common for one share of preferred. Complete conversion of the second preferred into common stock of which 90 per cent already has been exchanged, would leave the company with a capitalization of 20,000 shares of first preferred and 250,000 shares of common.

Kelvinator shipments for the first four months of the fiscal year, ending Jan. 31, 1930, shows an increase in excess of 53 per cent over the same period of 1929, according to H. W. Burritt, vice president in charge of sales.

Federal Judge Fake in Newark has appointed Clarence W. Maybie equity receiver for the First International Securities corporation, an investment trust. Two stockholders complained that directors of the company mismanaged its affairs.

Producers in the Yates oil field, Texas, have agreed on a reduction in the allowable production to 100,000 barrels a day from 130,000 barrels.

Par Value.

In determining the merit of a stock as an investment the amount of the par value of that stock is not, as many seem to think, a factor of great importance.

When the market price of a common stock approximates the par value of that stock it is a coincidence, not an evidence of the functioning of some law of finance.

There is no rule which stipulates that at some time in the future the market price shall be the amount of the par value of a stock.

The market price of preferred stocks having a certain par value in many cases hovers around par, the reason being that dividends on preferred stocks are set at a certain definite rate which may not be altered. But even with preferred stocks if the issuing company's earnings fall off the market for the preferred shares declines.

The market value of stocks depends upon the assets behind the stock, the company's past and present earnings and its prospects for the future, the money market, and general conditions in the stock market. A glance at the daily stock quotations tables shows stocks of $100 par value selling anywhere from $100 down to less than $1 per share. Similarly, other $100 par stocks are selling from $100 up to $1,000 or more per share.

If a company has 1,000 shares of capital stock outstanding the investor who holds one share owns one one-thousandth interest in that company, no matter whether the shares are of $100 par, $20 par, or no par.

When the company was organized it may have been capitalized at $100,000, with 1,000 shares of $100 par. Ten years later the company may still be capitalized at $100,000 and may have prospered to such an extent that its worth has been doubled. Each share might then have a market value of around $200. If the company had steadily lost money the market for the shares would have fallen off accordingly, even though the par value remained unchanged.

Many corporations have issued stock of no par value. Such shares are not necessarily of inferior grade.

If the market price of a company's stock goes up to a point where it is considered too high to be conveniently traded in the stockholders may vote to split the stock. Each old share is then exchanged for a stipulated number of new shares and the par value is reduced accordingly or changed to no par.

A stock splitup is merely an arithmetical operation and does not affect the worth of the stock. If a $100 par stock is selling on the market at around $600 per share and is exchanged for four new shares of $25 par or no par value, the stockholder will probably find that instead of one share at $600 he has four shares with a market value of approximately $150 per share.

RECAPITALIZATION IS PLANNED BY MISSOURI, KANSAS PIPE LINE CO.

Recapitalization of the Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line company involving a large increase in the company's shares will be voted on by the stockholders at a special meeting on Feb. 17.

It is proposed to increase the authorized $5 par common stock from 700,000 to 5,000,000 shares and also to create a new issue of 5,000,000 shares of $1 par class B stock. The present capitalization consists of $1,000,000 seven per cent preferred stock, of which none is outstanding, and the 700,000 common shares, of which 416,199 shares are outstanding.

Frank P. Parish, president, said the increase in the capital stock is regarded as advisable in order to enable the company to carry on a program of development and expansion contemplated for the future. The plan will provide an adequate financial structure.

Each class B share will be entitled to receive concurrent dividends equal to one-twentieth of the amount of any dividend paid on the common stock. In liquidation, the class B shares will be entitled to one-twentieth of the amount paid on each common share without any priority or preference. Class B stockholders will have the same voting privileges as common stockholders, except that the latter will have the right to elect one more director.

BUILDING MEN SEEK TRIBUNAL TO ADJUST DISPUTES

Washington Conference Is Planned in March.

BY THOMAS WREN.

American building contractors are hopeful that a permanent tribunal for adjustment of jurisdictional strife in the construction industry will be established by May 1, as the result of the constructive action taken at the recent Tampa, Fla., meeting of builders and labor representatives.

Another conference of building trades representatives and builders will be held in Washington on March 5. The National Association of Building Trades Employers will be represented by Oscar W. Rosenthal, chairman, Chicago; Christian G. Norman of New York and James J. Scully of Boston. The building trades will be represented by Michael J. McDonough, who was recently elected head of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor; Patrick Morrin, iron workers, St. Louis; and John J. Hynes, sheet metal workers, Washington.

Expect Definite Plan.

Out of this joint Washington meeting some definite plan is expected to emanate for the setup of an adjustment board. Behind the scenes E. M. Craig of the Building Construction Employers' association has been constantly at work to bring about establishment of an adjustment board.

It was Mr. Craig's report to President Hoover that led the latter to send an emissary to the Tampa meeting and urge elimination of all jurisdictional disputes between trades to procure stimulation of building. While builders are reticent to estimate the economic loss of jurisdictional controversies they state it amounts to approximately $35,000,000 annually.

Before adjournment of the Tampa meeting the joint conference resolved that all factors be urged to curb jurisdictional strife even while plans are being formulated for a permanent adjustment board.

It is pointed out the carpenters' international union is not associated with the national building trades department and would not be subjected to decisions of an adjustment tribunal. Neither are the bricklayers. At Lakeland, Fla., William Hutcheson, the carpenters' chief, stated he is willing to acquiesce in any program intended to stimulate and benefit building. No word has been received from the bricklayers.

Requires Confidence.

It was stated all plans are being carefully analyzed and effort will be made to safeguard decisions from any biased taint. Builders say success of the purposed adjustment board will be largely gauged on their ability to have the tribunal function on a fair and square basis, one in which the building mechanics and their leaders will have confidence.

One suggestion for the contemplated tribunal embodies a plan whereby jurisdictional disputes between trades will be adjusted locally and then failure would be the cause of submitting the argument to a higher court similar to the United States Supreme court for final adjustment. In the meantime there would be no cessation of building work while adjustment was being made.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—(AP)—Cotton goods prices were soft and trading light in the market today. Print cloths were in light demand, and some business was on in fine cotton goods and rayon mixtures. Burlaps showed little change, being comparatively firm in price. Floor covering markets were quiet, with easy prices in some quarters. Spot raw silks were dull and unchanged. Piece goods sales had dropped off due to strike in garment trades. Wool goods markets were quiet.

Short Covering Aids Rally in Market.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Wheat futures fluctuated yesterday in an erratic manner within a range of around 2c, declining early only to rally later, and then ease off toward the last to close unchanged to ⅛c higher, with March, $1.16½ and May, $1.20⅝@1.20⅞.

Short covering was largely responsible for the upturn from the inside figures, a majority of the local element not caring to have an open interest over the week-end. Winnipeg finished ⅛@⅜c lower. Trade in the aggregate was not as large as of late, with sentiment decidedly mixed.

Liquidation was on in wheat during the last week, and while there were sharp reactions from the inside figures the close yesterday was 1@1½c lower as compared with a week ago. Coarse grains, however, showed strength, with corn ⅝@1c higher and oats up ¼@⅝c from a week ago, while rye was heavy the greater part of the time and closed 2⅛@3¾c lower. Provisions showed more activity, and closed 62½@65c higher on lard and 27½c higher on bellies as compared with a week ago.

Since starting operations coöperatives have bought 768 cars of country run cash wheat at Minneapolis, according to a report from that market, or about 1,000,000 bu.

Foreign Demand Slow.

While both foreign and North American traders admit that Europe will have to buy liberal quantities of cash wheat the balance of the season the fact that the demand is extremely slow in developing tends to increase bearish sentiment, and cables from abroad indicated that a bearish construction was placed on the proposed formation of a stabilization corporation in the United States and the notice that the provincial governments would back up the Canadian pool. Russia continues to offer wheat for sale to European countries, which was a factor in causing a decline of ⅝@1⅛d in Liverpool. Buenos Aires and Rosario, however, rallied after being lower at the start and finished ⅝@⅞c higher, a better foreign exchange rate being a factor.

A meeting of the farm board will be held at Washington Monday to act on the recommendation of the wheat advisory committee regarding the formation of a stabilization corporation, and the trade generally expressed the belief that the action would be favorable. The announcement had a little effect on the market.

Light Trade in Corn.

While corn was easier at the start with wheat there was no material pressure on the market and with local operators fair buyers the finish was ⅛@⅜c higher, with March, 88¼c, and May, 92¼c. Forecast for unsettled weather over the belt for the week attracted some attention, as the movement may be checked. Purchases to arrive were only 3,000 bu. The trade is inclined to look for a fair increase to be shown in the visible supply statement on Monday. Buenos Aires futures closed ⅞c higher.

Commission houses and shorts were on the buying side of oats, and offset to a large extent the selling by the local element. The close was unchanged to ⅜c higher, with March, 44⅜c, and May, 46⅛c. Movement is light with the spot basis steady to ½c higher.

Liquidation was on in rye, and despite the firmness in wheat prices averaged lower with the finish at net losses of ¼@½c, with March closing at 82⅞c, and May, 84¼c. There was some selling credited to Winnipeg.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

... market and with a meeting of the farm board called for Monday to organize the stabilization corporation, large traders are said to be letting the market alone, confirming their operations to spreading between Chicago and Winnipeg. There has been big covering by shorts for several days and on the bulge the southwest was a good seller. The trade is said to be more evened up, as indicated by the operation in privileges, which is well divided between the "bids" and "offers," although "bids" had preference at the close.

London reports to Pynchon & Co., say that Europe will have to buy large quantities of wheat in North America during the next few months, European crops were prolific last year and fair supplies remain. Continental countries, naturally, are minimizing import requirements.

Common Stock Theory Shattered ?

HAS the recent collapse in the stock market shattered the theory of common stocks for long term investment?

Many investors who formerly held to the theory now regard it with doubt and dismay.

Yet the most and the least that has been claimed for it is that a well diversified list of common stocks, held over a period of years, will prove more profitable than an investment in high grade bonds.

McNeel's Financial Service in a recent bulletin presents an important study on this subject, which will be sent upon request to any investor, individual or institution.

Receipts at Chicago Monday, 17,000 cattle, 60,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep.

The hog market yesterday held firm at the previous day's sharp advance, both the extreme top and the general average equaling Friday's prices, at $11.00 and $10.65, respectively.

There was an early clearance of all grades and only 1,000 pen holders remained at the close, with some orders for $11.00 kinds unfilled, due to the scarcity of top notchers after the start. Sales were largely 60@65c above the previous Saturday. Only 1,500 hogs from the fresh supply remained on sale after the 10,700 directs had been deducted, which was hardly enough to establish quotations in all branches of the trade.

Many Shipping Orders.

A break in hog prices in mid-week brought a deluge of shipping orders and the market ran rampant toward the end of the week, establishing new high levels for the season. The predicted $11.00 hogs put in an appearance Friday, nearly three weeks earlier than in 1929. The week's general average price advanced 30c at $10.40, being highest since last August and 60c above a year ago. The average two years ago was $8.15.

A rise in the local wholesale market for fresh pork, coupled with smaller receipts and broad eastern demand caused the market to break loose directly after the slight setback. Outsiders bought 34 per cent of Chicago arrivals. The eleven market total receipts at 663,000 compare with 781,000 the previous week, with 728,000 a year ago, and with 803,000 two years ago.

Cattle men during the last week held supplies down to the minimum in an effort to stabilize the trade. Leading markets handled some of the smallest receipts on record for the time of year. The seven western points received 130,000 cattle, equaling the smallest corresponding week since 1921. The year to date total is smallest in more than 14 years. Yet the market was most unsatisfactory and, as a whole, lowest in about a year's time.

The general average price at $12.20, lowest since last February, compares with $12.50 the previous week, with $13.25 a month ago and with $11.85 a year ago. Two years ago cattle prices averaged $13.80.

Sheep Receipts Immense.

In spite of the fact that leading distributing centers were crowded with dressed lamb and prices were being slashed, feeders and producers dumped some of the largest supplies on record at all big live stock markets. Seven of the principal points in the west handled a combined total of 286,000 live sheep and lambs, which compares with 191,000 a year ago, and 191,000 two years ago.

During the two weeks ending Feb. 8 these markets handled 554,000, against 400,000 during the same period last year. The general average price at Chicago was pounded down to $11.55, the lowest since June, 1922. This figure compares with $16.40 a year ago, with $15.35 two years ago, and with $15.25 five year average of corresponding weeks.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 17,000 cattle, 60,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep, against 17,563 cattle, 62,551 hogs, and 22,742 sheep a week ago, and 18,559 cattle, 61,770 hogs, and 14,075 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 40,000 cattle, 225,000 hogs, and 80,000 sheep, against 41,602 cattle, 243,545 hogs, and 65,537 sheep a year ago.

HOG PRODUCTS HIGHER

Lard had good support yesterday from some commission houses while packers were on both sides of the market. Prices averaged higher, but eased toward the last on profit taking in lard. Hogs were at the best prices of the week, and Liverpool lard was 6d higher, with export clearances from the seaboard 278,000 lbs.

BUTTER AND EGGS FIRM

A rise of ⅜c, or $45 a car, in February egg futures featured an otherwise dull week-end session on the Chicago Mercantile exchange. The advance seemed to spring from comparative considerations relating to spot prices rather than immediate factors in the trade. Sales were 26 cars and receipts 6,683 cases.

Butter futures held firm, due to favorable spot and storage news. Sales were 52 cars and receipts 7,848 tubs. Prices follow:

WHAT STEPS Are You Taking NOW?

...to make 1930 a year of substantial profits and better-than-average income

1930 will be the most important year for far-sighted investors since 1921. By taking prompt advantage of present security bargains, they are laying the foundation now for future profits.

Many fortunes will be established during the next few months—for the present period offers opportunities that may not be available again for years. As in 1921, the prices of certain outstanding stocks are undervalued according to their earnings and prospects and may never again be duplicated. This is the one time, therefore, when investors should be exercising the greatest interest in their investment affairs—and should be taking steps to obtain the rewards that result from courage and vision.

In the coming advance of the stock market—for investment history shows that inactivity in the stock market is followed closely by an upward movement—those investors who accumulate, at prices now prevailing, sound, dividend-paying stocks should realize substantial benefits, in the form of liberal income and profits over the next twelve months.

Our purpose is to point out to investors those stocks representing companies which have a long, successful record of earnings, are ably and aggressively managed and, being firmly established in their respective industries, are rapidly forging ahead. By concentrating your funds in the stocks of such industries, which, by the nature of their business, are relatively depression proof, you are directly in line for near-future profits.

Our Statistical Department has just completed an analysis of stocks of this nature and has selected several which yield 6% to 8%, are listed and offer excellent profit prospects. Full information will be sent to you, without obligation. Fill out and return the coupon below.

LARGE PROFITS MADE IN REALTY, SURVEY REVEALS

Spectacular Deals Are Reported.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Up till the time Wall street stood on its head last November and shook all the money out of its pockets one heard one thousand stories of successful stock deals to one report of money making in real estate. Not that the ratio of one thousand to one in favor of the stock market was a true index of actual conditions. Far from it. The ticker was a better and noisier talker than the realtor and the public, true to form, jumped to conclusions.

Now that the stock speculative mania has subsided, the Chicago real estate board believes it a psychological time to say a word about what real estate has been quietly but surely doing in the way of profit making for its owners. A few weeks ago, with this idea in mind, a questionnaire was sent out to all of the members of the Chicago Real Estate board and several thousand other dealers.

Brokers were asked to tell about deals they had closed and make public what the investment was and what was the profit. Other details such as the time held, etc., were requested.

Deals Well Scattered.

Out of the imposing list of replies the committee in charge has taken forty deals in Chicago and Oak Park. They are scattered about in various parts of the city and its big western suburb. The forty selected were chosen on the basis of diversity of location rather than earning power.

In these forty deals only $854,375 cash was invested and yet the total profit the forty buyers received was $1,470,366. The lucky forty bought their forty properties for a total of $3,324,053, and sold them for $4,794,219. The time these properties were held was from less than one year to five years inclusive. The average time held was less than two years.

"These profits," said Newton C. Farr, president of the Chicago Real Estate board, "are not the average to be expected by every real estate investor, but they do show what a widespread group of well chosen real estate investments have done over a short period in Chicago.

"The board hoped that the reports would show not that the indiscriminate purchaser of real estate could make a fortune, but that investors who made use of the best real estate knowledge could make substantial profits while holding the best security on each, the earth itself."

$8,500 Profit on $500 Cash.

If we have room we'll show in an adjoining column a table outlining details of these forty deals. Anyway, we'll mention some of them in particular. For instance, the most outstanding deal, so far as shortness of time and largeness of profit go, was the investment of only $500 cash for a parcel on South Halsted street, between 94th and 95th. It was purchased for $500 and sold in less than a year for $9,000, giving a profit of $8,500 on an investment of $500.

In other words the person who made this little $500 investment in real estate multiplied his capital seventeen times.

Another spectacular deal was closed at 6313-17 South Crawford avenue. In this instance the buyer purchased the parcel for $1,500, paying the entire amount in cash. Five years later he sold it for $38,500, which means he made a profit of $37,000 on a $1,500 investment.

Here's Another Good One.

Still another deal which if it had been negotiated in Wall street would have caused much conversation around stockbrokers' offices, was the investment of $250 in some property on North avenue, Oak Park, 400 feet east of Oak Park avenue. The parcel cost $1,495 and was sold within four years for $5,750, registering a profit of $4,255.

The largest deal of the forty was the purchase and sale four years later of the property at 3168-84 North Clark street. The buyer put up $25,000 cash on a purchase price of $175,000. He sold it for $410,000, making a profit of $235,000.

As already stated, only $854,375 cash was needed to swing these forty deals which brought a total profit of $1,470,366 or 172 per cent. On the basis of holding for an average of two years the annual return was 86 per cent. The return on the cost price was 44.2 per cent or an average of 22.1 per cent a year. Who says real estate isn't a profitable investment?

KENILWORTH TO MOVE BUSINESS ACROSS TRACKS

Kenilworth has under way a comprehensive plan to move its business section across the right of way of the North Western and the North Shore lines to a new location west of the tracks. At the last meeting of the Kenilworth Architectural commission, which is headed by P. B. Eckhart, a sketch submitted by Architect Louis C. Bouchard showing how the business center could be developed along English lines, was approved by that body.

According to Mr. Bouchard the present business area east of the track will be developed into a village park and civic center. The architectural commission includes Lloyd M. Willis, Charles D. Howe, Robert S. Smith, and Harry Wesse. Ralph R. Hawxhurst is president of the village board, which also has O. K'd the project, Mr. Bouchard states.

JOHN T. CONNERY PLANS TALL FLAT ON SHERIDAN RD.

Edifice to Have 98 Suites and Cost $1,000,000.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

A $1,000,000 item in Chicago's 1930 building tabulations is being supplied by John T. Connery, president of the Edgewater Beach Hotel company, who has had plans drawn for a fifteen story apartment house which he proposes to erect at 5223 Sheridan road — opposite the Saddle and Cycle club.

JOHN T. CONNERY. [Edgewater Beach Studio.]

Mr. Connery's building will be the third of a trio of tall residential structures to stand on the west side of Sheridan road in the block between Foster and Berwyn avenues, opposite the exclusive north side club. There is an eight story edifice at 5200 and one of twelve stories at 5240.

Face Brick on Exposed Sides.

Benjamin Marshall, architect for the Edgewater Beach hotel and other luxurious Chicago apartment houses and hotels, has designed Mr. Connery's newest building.

The front elevation will be of red face brick on a marble or granite base. Cut stone will be used for the slight ornamentation which will be found in the upper stories. In other Chicago buildings in which they have been interested Mr. Connery and Mr. Marshall have included details contributing to the appearance of the city. And in the new Sheridan road structure they will continue their policy by having all walls exposed to the view of the public finished in face brick. In this case this action will be particularly fortunate because upper sections of the side walls will be visible for long distances on the road.

Will Have 98 Suites.

There will be ninety-eight suites in the building of two and three rooms. Lewis B. Walton of the Marshall firm says the rooms are to be unusually large. Each suite will have a de luxe serving pantry, or kitchenette, equipped with the most modern devices to help the business of cooking along.

The conveniences planned for the tenants will include a three story garage at the rear of the lot in which it is hoped to have space enough to accommodate all cars owned in the building. There is to be an imposing lobby on the ground floor, which will also have a restaurant and two shops.

The building will have a steel frame and all windows will be of plate glass. The lot is 75x150 feet. Work is scheduled to start during the spring and completion will follow about nine months later.

Building in Suburbs Still Shows Loss

Niles Center was one of the few Chicago suburbs to show a building gain for January, 1930, over January of last year, according to a survey of thirty-eight towns in the metropolitan area recently completed by the building survey department of S. W. Straus & Co. Niles Center's gain was 1,200 per cent.

January's volume of construction totaled $1,128,230 for the thirty-eight suburbs, with the total for the metropolitan district, including the city, $6,612,730. The figures for the suburbs reporting show a loss as against January, 1929, as well as against December, 1929. Other suburbs reporting gains during January over January 1929, were: Blue Island, 544 per cent; Elgin, 77 per cent; Geneva, 5 per cent, and Lake Forest, 124 per cent.

MRS. SNYDER TO HAVE STORE IN UNION LEAGUE

Chicago clubmen have a large and well developed sweet tooth. Mrs. Ora Snyder discovered this many years ago when she established her first tiny candy shop in the Hamilton club building. Since then she has added store after store to her list and among them four have been either in or close to men's clubs. She already has a shop in the Chicago club building, another in the Midland club, for many years she maintained one close to the Boul Mich entrance of the C. A. A., and she has continued her Hamilton club store.

MRS. ORA SNYDER. [Melvin H. Sykes Photo.]

Yesterday Mrs. Snyder signed a ten year lease for space in the Union League club, now occupied by the United States lines, at 61-63 West Jackson boulevard. This is just east of the main entrance to the club. This will be her eleventh Chicago store. She will take possession on May 1. Mrs. Snyder has just returned from a few weeks of Palm Beaching.

Indiana Limestone Head Sees Good Building Year

Building throughout the nation for the first quarter of 1930 should about equal construction for the same period of 1929 is the opinion of A. E. Dickinson, president of the Indiana Limestone company. However, he expects that marked gains over last year will be made during the second and third quarters.

HOME BUILDING AND REMODELING

BLANKET TYPES OF INSULATION PROVE OF MERIT

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]

[Next week will appear a story on building color into a home.]

Today will be discussed a third form of insulation widely used; this is insulation which falls under the classification of "felts," "blankets," and "quiltings."

It was from the manufacturing industries that the idea first originated of maintaining even temperatures no matter what the weather conditions were. Engineers worked hard on obtaining methods whereby constant temperatures could be maintained. Once these methods were perfected their principles were applied to the domestic residence.

Now, not only the comforts of insulation are well proven but it is an established fact that its heat saving is great. Any owner of a prospective home should make certain that the heating contractor gives proper allowance for the effect of insulation and that his heating plants is designed so that he gets the financial benefits of the saving resulting from the use of insulation.

The same holds true for home owners who are considering remodeling and installing new heating plants. No remodeling of an old home is complete without insulation — the home owner being the permanent beneficiary.

Discussing Felt Type.

Insulation of the "felt" type is semi-flexible. That is, it can be bent without breaking. It consists of built up thicknesses of fibrous materials.

One popular example of this type is felted from the long tough fibers of the flax plant. It is made from pure flax, no other material being used in its manufacture. It is naturally permanent, vermin and rodent proof, fire resistive and it contributes to the added quiet of a home or an apartment.

Another insulation of the felt type is made of selected flax and rye straw fibers. It comes in four thicknesses and on boards of varying widths and lengths and it is claimed it is especially adapted to roof insulation.

One such popular type is made up of wood fibers rearranged into a fleecy substance, matted together in flexible blanket form and packed without stitching between tough building paper lined with waterproof films of asphalt coating. This comes in rolls and is tucked in between uprights and rafters, is fire resisting, rot and vermin proof, and permanent.

Another excellent insulation is made of cured eel grass enclosed in burlap. This type has proved its resistance qualities against fire and vermin through long use.

Air Gun Method.

Still another quilting in a different form is made from a fibrous material especially processed and sprayed into place by air gun method. When these fibrous flakes leave the gun they are coated with a spray of atomized adhesive agent and the coated fibrous flakes form a blanket of insulation covering all cracks and crevices.

Further, blankets and quiltings are made of chemically treated material backed on one side with waterproof felt and one the other with high quality building paper. One quilt insulation consists of selected flax fiber batting between heavy waterproof building paper and is available in different thicknesses and widths.

Tables showing the actual heat savings in homes which are thoroughly insulated are available from a number of different sources; manufacturers of insulations, of many oil and gas heating companies and in a booklet on insulation prepared by the Popular Science institute of New York. This latter booklet can be had for 25 cents.

If the heating plant is steam or hot water there will be a reduction in the size of pipes from boiler to radiators, a reductions in the size of the boiler and also in the area of the radiating surface. Again, where there is a warm air system used there will be a reduction in the size of the furnace and in the size of the air pipes to the various rooms.

Good Chimney Means Much to House

BY HOMER GRANT.

A prospective home owner is often puzzled over what type of chimney to have on his house. Even the most casual observation of chimneys has shown him that while many a plain house is given real architectural quality by a well designed chimney, other homes are completely marred as to exterior attractiveness by one that is poorly placed or wrongly proportioned.

One man wrote in asking if chimneys built in the wall were really old fashioned and if a chimney on a new home should by all odds be placed on the outside.

No, chimneys are still being built on the inside and if a man is building an inexpensive home and needs to practice economy by building a small chimney he will make no mistake by putting it within the house. He can perhaps place it in a gable end, with its stack rising above the roof ridge, or in the center of the house. In this way it remains inconspicuous, with perhaps a handsome brick coping and chimney pot at the top—a better solution than if a narrow stack were continued down to the ground.

Brick construction can be depended upon to insure a pleasing masonry pattern. One can have narrow mortar joints or wide, the latter often creating an interesting variety of texture in contrast to closely laid brick. One can have colored mortar joints in blue or black, if one likes, by the simple process of adding color to the cement mortar mixture.

Whether or not a chimney comes down outside a foundation wall or not, it should go below the frost line. It can have straight sides or go upward from the ground with graduated, sloping sides.

Common brick is being widely used for brick both for its economy and because of the realistic effects obtainable from its application.

Many brick chimneys are painted for color or effect and for waterproofing. Care should be exercised first to give the brick at least two coats of pure linseed oil before any zinc is applied. Brick being "thirsty," the linseed oil will quench this thirst enough to keep them from "drinking" the paint. Where ... apt to dry out and peel off.

When stone chimneys are desired one has to choose carefully the type of stone employed. ... stones sometimes result in ... stones embedded ... allow a ... show.

Wrought iron ornaments built into the brick or in outside chimneys are always decorative.

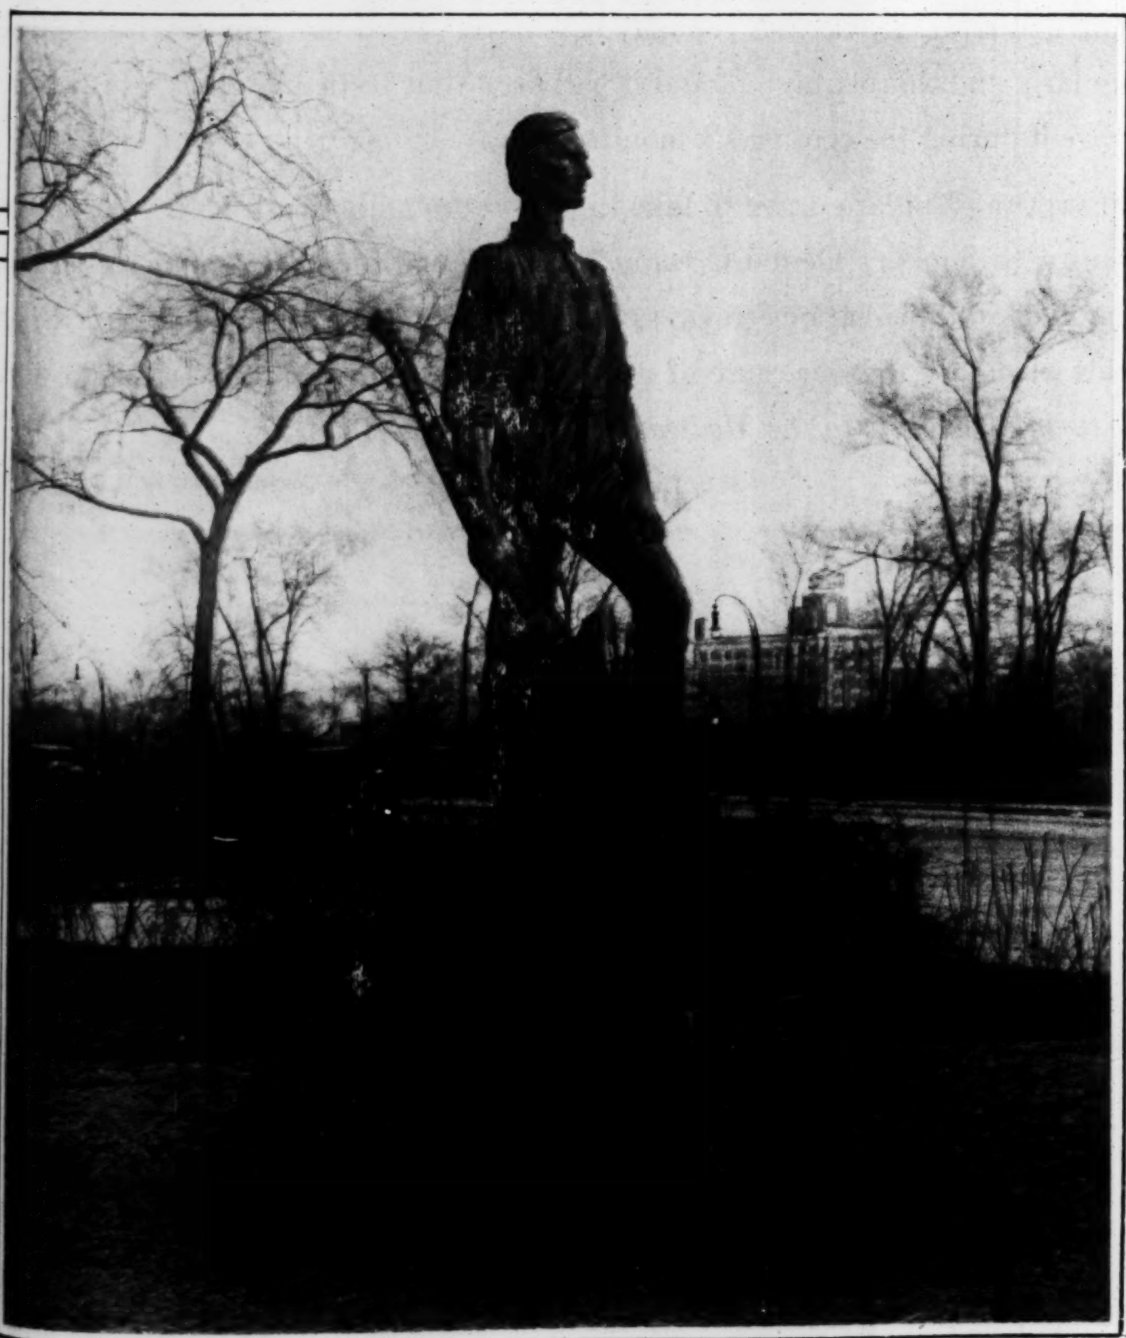
"THE STANDING LINCOLN"—Of Chicago's three notable statues of the Emancipator, whose 121st birthday anniversary will be celebrated on Wednesday, the one in Lincoln park is the oldest and probably the most popular. The work of Augustus St. Gaudens, Irish-American sculptor, it was unveiled on Oct. 22, 1887. It is a mecca for thousands of visitors annually. Rising above the south end of the park, it presents a particularly striking picture at night, when the flood lights are turned on.



"THE RAIL SPLITTER"—Designed by George Mulligan and cast by Jules Berchem, this memorial in Garfield park was dedicated in 1911. Like the many other Abraham Lincoln statues over the country, it will be of particular interest on Wednesday.

"THE SITTING LINCOLN"—St. Gaudens' last work, and by many regarded as his masterpiece, stands in Grant park, with the skyscrapers of the loop as its background. Completed the year before the sculptor's death in 1907, it reposed in obscurity until four years ago, when it was unearthed, dusted off, and given its proper setting.

Acid-forming germs cause decay. The more places they have in which to collect and multiply, the more decay. The photograph at the left is a greatly magnified picture of a colony of decay germs attached to the tooth enamel. Your tooth-brush can't dislodge these microscopic germs in the crevices and fissures between your teeth and on the grinding surfaces. But you can neutralize the germ acids with Squibb's Dental Cream and thus prevent decay.

The two photographs above show: (1) decay and abscess of the root of the tooth; (2) gingival third decay . . . all the work of germs.

WITHIN SIX MONTHS... PROVE THAT YOU CAN PREVENT PRACTICALLY ALL TOOTH DECAY

Thousands have found Squibb's Dental Cream the finest of all protection against cavities and gum troubles. Its formula definitely recognizes the cause of decay and the best ways to prevent it

HAVE you come to look on tooth decay as unavoidable? Do your teeth seem to get worse and worse?

Then try this. Use Squibb's Dental Cream for six months and see if you aren't astonished, on your next visit to the dentist, at the improved condition of your teeth and gums.

Germs cause decay. In a clean mouth they do little harm. But when fermenting food particles are left in the mouth they provide food for these germs which then multiply by the millions and generate the destructive acids which eat away the tooth enamel.

Don't think, though, that merely brushing the teeth will clean your mouth sufficiently. It is a serious mistake. Your tooth-brush can't reach between your teeth, nor into the tiny pits and fissures, nor can it thoroughly clean at the gum margin, where there is a tiny crevice to catch stray bits of food. As a result, decay germs attack your teeth at all these places—destroy the enamel. If neglected long enough, you may lose the teeth affected and suffer seriously in general health.

Ordinary tooth-pastes and methods are powerless. But here is where Squibb's Dental Cream demonstrates its superiority. It is made with 50% of Squibb's Milk of Magnesia. Plenty of this safe, effective antacid to penetrate crevices, neutralize fermenting food particles and render the destructive germ acids harmless. To protect even where the tooth-brush fails to reach.

THE ★ DANGER LINE

The Danger Line is the imaginary line where gums meet teeth. As long as this knife-like edge of gum tissue keeps healthy, pyorrhea will not occur. Nor will tooth decay spread beyond it and attack the sensitive neck of the tooth. In the cross-section above, notice the tiny crevice at each side of the tooth. The arrows show it. Food particles collect here, ferment and irritate the gums with acids. Eventually the delicate gum edge recedes and then The Danger Line is no longer a protection. Never let this happen.

In addition, Squibb's definite soothing quality helps keep the delicate gum tissues firm and sound. It guards The Danger Line, where gums meet teeth. And as long as this vital line remains healthy, pyorrhea will not occur. Squibb's cleans your teeth thoroughly and safely. Never by the use of grit or astringents—which might injure the delicate gum edge.

Why not see your dentist soon and let him professionally clean your teeth and gums and treat any cavities you may now have. Then use Squibb's Dental Cream regularly and thoroughly . . . and it will keep your teeth and gums safe and sound. Prove it during the coming six months.

IMPORTANT—You are urged to take time to thoroughly brush both your teeth and gums with Squibb's Dental Cream. Then you will force tiny particles of Milk of Magnesia into the various crevices of your teeth and effectively neutralize the germ acids which are the sole cause of decay. E. R. Squibb & Sons, New York. Manufacturing Chemists to the Medical Profession since 1858.

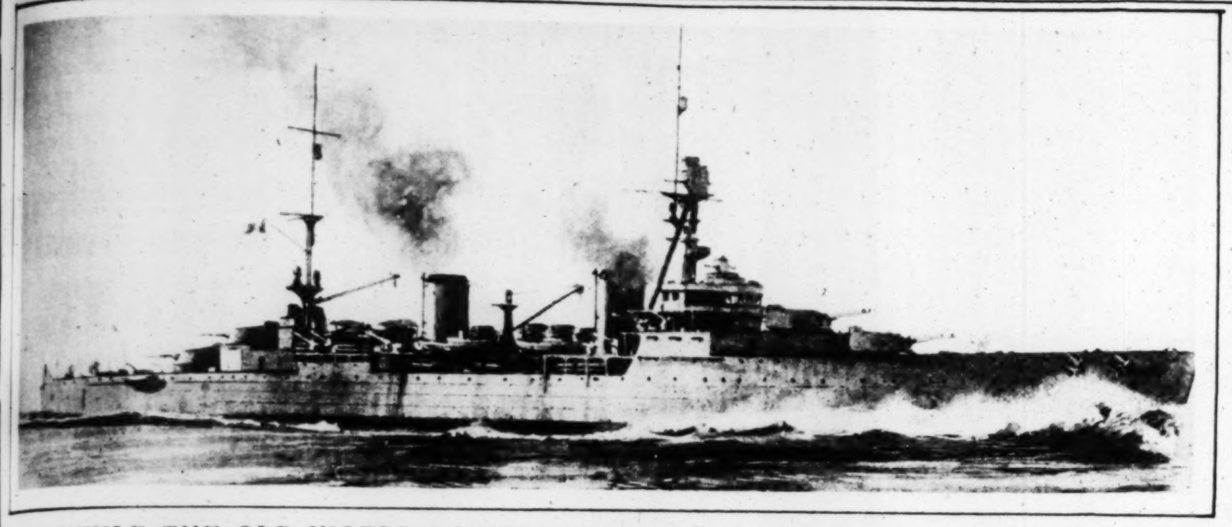
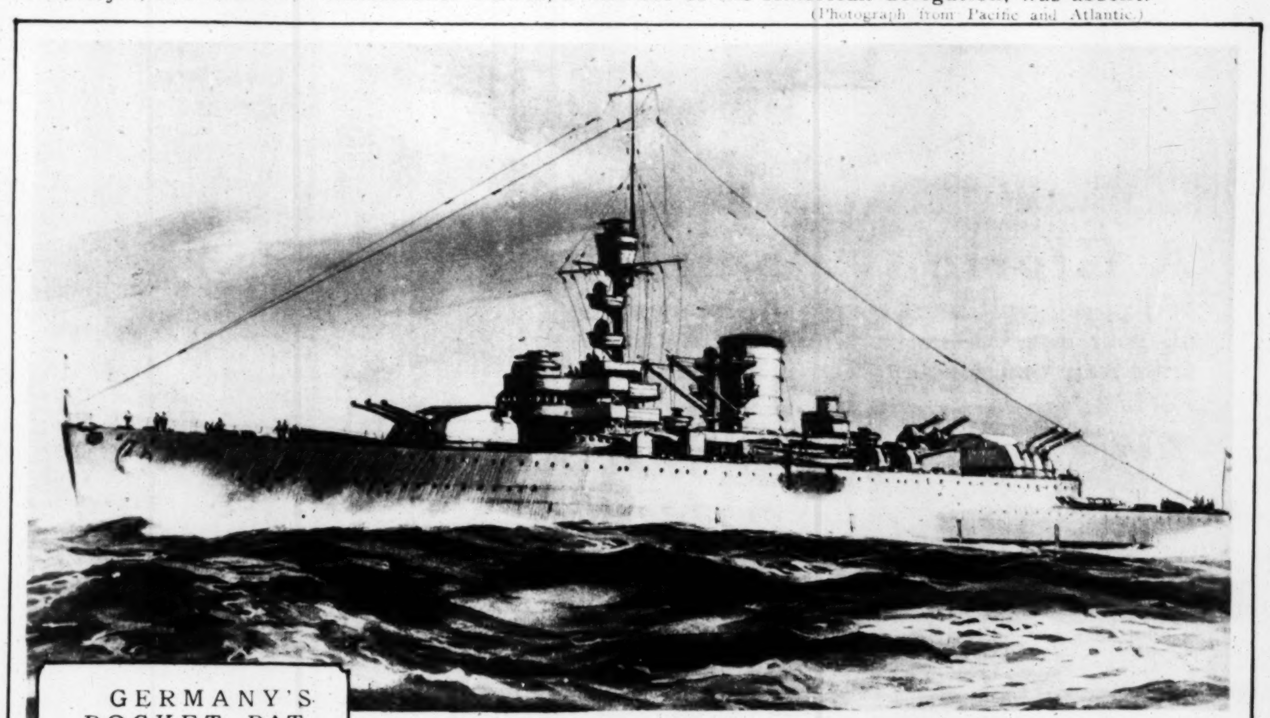
CONFEREES OF BIG FIVE AT LONDON CONFERENCE—Naval parley delegates assembled at 10 Downing street as guests of Premier MacDonald. The group includes H. Ambassador Dawes, a member of the American delegation, was absent. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



WHILE THE OLD WORLD POWERS DEBATE on limitation at London, their shipyards ring with the forging of ever swifter, ever more powerful fighting craft—within such bounds as are set by international agreement. The 10,000 ton cruiser Tourville, above, is one of the latest words from France in naval construction. One of the fleetest warships afloat, it has attained a speed of 36.15 knots. It carries eight 8-inch guns. (Photograph from Associated Press.)



GERMANY'S POCKET BATTLESHIP, the sensational Ersatz Preussen, increases the technical complexities of the London conference. With remarkable cruising range, armament including 11 inch guns, and unprecedented rate of fire, the 10,000 ton vessel is believed to be the fighting equal of some modern battleships of much heavier tonnage and gunnage. AT THE END OF A NOTABLE CAREER—Too ill to carry on, William Howard Taft has retired as chief justice of the United States Supreme court after nearly half a century of public service. His retirement rounds out a career without parallel in this country. No other man has ever held both the offices of President and chief justice. (Photograph from Associated Press.)

Pittaluga

. . physician to the aristocracy of Spain

DR. GUSTAVO PITTALUGA, son of a famous general, and great-grandson of the physician to Napoleon I, is himself an aristocrat of the medical world. He is one of the world's greatest specialists, and the author of over 300 important medical studies.

He says, "Yeast will banish constipation, renew appetite, aid digestion . . ."

"IT is needless to say," declares Dr. Pittaluga, "that an important chapter of my research work has been devoted to yeast.

"Yeast stimulates the glands and has a tonic effect on the general health. In sufficient quantity, it is of great assistance in keeping the intestinal tract clean and healthy. Its use will banish constipation, renew appetite and aid digestion.

"Yeast is abundant in vitamin B. Vitamin D is also present in yeast which has been exposed to ultra-violet rays. This vitamin is necessary to build and keep bones and teeth strong and sound."

How easy it is—this safe new way to regular bodily habits, to rich new energy and life! Just eat 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast every day, following the directions on the label. Each cake is rich in two vitamins indispensable to perfect health—B and D. At grocers, restaurants, soda fountains.

© 1930, Standard Brands Incorporated

"I heartily endorse yeast for 'that run-down feeling'," writes DON BROOKS of Minneapolis. "I had dizzy headaches and my skin was broken out at times. After eating those little cakes of yeast for a time I was relieved of all concern about my complexion. Fleischmann's Yeast performed wonders in my case."

Physicians to Royalty Urge Yeast—

DR. GUSTAV SINGER, of Vienna, has been decorated by kings for his services to royalty. He says, "Yeast is the best intestinal cleanser known."

DR. MARTIN MENDELSOHN was physician to the sister of Kaiser Wilhelm I of Germany. He says, "Constipation can undermine the whole system. Yeast checks it."

PROF. DR. ERNST KROMAYER, head of the aristocratic Kromayer Sanitarium in Berlin, declares, "Through its strongly purifying effect on the intestinal tract, yeast overcomes skin affections."

"I was so miserable I didn't feel like going out," writes MISS MARGARET R. LEWIS of Philadelphia. "My intestinal functioning was bad . . . After eating yeast my skin cleared, my intestinal troubles were corrected and my old energy returned. My doctor urged me to continue with the yeast."

GOOD SCOUTS—Dogs are admitted to full membership in Boy Scout troop No. 131 of Seattle, and each lad in the troop is intrusted with the training of one of the canine auxiliaries. You see the process of training under way.

Make a Habit of Pore Protection and achieve skin beauty

For a long time one cream was about as good as another . . . then Boyer perfected an utterly new cream for achieving skin beauty.

Its beneficial light oils penetrate to the depth of the pores, floating out waste matter and neutralizing skin-ageing acids. The skin becomes clean and sweet as a little child's.

Your skin tissues soon reveal the beneficial effect of this cleanser . . . it is a tissue tonic as well as a pore cleanser. Remember, clean pores never distend, but are the very beginning of smooth skin beauty. Ten days with this new light cream of Boyer's will make a difference you can see and feel. Never will you go back to heavy, waxy cream. You will understand why women who can pay any price, and who jealously guard their complexions, are loyal to the 75c jar of Boyer's Skin & Pore Cleanser. Your druggist has Boyer's Beauty Preparations.

DENNIS KING AND JEANETTE MACDONALD will make the world jealous in Paramount's film version of "The Vagabond King." The ladies will be thrilled by Mr. King and envy the fair Jeanette who boasts him for a lover. The men, gazing at the lady, will sigh "Ah-h-h . . !"—and grit their teeth over the luck of young Dinny.

BILLIE DOVE, so popular and so beautiful, seems here a bit dubious over a question that never should worry her in the least. Miss Dove is working on a new altalker titled "The Other Tomorrow."

DOROTHY MACKAILL could command any young private's attention and obedience, we'll say, when she looks like this. The lady snapped into a salute for the photographer, who did his duty, with the pleasant result before you.

No More Oily Skin

Cremed magnesia corrects oily skin in the same easy way that milk of magnesia purifies the stomach

Poor-color complexions, oily skin and blemishes are due to acid-skin impurities. And, everybody knows there is nothing like magnesia to neutralize acid. So, when the face is massaged with cremed magnesia the skin throws off even the most deep-set pore impurities. It corrects oily skin in the same easy way that milk of magnesia purifies the stomach.

Cremed magnesia rejuvenates the complexion so quickly that any face looks years younger in five minutes. It changes old-looking, poor-color skin to youthful clearness and fades out freckles better than a bushel of lemons. It's astringent; it reduces enlarged pores to the finest texture and smooths out the tell-tale lines of age.

It removes make-up better than soap or cleansing cream. And, because it's so mild, it's a blessing for fine, sensitive skin that soap so easily irritates and coarsens. Doctors urge their wives, patients and nurses to use nothing but magnesia to cleanse and beautify the complexion.

When you use it you will at once see why druggists find it hard to get enough to supply the tremendous demand.

10-DAY TRIAL OFFER

To get genuine cremed magnesia, ask for Denton's Facial Magnesia. The regular price is one dollar. But, if you act promptly by using the Trial Offer Coupon below at once, a large demonstration size will be mailed you for only fifty cents. So wrap a fifty-cent coin in paper with the coupon and mail it today. When you see the startling improvement in your complexion, after using magnesia only once, you will understand why millions of women are changing from soaps and creams to magnesia. Remember, every bottle is sold on a money-back guarantee.

A TOWER OF SERENE EXPRESSION, which greets the traveler descending from the Great Atlas mountains into the oasis city of Marrakesh in southern Morocco, is a part of Koutoubia mosque and regarded as the finest existing specimen of Moorish minaret. It is after the type of Giralda at Seville, and Jabir is said to have been its architect. Built by Abou Youssef Yakoub El Mansour late in the twelfth century, it alone, of three identical towers, remains today in original perfection. Marrakesh, once a city of 700,000, today is a drowsy, picturesque community of 50,000 inhabitants.

The BEER You Miss
Is Only "Forbidden Fruit"
Every real joy . . . every help remains

If you miss beer, it is only because you do not know these facts:

There is a brew called Atlas Special Brew which is even better than the best of old. It is made by the same masters who made Atlas Beer, always famous in Chicago. And they take special care, so you won't miss beer. Not a "near-beer," without age or zest. We use the old-time process, skill and materials. But now we treat the water, so you get here the mellow flavor of famous European brews.

We cool this brew gradually. We filter it through white wool pulp. We age it for months before bottling, then pasteurize each bottle after it is sealed.

Flavor, Tang and Zest

After the brewing we evaporate most of the alcohol. But you don't miss that. If you compared this brew before and after the alcohol removal, you could not tell the difference.

Alcohol was only a small factor in good beer. What people liked in beer was the foam and flavor, the sparkle and the zest. They liked it in the evenings as a social drink, at dinners as a help to digestion, at night as an aid to sleep.

All those delights remain to you in Atlas Special Brew. And few have ever tasted an old-time brew as good.

Don't Spoil This Joy

Don't turn to rank substitutes. Atlas Special Brew will bring back at their best all the helps and joys of old. Just be sure of the name—Atlas Special Brew. A famous laboratory, on every bottle, certifies its purity.

Over 15,000 grocers, delicatessen stores and drug stores in Chicago and surrounding states now supply it. The cost is only 15c a bottle, much less by the case of 24 bottles. If you should have any trouble getting it, write or telephone us for the name of your nearest dealer. Don't go another day without it.

The coupon will bring you two bottles with our compliments, just to show you how good a new-day brew can be. It will surprise and delight you. Clip coupon now.

Our Drinking Girls

By W. E. Hill

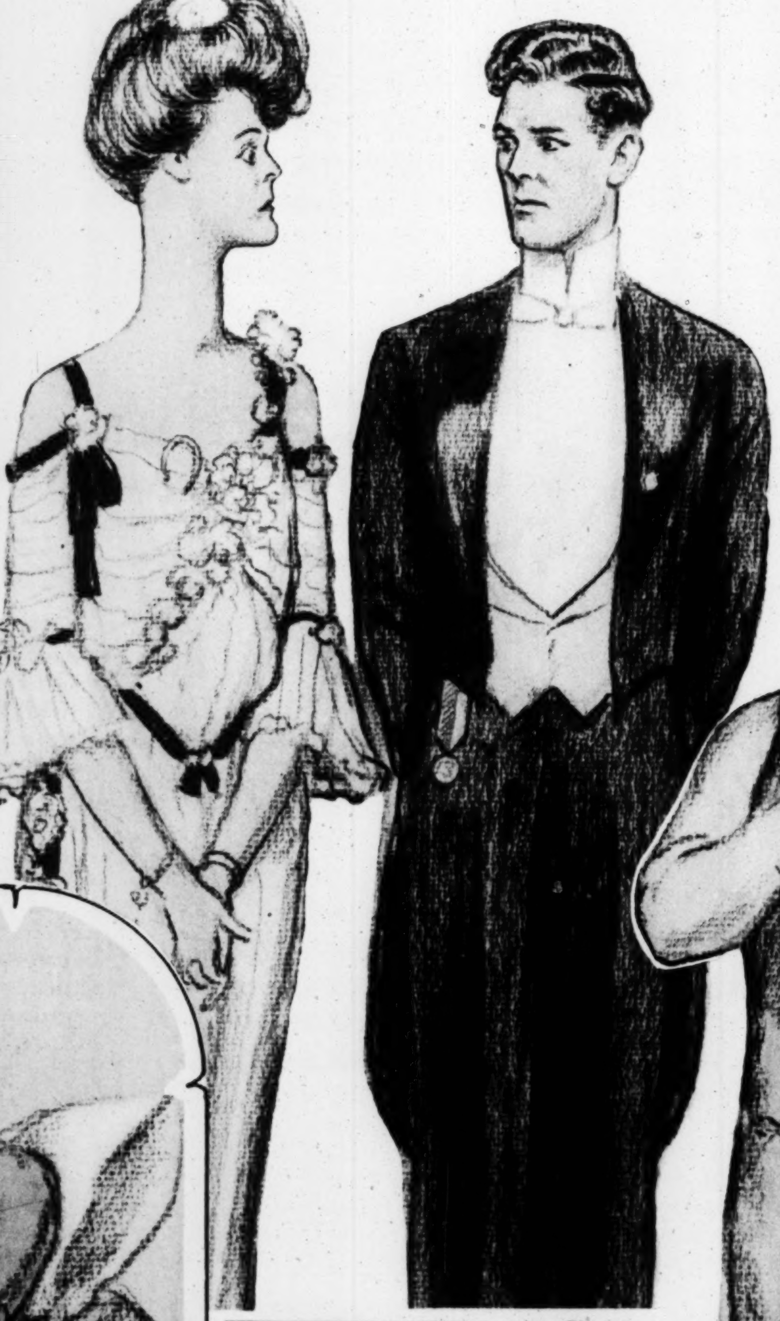
[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.]

The before dinner cocktail is very hard on those mature ladies who learned in their youth never to look upon the wine when it was red, or white, or even faintly spirituous, and now, with everybody serving a pick-me-up beforehand, dining out is becoming more and more hazardous. (These two lovely matrons are feeling the second cocktail and are trying not to relax too much. Or maybe it's the heat of the room.)

"Say, who is that man over there? I don't like his face. I'm going over and tell him I don't like his face!" Josephine is one of that great army of girls with an unborn sense of humor. And when in her cups, it shows itself in strange obsessions and violent impulses that sometimes have to be suppressed. Josephine will, before the evening is over, want to build a bonfire in somebody's living room, play leap frog on Main street, or call up the mayor and ask him how he gets that way, so that she will need a lot of looking after on the part of her escorts.

Just a bronx or two, and Ada gets awfully warm hearted to all the better looking men in the room. Likes to sit in a corner and tell the listening male about how her husband never did and never will understand her. "Do you know, you're the only person I've ever been able to really talk to," she will say, looking big eyed; "you seem to understand women."

Mrs. Button and Mrs. Kraus have met by the merest chance in a five and ten, whither Mrs. Button has gone to purchase cocktail glasses, and whither Mrs. Kraus has repaired to purchase liqueur glasses. "Oh, yes, I'm still a prohibitionist," explains Mrs. Button, "but everybody is making whoopee now, so I'm going to serve just a little quinine tonic to our guests, before dinner. Only mildly intoxicating, you know, and anyway it's just a tonic!"

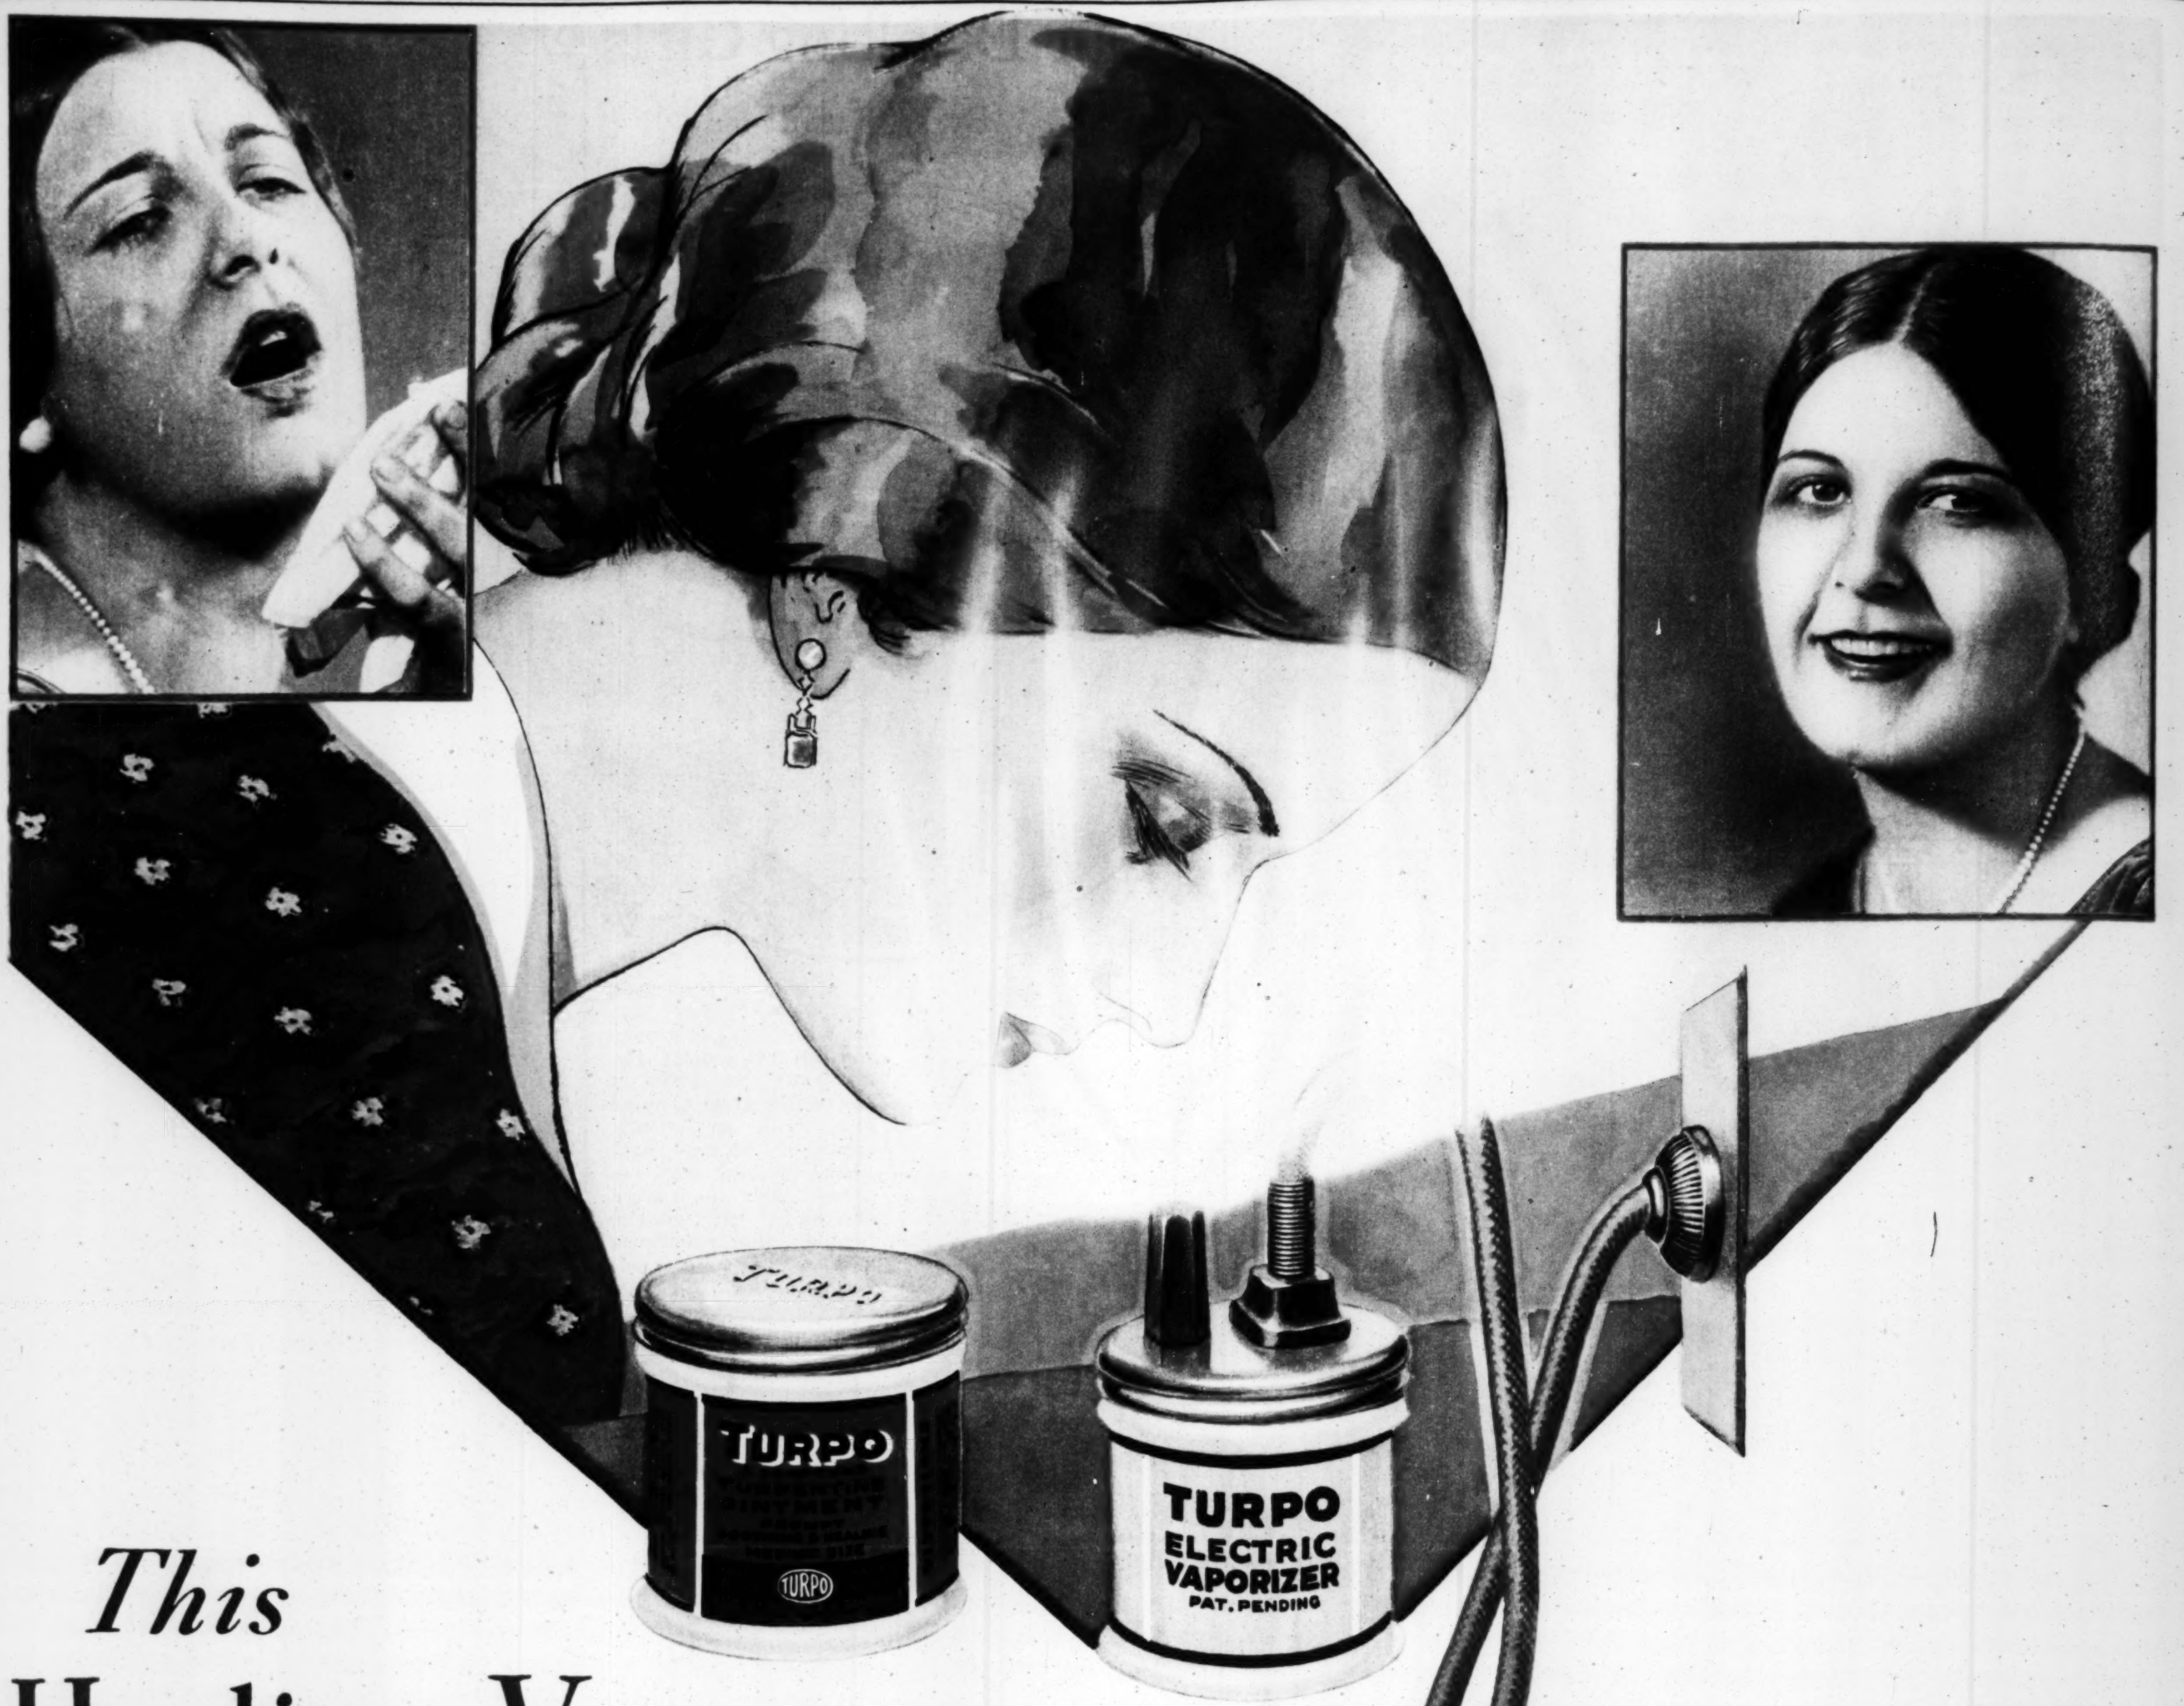


"How dare you, Horace! You've been eating Sen-Sen tablets to disguise the fact that you've been drinking and I want never to speak to you again!" Lest we forget the old dead days, here's a lover's quarrel of thirty years ago when grandma, bless her, was a Gibson girl who swore that lips touching liquor should never meet hers.

Mrs. Lucullus Lovejoy didn't want to come to this party one little bit. What with her neuritis, the new cook threatening to leave if Junior wasn't kept out of the kitchen, a spot the cleaner failed to remove from her evening gown, and worrying over whether Babe's tonsils ought to come out, Mrs. Lovejoy was just tuckered out by five P. M. Well, the Smiths are starting their dinner party with a few rounds of their bootlegger's best and by the end of round two Mrs. Lovejoy will be pretty certain she is the best dressed and maybe the prettiest woman in the room, will be full of affection for everyone in sight, and darned glad she came.

Liquor is a great remover of inhibitions and more and more girls who used to think they were too big and husky to be cute are going the limit after a few little drinks, and are curling up like wee kittens on the big overstuffed sofas. Some of the stoutest girls will even warble "Singing in the Rain," in baby talk after the third round.

"Listen, Martha, I do hope I didn't do anything, or say anything out of the way last night,—" Just one of those next morning apologetic ladies calling up her hostess.



This Healing Vapor
from this Electric Vaporizer

Here at last is the right way—the modern way—to treat a cold. Just plug this new electric vaporizer into a light socket. In a few moments you have a warm, healing vapor that spells quick relief to head and chest colds, congestion and similar complaints.

This new Turpo Electric Vaporizer is so simple, so amazingly effective that it has instantly replaced old-fashioned, haphazard cold treatments in thousands of homes.

See for Yourself

You can feel this Turpo vapor reach the spot. The first breath will convince you that finally you have found real help for colds. You will inhale a vapor so potent, so profuse, so ideally adapted to its purpose that each breath carries the true essence of Turpentine, Menthol and Camphor direct to the sore, inflamed, congested membranes of the nose, throat and chest.

Improvement is immediate. Your head clears, congestion is relieved, breathing becomes free, and shortly the cold breaks up.

So Simple—So Easy—So Quick

Consider the convenience of this new cold aid. No fuss or trouble. No greasy hands or soiled linen. No nasty-tasting mixtures or messy salves.

Just fill the vaporizer one-third full of water. Add one teaspoonful of Turpo. Plug cord into light socket—that's all. In a few moments, quicker than you can boil water over a stove, vapor will form and continue to form for fifteen minutes.

Consider its uses—in the sickroom, at night, at office, at home. Not only ideal for adults but mothers find it invaluable for children's colds, hacking coughs and croup. Even a sick child thinks it fun to inhale this beneficial Turpo vapor.

Practical—Safe—Sure

The Turpo Vaporizer is a thoroughly tested electric appliance. It comes complete with five feet of high quality cord and standard connection ready to plug into socket. The vaporizer jar itself is interchangeable with any regular Turpo jar of the same size. It is so staunchly made that it should last for years.

THE ONLY SCHOOL THAT TURNS OUT REAL LINGUISTS.

On its record The Berlitz School stands out as the ONLY school that ACTUALLY makes linguists of language students. Behind the Berlitz reputation is a Method . . . tested and proved—experimented with for years . . . developed and perfected at great expense. Today . . . after 50 years of unparalleled success in 26 countries, the Berlitz Method still remains the only genuine CONVERSATIONAL method that never fails to develop real linguists. Based on sound psychological principles, this Method is unique, yet practical. Simple, yet tremendously effective. There's no "poring" over books. You talk and listen your way to language mastery. Native teachers ONLY conduct classes. Each lesson is like fascinating game . . . gripping in interest—enjoyable, thrilling. And when you finish you're an accomplished linguist . . . months sooner. You will like this Method. And to prove it we offer you a free demonstration lesson in French, Spanish, German, Italian or any other modern language. Then see me personally and make a cash offer for my equity in the one that suits you or a substantial cash payment on contract of purchase.
No reasonable offer will be refused, and if you are fair to me and to yourself here is a chance to save money by acting at once. Address M T 133, Tribune.

WE MAKE SECOND MORTGAGES

Dullness in the real estate market has not affected our ability to make second mortgage loans to home owners at the same low cost; the low rates and convenient terms which we have applied have stood every test during the last five years—and they stand the test today.

We have not raised our rates; we make appraisals promptly; we close loans with dispatch; we charge 7% accruing interest and commissions which work out as follows:

$35.00 per $1,000 for 1 year
$63.00 per $1,000 for 2 years
$90.00 per $1,000 for 3 years

You must be able to make a cash deposit of $450 for equipment placed in your charge, which is fully secured. In reply give age, business experience, bank and business reference, and city interested in. Write President.

THE FINE USED CAR YOU BUY AT A BARGAIN PRICE FROM STUDEBAKER CO.

Come to our salesroom at 26th and Michigan—Chicago's greatest used car store—and select a fine used car at a price way below market value. You are protected by the famous Studebaker Pledge which allows you 5 days' free driving trial! We will take your car in trade and arrange liberal terms.

CHRYSLER SEDAN. 1928 with very spirited performance. Has attractive tan finish and hundreds of dollars' worth of extra equipment. $345.

WILLYS KNIGHT SEDAN. Late model 6. Invalid used it only for driving on sunny days so now it appears new; 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, heater, bumpers, spare tire, etc. $485.

DE SOTO ROADSTER. 1929 with smart canary yellow paint job. It's the last word for sparkling performance and beautiful appearance. Snubbers, 5 new tires, windshield wings, step plates, bumpers, etc. Roomy rumble seat. $575.

ESSEX SEDAN. Latest de luxe model, 4 whl. brakes, shutter front, new tires and other extras. Driven only a few months. $595.

STUDEBAKER COMMANDER. 1927 five pass. Sedan that's a beauty. It was carefully checked over by expert Studebaker mechanics and found to be in excellent mechanical condition. Has expensive mohair upholstery, handsome lacquered finish and a wealth of extras. It's a remarkable bargain at our price of $595.

PACKARD CLUB SEDAN. Late str. 8 equipped with shock absorbers, trunk, spare tire, bumpers, and other extras. This car was owned by a prom. executive in conjunction with three other cars, so it was given very little mileage. Most exacting inspection will convince you it's practically 100% in every detail. Will be sold at once for $985.

DODGE SEDAN. A late "Fast-4" with driving light, snubbers, spare tire, and other extras. It's unusually clean throughout and the motor is A1. Priced at $295, but it's actually worth twice this figure.

LINCOLN SEDAN. Has a special Judkins body. This 7 pass. was oiled and greased every 500 mi., so now it's in topnotch condition. Equipped with shutter front, spare tire, seat covers, heater, etc. Reduced to $495.

NASH SEDAN. Spec. 6 with 5 new tires, heater, winter front, spotlight, etc. The appearance is very attractive and the motor is smooth and powerful. Today $295.

HUPMOBILE SEDAN. We sincerely believe this str. 8 Hupp cannot be duplicated any place else at anywhere near our price. Has hundreds of dollars' worth of extra equipment and it's in splendid running condition. The finish, upholstery and tires are in dandy shape. Special for $350.

STUTZ SEDAN. Str. 8 with non-shatterable glass, shock absorbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. This Stutz never left the Chicago blvds. and you'll believe this statement when you thoroughly examine this car. Has spirited performance. The price is out of keeping with the high quality of the car. Only $650.

STUDEBAKER PRESIDENT. 1927, seven pass. that looks and runs better than many cars selling for $800. Equipped with 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, bumpers, spare tire, heater, etc. We obtained this car at a remarkably low figure, so we'll pass on the saving to you. Our price for immediate sale is $295.

STUDEBAKER CABRIOLET. 1929 President, str. 8 conv., with rumble seat, wire wheels, side mounts, and many extras. It's in absolutely new condition today and can be obtained at a big discount.

PONTIAC COUPE. 1928 with 4 wheel brakes, shock absorbers, spare tire, bumpers, etc. Will give new car satisfaction today. $450.

REO SEDAN. 5-pass., looks and runs better than many new cars selling for $600. General coachwork and interior are excellent. $250.

JORDAN SEDAN. Str. 8. Has very low mileage. We obtained this car at a very favorable figure. Other man's loss is your gain. So you can obtain this beautiful sedan at only $385.

ERSKINE SEDAN. Late model. Because of business reasons the former owner told us he wanted a bigger car and that's why he traded in this one. It's topnotch in every respect. Has 4 wheel brakes and very full equipment. $475.

CHEVROLET CABRIOLET. 1928 collapsible with new tires and rumble seat. It's 100% throughout. 4 whl. brakes, driving light, spare tire, bumpers, etc. $345. Also a 1929 CHEV. COUPE, like new, at $450.

AUBURN SEDAN. 1929 that's the last word for sparkling performance and attractive appearance. Shock absorbers, trunk, bumpers, spare tire, etc. $750.

WHIPPET COACH. We sincerely believe this 1929 model is the best Whippet buy in Chicago. It has unusually low mileage and the original owner, an elderly lady, only drove it occasionally for pleasure purposes. Equipped with 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, spare tire, bumpers, etc. $485.

Parisian Notables Set Pace for Women the World Over by Adapting Style to Type

The Marquise de Rochegude wears this bolero frock of leaf green velvet and gold shot print mousseline from Lucile Ltd.

A picturesque evening frock in wild-rose pink crepe de chine made by Redfern for Mme. Charles Dumont.

Two shades of Madonna blue crepe satin make an ideal afternoon frock for the Nordic blonde. From Phillipe et Gaston.

The Comtesse de Bearn wears a long sleeved dinner frock in black indestructible tulle and georgette from Lucile Ltd.

By Bettina Bedwell

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—A lot has been said about the social butterfly from pulpit and press. Those ladies who make it their business in life to appear socially perfect, beautifully clothed, radiant; a delight to eye and ear and (so say the social critics) a detriment to the husband's pocket book, are often criticized as "useless" and "parasitic." But, after all, are butterflies so useless and so parasitic?

We will leave the entomologists, or the bugologists, or whatever they are properly called, to describe the habits; the useful labors and the domestic life of the papillon to you, for we set out to maintain here and now, that the genus properly known as social butterfly does a whole lot of useful work in this world.

Passing lightly over the fact that she usually helps her husband's business interests or furthers some worthy charity by upholding the standard of elegance of her own country and time by her dressing, let us turn our attention to the really vital service which she renders her fellow women. She gives her time, her thought, the best of her personality to picking, to having fitted, to trying out, to wearing the new fashions. She does this and the result stands to benefit all the women of the world who have not the time to spend on long fittings, or the money to spend on dresses that may be worn once and then thrown into the discard as failures.

Each great Elegante is a type: Lady Abdy is inhumanly tall and what she wears successfully can well be accepted as a successful costume for all tall women of her particular build. Mme. Martinez de Hoz is of medium height and quite slim. She is not particularly striking, either as to coloring or in feature, so that the costumes which have proved lovely on her will prove inevitably right on the majority of women who are relatively slender and not tall.

La Comtesse di Robilant is supremely athletic, round as to figure, and has the upright carriage, the straight-toed walk, and the brisk movements which are characteristic of the sportswoman the world over. Lines which she has worn with success will be admirable on young, athletically plump women in San Francisco and Sidney, in Chicago and in Saint Sebastien.

Any woman who has gone through the grueling experience of having her dresses made to order, standing for hours and hours for fittings, giving her personal attention to inducing fitters to do everything just right, can well realize that the life of the "social butterfly," who has fifty dresses fitted in a season, is not all a bed of roses.

Also, any woman who has had her dresses made to order for some time realizes that one dress out of every so many (I personally would put the conservative average at one in six) is a total failure. In the simple language of our grandmothers, it "isn't fit to be worn to a dogfight." Remember, please, that the "social butterfly" takes the loss on these sad dresses and gives them to starving Armenians or Belgian milkfunds or for some other worthy cause. Perhaps stern economists would call her wasteful. Personally, we take off our hat to the butterfly. She is actually doing serious experimentation in that difficult science popularly called "The Mode."

If she ever appears in an unsuccessful dress among her peers nobody notices her, for there are enough successfully dressed women about to eclipse her utterly. You will never hear about her failures because no fashion writer will notice them. You will see only her glowing triumphs and these are worthy of your attention, for they provide an excellent guide to you in your choice of dresses. They have charm and chic, and each is adapted to a particular type of figure.

The gowns shown in today's illustrations have all been worn with great success at social functions during recent weeks in Paris. Madame la Marquise de Rochegude was remarked wearing a youthful afternoon costume, sketched on this page, from Lucile Limited at a reception at one of the ancestral hotel particuliers of the aristocratic Faubourg Saint Germain. The little, slenderizing bolero and tunic were of lustrous leaf green velvet; the turn down collar and cavalier cuffs of priceless real lace.

This frock followed the popular vogue for transformation ensembles. The bolero unties and the tunic unbuckles revealing a complete sleeveless frock of gold shot mousseline, printed in bright flowers. The rippling tunic is mounted on a clever hip yoke, long at the back, cut abruptly up at each side of the front, where it metamorphoses into a draped belt which fastens by being pulled through a golden buckle.

The echoing curves of tunic, yoke, and bolero form a pleasant harmony. The skirt length is significant, revealing some five or seven inches above the ankle in front; it just fails to touch the shoe in back. This may be considered a good, conservative level for the afternoon hem.

Evening hems droop further, though long trains are disappearing with the departure of winter. The evening frock illustrated by our artist was made by Redfern for Madame Charles Dumont of the German Embassy, who is noted for her smartness in European diplomatic circles. It expresses the spirit of 1930 in its picturesque simplicity. It is of wild rose pink crepe de chine and depends upon its graceful lines and not in the least upon ornamentation for its effect.

A high front decolletage extends extremely low in the back. This line is accentuated by the bertha which begins in the front like a narrow fichu, widens as it falls over the upper arms and curves down in a cape-like effect to a knot at the waist whence it falls in rounded sash ends.

The frock follows a tight princesse line. Shirrings at each side of the bodice draw it into horizontal folds about the figure. Four graduated petal godets are set into the skirt at the right side front and follow each other to the left side back where they trail slightly on the floor. The left side of the front falls in straight lines to the instep.

Pink gives rosy promise of spring and summer prominence. All smart women have one or two gowns, at least, of this flattering hue, of which wild rose pink is one of the most delicate and becoming variations.

At an important midwinter tea in the Ritz, one of the outstanding gowns was a model from Phillipe et Gaston, sketched on this page. It was of two tones of Madonna blue and two textures of crepe satin. The dull side of this adaptable fabric was used for the frock, itself, in the pale blue.

The skirt is a modern adaptation of the "cascades" of the 1880's. It is cleverly cut in four bias sections, which fit smooth in front and droop into flared flounces in the back. Darker blue, knife-plaited bands of the shining surface of crepe satin, stitched flat in front, define these divisions. In back they appear as formal ruffles edging the loose flounces.

The bloused bodice is decorated according to the same principle. A curved front incrustation of the dark blue shining satin continues into two narrow free panels caught under at the natural waist line. The full lower sleeves are characteristic of the spring trend.

A double circular puff, half of the pale blue matte satin, half of the dark blue shining surface, falls over a tight cuff of the pale blue. The rounded decollete is moderate all 'round. The blonde inconne who wore this frock was of the Nordic type, "divinely tall and most divinely fair."

Last but perhaps most original in our artist's bouquet is a black dinner gown made for the Comtesse de Bearn by Lucile Ltd. It is of coarse meshed, indestructible tulle and georgette. The feature of this frock is the symmetrical decollete line formed by applications of the black georgette on the corsage. The long, transparent sleeves have flaring cavalier cuffs incrusted with motifs of georgette. Georgette also forms the petal edged hip yoke, restraining the circular folds of the voluminous net skirt, edged with interlacing ovals of the black georgette.

PARIS SNAPSHOTS

¶Perugia is launching high shoes in black patent or highly polished brown leather for town wear, inspired by the old elastic sided shoes grandma used to wear. They are beautifully seamless on the outside of the foot. A split on the inside replaces the absent elastic. A strap which runs from the inside back buttons slightly outside the front. A buckle replaces the button for sports wear.

¶Paris shoe creators say that their smart clientes refuse strap slippers to wear with long dresses. The buttons get tangled up with their flounces. Consequently, many variations of the strapless pump are being designed for wear with formal frocks.

¶The Paris vogue for silver filigree is a shining echo of the Algerian exposition. Slave collars and bracelets like thick round snakes of the silver filigree play a supporting role in the southern ensemble.

¶Louiseboulanger accents her silver collars with motifs of carved jade or smooth cornelian; Molyneux prefers huge wooden beads, while Lanvin combines crystal with the silver filigree in more delicate evening necklaces.

Well-Coiffed Gray Locks Are Lovely

But Attention to Hair Hygiene and Diet Will Prolong the Period of Natural Color

by Antoinette Donnelly

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—We women are so constituted that we can rave about the beauty of other women's gray and graying hair—and mean every word of the raves, too—and still we cannot face our own first touch of frost in the hair with anything like a philosophical calm.

Probably it is because some one has hinted that sex charm is associated with youth without touch of the frost in its locks. And there's no denying the fact that if a woman is not well established in her particular field, she has a time trying to meet the business demand for the younger looking woman. Just scads of women are driven to hair dyeing parlors after they've made an unsuccessful round of job-hunting. And while they'd agree among themselves that they looked better the old way, it is most often a case of not being able to afford to look one's age.

Softening Influence.

Personally to me, a well coiffed and obviously well cared for head of gray hair is lovely. When combined with an unlined, rosy, skin and shining eyes, it makes the face look more youthful actually. There are scores of women who grow better looking as they get older simply by virtue of the softening influence of the silver threads.

But, of course, it is not much use trying to sell gray hairs to an audience, the majority of whom insist that so long as men choose their sweethearts and their secretaries from among the nongray or graying class, they're going to struggle to look as if they belonged in the preferred group.

The struggle, however, should begin back a few years, with the very first blazoning forth of a white hair. Don't wait until the head is half gray or all gray and expect then to recapture the early glory without the more or less questionable aid of the dyepot.

I honestly do think that the reason gray hair is the bugaboo that it is, outside of the argument involving male sentiment and economic pressure, is that the vast majority of women, graying, lose heart about their appearance generally. They adopt a sort of "what's the use" attitude toward their appearance, when the truth is that with the first gray hairs more, not less, time and study of one's appearance is called for. If women would think of gray hair as something that may be made into a charming asset with surrounding perfections, I doubt if you'd hear the usual groans about its coming. Everything about the person should be keyed up to the ultimate zenith to make the hair an asset. Skin, teeth, figure, clothes should take on a new and concentrated study for better and better effect.

Gray Hair Prevention.

But to get back to gray hair prevention: First, of course, is the matter of health. Certain diseases notoriously contribute to color changes in the hair, those of nervous origin, chiefly. Pigmentation is affected by glandular changes which come with advancing years or are brought about earlier by glandular disease.

Anything that lowers the vitality of the body exaggerates the tendency to graying. Diets, from which iron and sulphur foods are omitted, are provocative of early graying. Exercise, particularly of the play variety or live interests outside of one's work, combat the tendency to tense nervous living.

Then everything you can do to promote scalp stimulation is additionally helpful. Can't you remember back some years when hair was long and women prided themselves on not a single gray hair at fifty? It seems to me these women were commonly heard of in my youth, anyway. Their lives were blessed with a calmer outlook on life, for one thing, and religion was more of a refuge then for ills of the mind and heart than it appears to be today. Nervous wrecks were not one-half so current then as now—all of which philosophic calm and lack of it has an effect on the hair. Then, too, the hairbrush was expected to do its duty by Aunt Rebecca's head. And she saw to it that it did.

Anyway, use that hairbrush you have on hand and massage the scalp with it morning and night as a graying preventive. I can give it here a personal endorsement after a recent experience with its hair rejuvenating power.

Menace of Dandruff.

Alcoholic or alkaline solutions should be kept off hair that you are trying to keep from getting gray. Friction of the scalp with oils to resupply the greasy coating is helpful. Hair grays fastest with the dry scalp. If there is an accumulation of dry dandruff, you had better assume that the next step will be a changed pigmentation if you don't take immediate steps to tone up the scalp, so act accordingly.

Don't be afraid to wash the hair just because of the frosted strands. Cleanliness now is even more imperative. And when you shampoo, get the habit of finishing up with a cold rinse. There's nothing like it to give tone to the scalp, which is the thing your head needs more than anything else.

The most discouraging type of graying head is the oily haired one with cakey dandruff. It is ugly. But there are good shampoos, soaps, and lotions for this particular form of hair ill, and the excess oil can be cleared up with care, just as you can improve the dry type of scalp. But you can't just sit down and wish your hair were different. You have to make it so. Even if you do not manage to stop the graying of the hair, as may be impossible in cases where heredity is a strong influence, at least you will still be able to hold a place among the well groomed class of heads. And that is what matters more than the actual graying.

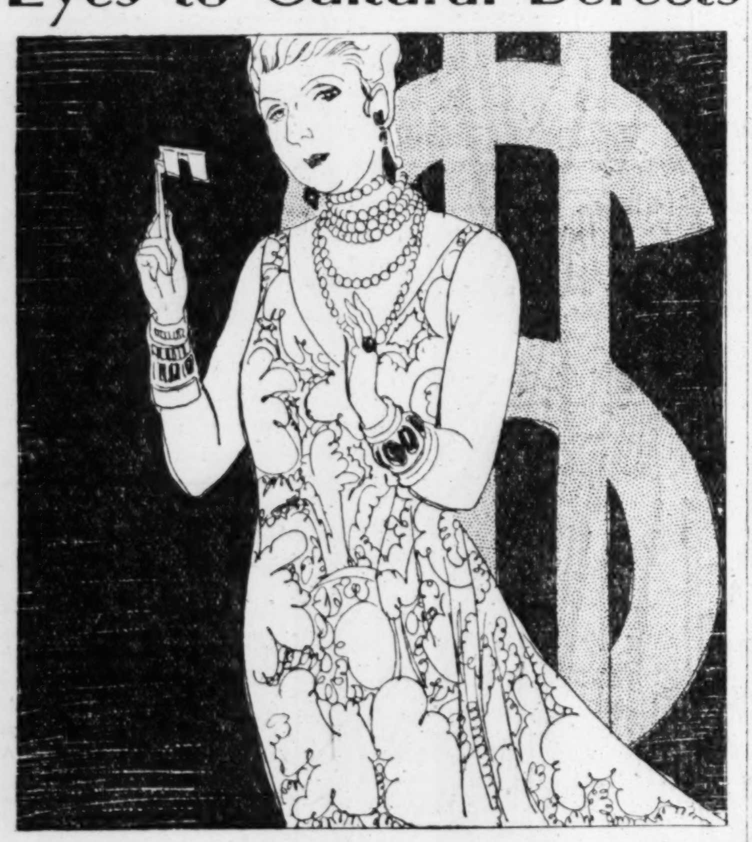
Instead of becoming discouraged about styles of hair dressing, it is time for you to look about for the best head lines and to defeat your liability with a beautiful cut, trim, and wave.

One never hears unflattering comment on gray hair that is beautifully dressed, does one? It's only on the head that looks discouraged and neglected that the vengeance of discouraging words is wrought.

Close Your Eyes to Cultural Defects

Wives Fail to See That It's Only Poor, Dumb Hubby's Shoulder to the Wheel That Permits Them Leisure for the Higher Things.

By Doris Blake.



NO small amount of the difficulty attending marriage as it is currently practised in our midst, is due to a disparity in cultural development with the wife more often on the side of superiority than the other half, when such disparity does exist.

It's no secret among lecture bureau managers that their star speakers would waste their erudition upon rows and rows of wooden benches were it not for the women. Foreign literary celebrities are usually impressed into an exhortation on why their American audiences are so largely feminine. Very often they attack a native restlessness among American women, founded, as they tell it, on domestic boredom. More often the truth is that women are deeply interested in self-improvement, and, having the time for it, pursue knowledge avidly.

Whether some of it is cultural labor lost does not matter so much as that women are concerned with the acquisition of knowledge. The fact that librarians, booksellers, and publishers admit women to be their principal patrons, whether the men pay for the books or not, is significant. And the class of literature they read is a long, long, cry from Laura Jean Libbey or Mrs. Southworth pap of some generations ago.

Ruins Many Marriages.

As some one said, "If you are looking for one outstanding reason for marital incompatibility, cherchez la femme with the culture bug."

Unless a girl of the education-hungry group chooses her mate for brain as well as brawn, her marriage may hit the rocks on purely cultural grounds, because it is one of the ornerinesses of the creature, after she has weighed and measured a man as "solid" matrimonial material, to later assume an unreasonable intolerance toward his educational shortcomings. While she slaves over a paper to read before her club, her resentment toward his disinterest grows. His club interests, for the most part, being of a fraternal and goodtime nature, strike her as being a shallow and futile waste of life. Unless the woman is blessed with a sense of humor or can accept her Big Boy for the sterling qualities he has, she is bound to get a slightly lop-sided viewpoint on her true position.

Granted that men might pursue money with a little less ardor and culture with a little more, still a wife might try to face the fact more sanely that if it were not for a man's avid pursuit of money, she would have neither the leisure nor the means to avail herself of the higher educational advantages. Also, she might try to realize further that her development during the last decades from housekeeper to companion and then on to her current high state of mental culture has been an evolution that men have not been permitted to experience. Their husband status remains very much the same. They are still the providers—and a fact not to be forgotten, with this great cultural development, man's job of providing has become a more and more strenuous one.

Women want more education by means of travel; they want more money for books, plays, concerts, operas, lectures, etc. So, if high pressure has been brought to bear on woman's education, high pressure also has been brought to bear on man's good-natured contribution to it. And you have to admit man's good nature in connection with his wife's pursuit of learning, which she sometimes uses as a "rolling pin" over his head.

Beware Killing the Goose.

A case in point: Mrs. X., let's call her, had some musical education before her marriage, also some talent. She married a man who probably had less ear for music than any man she knew. Before marriage, she laughed heartily at and with him over his shortcomings. But even before he was on the high road to his present success he was generously indulgent with her music ambitions. She could study and practise to her heart's content. Instead of going it alone, however, the wife made up her mind she was going to do over that unmusical ear of her mate. She did, too, in a manner of speaking, for now it no longer listens to any of her plans with tolerance. She strangled the goose that laid the golden egg for her own advancement, literally.

There are just countless instances that could be reported of women whose cultural advance has depended solely upon a husband's bounty and whose idea of gratefulness for the advantage is to browbeat the poor goat with her now "superior" mind. The situation is not dissimilar to the ingratitude of children to parents who have slaved their lives away that said children might not have educational advantages denied them, only to be treated as inferior beings in return.

Mental Companionship Desirable.

There is no denying, of course, that mental companionship contributes an ideal clause in any close relationship. But if father refuses to be an uplift party to his Rotarian group and, if the R group in turn would die laughing at the idea of a paper on the work of Keats, why not bring to the rescue some of the real culture that can see in the pursuits of others advantages bearing upon their particular case? Anyway, women can afford to be tolerantly good natured on this so-called disparity of mind because there are so many of them who can get together and laugh about it. And if women could not get together and digress on the shortcomings of husbands, would all the culture in the world give them one-tenth of the smug satisfaction they get out of swapping confidences of martyrdom.

Anyway, it is one of the things that can't be cured in a minute, nor perhaps in a generation at the present rate of progress. So why not learn to laugh, not about the men but about the cussedness of women who by the bounty of their husbands are enabled to enjoy their cultural pursuits and who, in turn, would like to be permitted the luxury of feeling ashamed of their benefactors?

Just a Ruse.

"Dear Miss Blake: Every time I call up my girl she says she is going out with her father. What would you advise? CURIOUS."

Apparently she isn't anxious to accept your invitations and is using that as a ruse.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Prunes—Correctly Treated—May Be as Attractive as Any Bonbon.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

PARTIES and prunes may be just as effectively coupled as prunes and prisms. We mention parties at this date because February is a great party month, and people are usually looking for some extraordinary thing when they might use simple things with most gracious effects. The stuffed prune and the little wooden box with its artificial blueness is a de luxe and international confection. Thirty years ago prune whip was considered a superlative party dessert. Certain combinations of prunes with whipped cream can be made exceedingly delicious and this general statement may cover the individual prune pie.

An acceptable breakfast dainty for a holiday meal is a hot glazed prune. These are fine enough to serve to guests and to best beloveds. If you can make them well you will find people greatly appreciating them as a present.

Prunes have indeed so risen in estimation that editorials are written about the fact of their social and commercial and everyday rise. They have risen from being raggedy, repulsive, and sickening because of poor cooking and wrong seasonings to the quality we have tried to indicate.

Prunes are sweet enough of themselves if the sugar is not leached out of them to be cooked without any addition of sugar, which may destroy their vigor and clear, clean, palatable quality. At the other extreme is the addition of lemon to prunes in cooking them, and this may do something that is disagreeable to most people. Perhaps once in my life I have eaten spiced prunes that I could indorse, but in general spicing the prunes has gone with a type of cooking that would make them poor in any case.

Preparing Prunes for the Cooking.

Inspect prunes, discard any ragged ones. In paying a higher price for prunes we get those that have received a careful grading and consequently few or none will have to be rejected. In paying a lesser price, if we have to reject a number of prunes from a pound we have thereby increased the price we paid. If prunes seem particularly dirty, wash them once and then add a second washing water and let them stand in it for a few minutes. Then rub each prune through the fingers and rinse them again.

Perhaps the medium measurement of water to add when they are put to soak, if they are soaked, should be two cups of water to a pound, but under certain circumstances we may use up to four cups, because of the amount of water needed to cover them, and because of the kind of utensil we use. Anybody can see that it requires more water to cover a pound of prunes in a utensil in which they make hardly more than a single layer than when they are in a utensil of small diameter.

It is best to keep prunes covered when they are soaking, and when they are cooking, if the cooking is done in the right way, but if there is too much fire under the prunes that are cooking the cover should be left off.

If we are to soak prunes at all, it is probably best to soak them until the water around them is agreeable to drink. After that cook them gently until they are tender and the amount of water around them can be cooked down till it will fairly glaze the prunes when poured over them.

Self-Glazed Prunes.

Because a shining prune is so pretty and appetizing, it is worth while to have this aim in cooking them for just plain service. If we try we can make them as beautifully shining as glass. One of the ways this can be done is to take one cup of medium prunes, inspect, wash, and rinse them, add to them one cup and a half of cold water and let them soak over night. When ready, cook them quite gently in a small covered pan.

When they are tender test the water and, if it seems dead and strawy, cook it down until it is like a thick sirup and pour it over the prunes, which will thus get a bright glaze or be like candied prunes. We can serve them without having any liquid around them although they should be quite as soft and will be pleasanter than those that are served in a liquid.

A Prune Confection.

When the prunes are cooked as just described but cooked in the liquid until it is partially reduced, we may drain them from it and with a knife and fork remove the pits, fold the cut edges in and as we fold them in add some nut meats or a fondant to make a pretty and most tasty confection. After the edges have been folded in with the filling or stuffing, put them on a plate to drain somewhat.

These are excellent for a luncheon box or for a bonbon dish and we can make them for special occasions. For instance, for St. Patrick's day, a little more than a month hence, we can stuff them with green fondant or pistachio nuts. Before they can be cut and the seeds removed, they must be cooked until the pulp does not stick to the pit. If the prunes have not been cooked to perfection we can make them more bright and glossy by pouring over them the prune juice cooked down to a thick sirup. It is all a nice piece of careful work.

Another Prune Confection.

Sometimes we have called the following confection fried prunes and sometimes glazed prunes. For these choose the largest prunes obtainable, cook them carefully, then, with knife and fork, remove the pits, roll the prunes in sugar; have a tablespoon of butter, or perhaps a little more, according to the amount of work to be done, melted in the frying pan, put the sugared prunes into it and heat them until the sugar melts. They will need to be turned once. These make a fine breakfast fruit and a good relish with bread or meat or sandwiches.

Baked Prunes.

Prunes baked in the correct way may also be like glazed prunes, exceedingly bright of skin, and they will retain their gloss better than those cooked in the butter. By baking prunes we may convince ourselves that some of the best effects to be secured come from avoiding the old and conventional treatments. I have especially loved to exploit the baked prune for one reason because we may start the work at once without any previous soaking of this dried fruit, and we also may get a prune that is a delicious confection this way. In fact, I have called it "an acid prune caramel."

This method does seem to develop whatever acid there is in the prune to make it a little more vigorous and pleasing, while we get something that is chewy and bonbonlike with full flavor, and, we repeat, a delicious one. If the prunes are moist all we need to do is to wash them and rinse them carefully, then to put them in a covered casserole with water to a little more than half cover. Note how much less water this is than what we use with stewed prunes. Put the prunes in the water in the covered casserole into a slow oven, or one not above 300 degrees, and cook for two hours.

If we think a little longer cooking will be good, we may add a little more water at the start. Always we must emphasize that one of the things that determines the amount of water to use is the condition of the prune. For instance, a two pound package of prunes, all fresh and moist, will in the kitchen of an ordinary apartment house lose enough moisture to amount to one-fourth of a pound. You must take that into consideration and the only way to find out their condition is to weigh them.

Individual Prune Pie.

Prepare the crust for the pie and when ready fill each one with one-third cup of prune puree into which has been folded whipped cream made from one-third cup of plain cream. Some more whipped cream may be put over the top. When prunes are diluted thus with cream, usually we need no sugar because they are more refreshing without it, while with it they may be cloyingly sweet.

Individual Prune Whip.

This dessert can be elegant and delicate and pleasing and it is entirely of the order of one of the finest products of cookery, the soufflé. To each egg white beaten to a snow, allow two tablespoons of sugar and two tablespoons of prune puree with a few drops of vanilla. Taste of the product and if it is not sweet enough for your taste add a little more sugar. Some people prefer powdered sugar instead of the granulated, and instead of vanilla some people prefer lemon juice. Bake like a soufflé.

A Prune Pudding.

Take one cup prune puree, one-eighth of a teaspoon of salt, one cup of milk, two or three tablespoons of flour and some chopped prune pits, or a substitute for them. A little almond flavoring, perhaps, is the best substitute. Mix these ingredients, stir them over the fire until the flour is well cooked and the whole mixture is a blend, then pour into molds to set and serve with whipped cream. It is the flour which makes this pudding stiff enough to mold and instead of flour we could adapt this recipe to a gelatine.

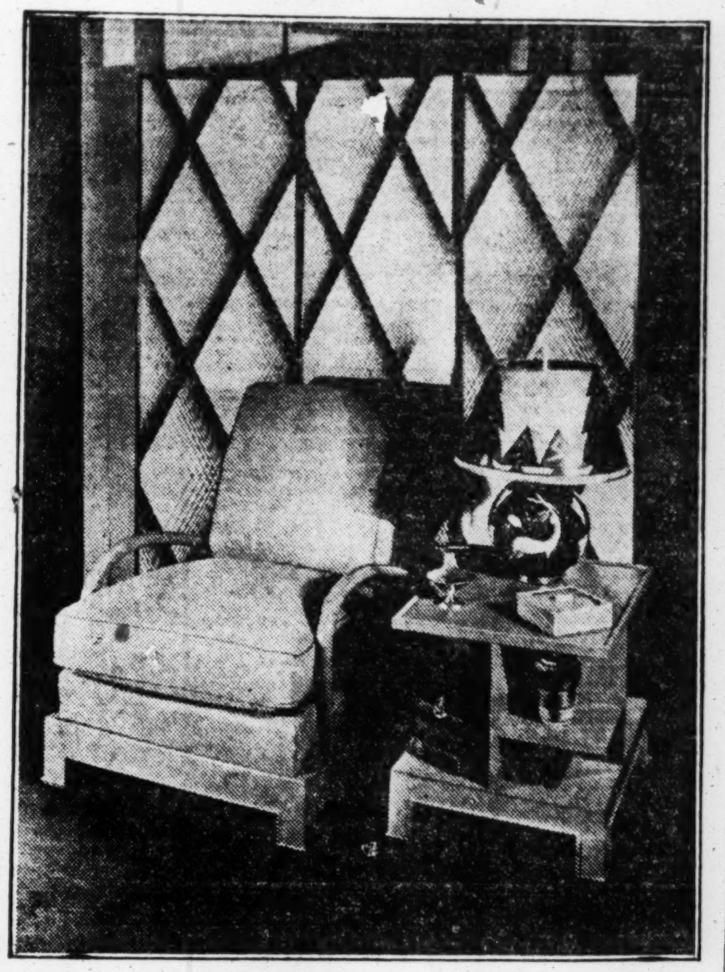
HOME FURNISHING AND DECORATING

The Newest in Furniture Design - - By Edith Weigle

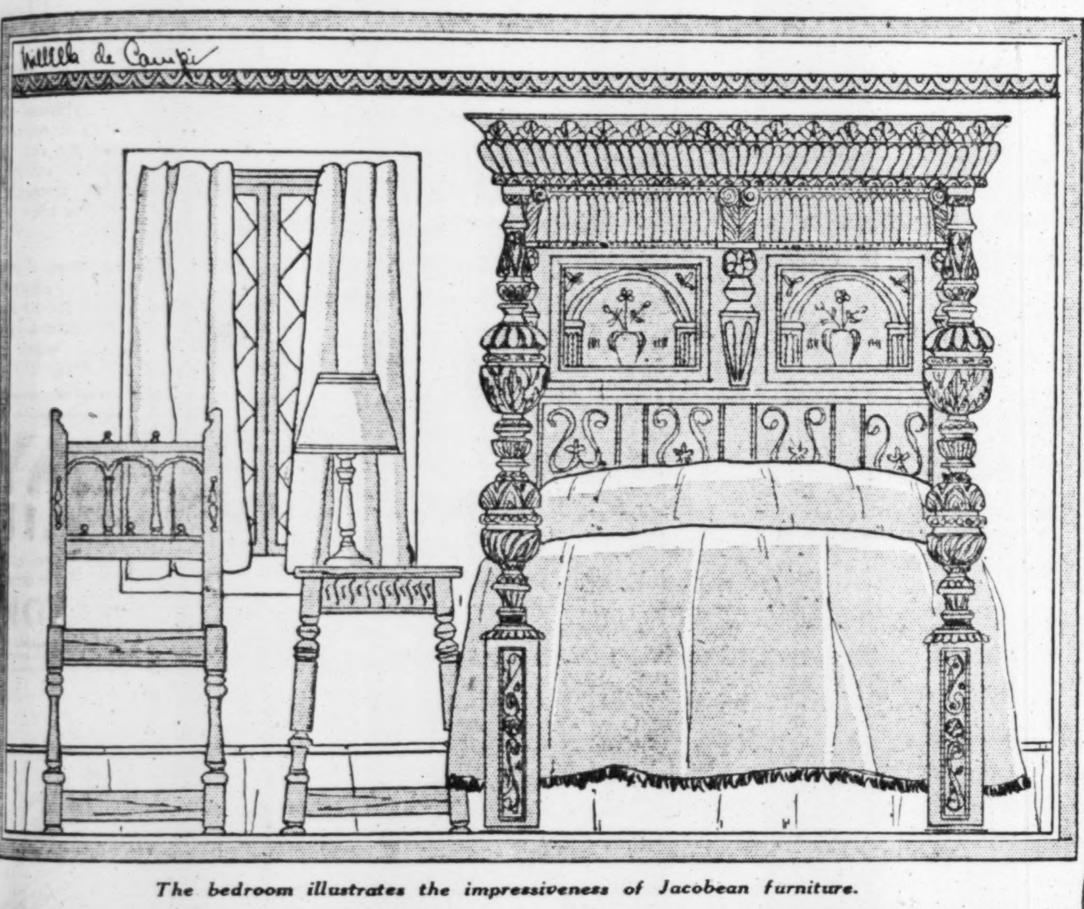
Donald Deskey, a well known designer of contemporary furniture, created this ensemble of steel with black formica for table tops and sofa arms. It is unusually novel and striking and the upholstery material of almond green satin is impervious to water and will not fade in the strongest sunshine. The window draperies show soft shades of green fading into yellow. On the wall hangs a modern print designed by Ruth Reeves in black, chartreuse and white on satin. The floor lamp in the corner is steel and throws the light upward, thus producing an even illumination everywhere.

This modern group creates a restful atmosphere because of simplicity of line and lovely color. The wall paper is in soft shades of gray. The comfortable arm chair, upholstered in gold antique velvet, is drawn up to a small burl walnut table of contemporary design on which is placed a stunning squatty lamp whose base is deep red pottery and whose shade has a touch of the same color in its pattern of large calla lilies. Thus you get gray, gold and crimson—a beautiful combination of colors.



Here's a jolly little setting that will bring an air of smartness and casual chic into any room it graces. The screen has a criss cross pattern in black and white, making an excellent background for the modern chair of coral enamel with beige cloth upholstery and the table with irregular shelves, painted to match the chair. Blue, white and gold are the colors in the imported pottery lamp and shade. This chair is extremely comfortable and does not look stodgy as so many do, because it has the advantage of slender arms rather than the ordinary rolled over, rotund ones. Both of these chair groups and the cabinet below were seen in Chicago department stores.

The Jacobean Era



The bedroom illustrates the impressiveness of Jacobean furniture.

By WillElla de Campi

HAVING completed last Sunday a consideration of the more important styles of French furniture, we offer now a survey of the English periods, beginning with the Jacobean era. Under the Jacobean or Stuart reigns is classed that furniture which was made during the time of James I., Charles I., Cromwell, Charles II., and James II. The period may be divided into three distinct sections—that of James I. and Charles I. [Jacobean proper], which lasted from 1603 to 1649; that of the commonwealth under Cromwell [Cromwellian], which lasted from 1649 to 1660, and that of Charles II. and James II. [Carolian or restoration], which lasted from 1660 to 1688. Each of these sections has characteristics distinctly different from the others.

In the early Jacobean period much of the influence of the preceding Elizabethan reign was still evident in furniture design. Oak continued to be the predominant wood used and the general form of furniture was severely rectangular. Legs of tables and chairs, though they might be elaborately decorated, were strictly perpendicular. Chair backs were uncompromisingly straight and the seats were flat and square. Heavy underbracings were a feature of both chairs and tables.

All pieces of furniture were replete with ornament, and decorative carvings excelled. Much of the carving was of the modeled type with designs standing out in clear relief against backgrounds which had been lowered or recessed by gouge and chisel. Another type of carving that was popular at the time was that in which designs in flat surfaces were thrown into relief by having their groundwork sunk or gouged out. Marquetry, too, was extensively used in panels and incidental sections.

Typical designs in carving included a running pattern of figure eights, and contiguous circles, semi-circles filled with petals, geometric and lozenge paneling, rounded arches, double scrolls, lunettes, tulips, interlacing hearts, strapwork, acanthus, split balusters and ovals.

Paint was used, to some extent, for decoration. Armorial bearings were colored in their correct tones on the panels of bed heads or chests. Arabesques in two or three colors were occasionally painted on a solid background of another color, and cornices were sometimes picked out in two or three colors. Frames of chairs and other pieces made of cheaper woods were frequently painted black or some dark shade enriched by gilding.

In the early part of the Jacobean period, chairs were comparatively scarce, since their use was restricted to persons of high rank. Stools and forms, or backless benches, were the common seating equipment, and these were used in great numbers. They were sturdily made with turned or carved legs and strong stretchers. The legs, which were always straight, were sometimes given an outward spread.

When chairs were used, they were considered important pieces of furniture, with flat square seats and high, perpendicular backs. Seats were usually high from the floor, with heavy stretchers between the legs used as footstools to lift the feet above draughty floors. There was little upholstery except for a few pieces found in the great houses of the nobility, but cushions were sometimes added for comfort.

Settles or benches with arms and backs were usually paneled and ornately carved. The part between the seat and the floor was sometimes enclosed by panelling, and the seat was hinged so that the piece could be used for a chest.

Richly carved chests and cupboards abounded at this time. Many of the chests were elevated on turned or carved supports. Gradually the lower section was closed in to be used as a cupboard, and later a deep drawer was added in the section beneath the chest proper. The final development from these pieces was the chest of drawers as we know it today.

Beds were important items, impressive and cumbersome affairs. Ponderous testers were elaborately carved and paneled on the under side and were supported by heavy posts, which often stood clear of the beds. Bed heads and tester cornices, too, were richly carved.

Mirrors were not common in early Jacobean days, as glass was difficult to procure. Those mirrors which were in use were small and were set in heavy frames, usually embellished with elaborate carving.

Colors used at this time were dark and rich in tone, crimson, red and deep blue being favored. Walls were usually paneled in wood or were of plaster, and small window openings were fitted with leaded panes.

In viewing the second of the three divisions of the Jacobean or Stuart period, that of Cromwell, we find that there was a general revolt against the arts and refinements, resulting in a somewhat crude and uninteresting style of furnishing. Cromwellian suppression, however, evinced a certain dignity and reticence. Sound construction superseded ornamentation. This austerity, however, was completely overthrown with the Restoration and the reign of Charles II., so that the Carolian or late Jacobean furniture and decoration (which we shall describe next week) differed markedly from that of the early period.

Today's illustration shows a man's bedroom done in impressive early Jacobean style. The bed with its elaborate carvings is of oak, as are the other pieces of furniture. An old joint stool, used as a bedside table, and a typical Jacobean chair are also made of oak. The bed cover is of crimson wool rep, edged with a narrow black and twisted fringe. An old silver candlestick on the bedside table has been electrically equipped and fitted with a stretched sheepskin shade. There are natural colored linen draw curtains at the windows. Black fur rugs are used on the oak floor.

Widow Needs Help.

"Mrs. C. and her seven children have not adequate furniture for their rooms. There are only three dining room chairs and so the two youngest children stand on footstools at the table while three others sit on a bench and eat their meals in this fashion. Told of Better Position.

In 1905 I took a temporary position after an illness of three months. When I went to bed Friday night I knew the next day would end that work and I would have to find something else. Positions were scarce, I had not had much experience, and the matter worried me.

Toward morning I dreamed a small boy came and asked me if I would like to have my fortune told. I assented, and he led me by the hand through a dense, beautiful forest to a secluded cavern. There sat a little very old woman brewing something over a fire. She looked at me searchingly.

"You are going to lose your job," she crooned, "but don't worry. You will put your foot into something much better."

While I don't believe in dreams or fortune telling, I woke up feeling light hearted, and the idea of finding a new job did not worry me in the least. The next week I got the best position I had ever had, and am still with the same people—24 years.

Dreamed of Nephew.

At almost 8 o'clock one morning I was dreaming of Bob, a young nephew of mine, whom I hadn't seen or heard from for several years. I dreamed I saw and heard him crying so plainly that it awakened me. I told my husband about it and said Bob must be thinking about me.

In a few days I received a letter from him saying he had been thinking about me. The letter was written at 8 o'clock the morning of my dream. I answered it immediately, and he replied saying my letter made him so happy he cried. H. M. F.

Right Idea!

This eight year old husky is the son of Mrs. J. W. Andrews, 7835 East End Ave., Chicago. She says: "Donald's wonderful condition shows my idea is right.

"Whenever he's the least cross or upset or has a cold, I give him a little California Fig Syrup. It always brightens him up; regulates his stomach and bowels; gives him a hearty appetite. I have used it with Donald since he was a year old, and it has never failed to help him promptly."

All the children love the rich, fruity flavor of California Fig Syrup. A pure vegetable product, it doesn't gripe or sicken. It always acts gently but thoroughly to cleanse the system of bilious, headachy, constipated children. Doctors say it tones and strengthens weak bowels. Try it with your child. See how bad breath, coated tongue or feverishness disappear!

The name California marks the genuine, famous for 50 years. So look for it when buying.

For that INDIGESTION

For 36 years, men and women by the million have settled stomach disturbances with a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet. A reliable remedy; a real relief. And you have never tried them! In 1894 a druggist sold his first package of Stuart's. Today they are a drug-store staple. The first thing that comes to mind when the stomach needs a sweetener. No burning soda! Just a happy combination of Calcium Carbonate (2½ times more effective than soda) Magnesia and other valuable ingredients. In ten minutes—or less—acidity is overcome; all that sourness dispelled.

Many parents have come to realize these tablets are ideally suited to children's digestive disorders. The tremendous sale of the family size boxes is proof of that. Next time a young stomach is complaining, think of Stuart's.

Who wants to "do dishes" 1000 times a year?

THREE times a day, seven times a week, over a thousand times a year! Is it any wonder that so many women consider hand dishwashing the most disagreeable job in the home? Is it any wonder that engineers have been working for years to solve the dishwashing problem? And now their efforts have been crowned with success, in the development of the OPEN LETTER TO ST. VALENTINE.

Kindly Saint, your good intentions
Are so sweet one sadly mentions
Little flaws that spoil, a bit, your best romantic aims.
If you had conferred with Cupid
He had stopped your rash or stupid
Blundering that mixed up gifts and cards and dates and names.

Do not think I'm quite ungrateful,
Purposely perverse and hateful.
See the loot. My valentines must number nine or ten.
No. I'm only blue and nervous—
Driven so by your poor service . . .
All the valentines I have are from the wrong young men.

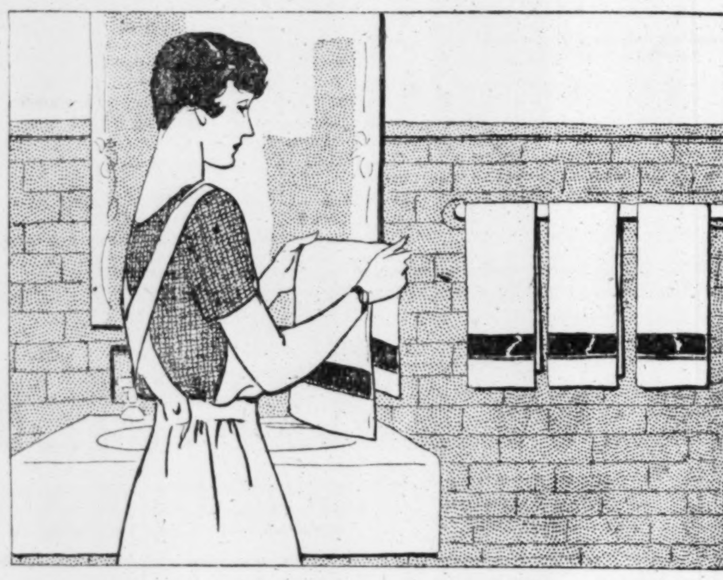
Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde

Towels, with Set-In Strips in Pastel Shades, Complete the Bathroom Color Scheme.



What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework, write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

A NEW way of using colors in white towels is to set the strip in between the towel hem and towel. It makes a beautiful looking towel when finished and can be made in the guest or regular bathroom towel size.

You can buy beautiful toweling and make the entire thing yourself, or buy towels having hemstitched hems. Delicate shades of tan, rose, green, blue, lavender and orchid are used, and if you want to make them still prettier embroider an initial in the color used in the towel, using the cross-stitch embroidery.

The linen to be set in the towel must be cut straight by pulling a thread and cutting by that. Allow one-half inch more than the width of the hem before it is folded together. This will give you a quarter-inch turning on each edge. The same allowance must be made at each end to make a nice piece of work. Turn in all edges and baste together, so that the creased edges meet exactly. Then baste the towel hem to the folded edge of the colored strip, and the turned in edge to the towel edge. Overhand, taking small and even stitches. Unless these edges are carefully basted together you will find that the material held next to you will be fulled some in sewing on.

Cross-stitch letters can be bought and transferred to the material, in which case you should use an embroidery frame to do the work in. But if you use canvas you can easily copy any letter you choose. Before cutting the piece of canvas it is necessary to count the spaces or stitches, both across and up and down—of course counting the longest and widest parts. Then count the required spaces on the canvas, and cut a piece about one inch longer and wider than the letter will require. This must be basted on the towel, so that the center of the letter will come exactly in the center of the space where the letter is to be.

You will also have to be sure that the letter will be just where you intend having it, and not a little to one side or the other. After the work is finished, pull out the shorter threads of the canvas first and the long ones will then come easily.

VALENTINES

By Eleanor Jewett.

It's very surprising
How valentines grow;
You cut a red heart
Out of paper, you know,

And then take a cupid
And paste him on tight,
With rosebuds and pigeons
To make it look right.

You're terribly careful
To keep your hands clean;
Sometimes you use silver
And sometimes it's green.

The crayon you take to Print small and fine
To Mother and Daddy—
"BE MY VALENTINE."

Jane, our little neighbor, is very fond of our Boston bull dog, named Tige. She is also fond of my mother. The other day she was over playing with the dog, and remarked to mother: "Tige is an awful nice dog, Mrs. S——. He looks just like you."

Mother gasped, and said, "Why, Jane, was that nice?"

Jane thought a while, and then replied: "But, Mrs. S——, I mean when he is smiling." J. S.

Little Marjorie was the middle child. One day a visitor found her crying and remarked, "Well, Marjorie, you always seem to be the one who gets punished. Why it it?"

Why Not Accept Your Child as He Is?

By Mrs. Gladys Huntington Bevans

Help Him to Build Up His Own Personality Instead of Attempting to Change Him

THE curator of birds, who had recently returned from an expedition to New Guinea, was about to show us the birds of paradise he had brought back, and tell us about his trip, when a fellow naturalist from far away walked in. This meant that our less important visit had to be put aside. "I'll get Bill to take you around," he said and called the chief attendant.

This man was a real bird lover—had had birds ever since he was a boy. He showed us the rare birds of paradise first—then we went on to other tropical birds, passing cage after cage with just a comment or anecdote. Before the cage of caciques he stopped.

"Here's Skeezix, as we call him," he said.

He put his fingers on the wire of the caciques' cage and spoke. Of all those in the cage, just one of the long, slender billed birds noticed him. This fellow flew down and walked immediately to the bars to be petted. The attendant went around to the back, and as soon as the little door clicked, the cacique was there. Such "goings on!" He almost talked, and would scarcely let himself be dislodged when his friend wanted to leave him. The other caciques were oblivious or uninterested.

We went on to the parrots and cockatoos.

"See that beauty?" said our guide. "I'll bring him out to you." And in a moment he appeared holding a beautiful white cockatoo with a lemon colored crest.

At the Parrots' Cage.

"Dance, Polly," he said, and began to whistle a tune. And Polly, grasping his hand, moved up and down in regular rhythm.

"Now say, 'Goodby Polly,'" he said—but we could hear nothing because the cage from which Polly had been taken had become bedlam. Several of the parrots in the cage were quite unconcerned, and one or two were fussing and complaining because they hadn't been taken out. But one big fellow with a coral crest was having a regular tantrum! You couldn't call it by any other name. He was screaming and screeching and throwing himself around in an absolute fury. Entirely beside himself. Finally, when we couldn't hear the lemon crested cockatoo talk at all, the attendant went over to the cage, put up his hand, and if that tempestuous, feathered termagant didn't stop his racket, hop to the bars, and bend his head over to be scratched and talked to!

"Does he ever nip you?"

"No, never. He just makes a noise."

After quiet was restored some one asked, "May I hold the cockatoo? Do you think he'll bite me?"

"No, he won't—unless he gets nervous and excited—then he might bite even me. But not because he's ugly. Only because he doesn't know what he's doing in his excitement. But that chap down there in the corner—he's a terror. He'd take a piece out of you any time he got a chance. They're all different."

We left the parrots, with a most surprising "Goodby" from half a dozen of them as their special friend bade them farewell.

In the middle of the main hall, flooded with sunshine, was a great cage with running water, pebbles, earth and growing things which held many of our wood birds, also snipe, ducks and a few rare specimens.

Odd Friendships.

"There's a funny thing," said Bill. "There's the funniest friendship sprung up in that cage. Not long after Mr. C. brought back that big pigeon [I've forgotten its name] I noticed that tiny little Java sparrow chumming up to him. And most of the time now they're together. Let's see if we can spot them."

We looked all around and at last saw them. The great, beautifully colored pigeon sat on a branch, and alongside of him on the same branch, just as close as he could get, was the tiny Java sparrow.

"When you put new birds in here, do you ever have any trouble?" I asked.

"No, except with one. See that small red chap over there? He's a tough little devil."

We looked, and then exclaimed, "Why, isn't that a scarlet tanager?"

"Yes, that's right, it is."

"But what does he do?"

"When we put a bird in, he goes at him while he's still too strange and bewildered to defend himself. He gives him no peace. He's murdered two. Usually, if he gets too vicious, we catch him and clip his wings—and that unbalances him so he can't manage himself very well for a month or two. But the others never pay any attention to the newcomers."

They all looked like a big contented family and it was hard to believe that by some effect of heredity and environment just one should strike a red, discordant, aggressive, vicious note.

I'd like to go on and tell you about one more bird, the myna, that curious bird who talks with a voice like a man's rich voice—about baritone in range—and who whistles. I'd like to describe the scene that took place between him and our guide, which filled us with a great wonderment. But I won't because it isn't to the point—the point being the one mentioned last Sunday—the importance of individuality.

Differences in Same Species.

The thing that struck me in the nature of the birds that day in the zoo, in birds of the same species, was their marked individuality. No two were alike.

Nature does that everywhere. Did you ever try to find two leaves of an elm or a rosebush that were exactly alike? Or two apples? Or two anything? And did you ever succeed? And aren't you glad you didn't?

So our job is: To recognize and respect each child's identity; not to expect him to be like either ourselves or some other child, no matter how admirable that other one may be; to find out what he is himself, deep down inside; to accept him as that, and then, accepting him as that, to find out what he needs most to develop that self and give it to him, or give him opportunity to reach out and grasp it for himself.

The BACKSTAGE MYSTERY by OCTAVUS ROY COHEN

The Story in Brief:

TERRY MOONEY, young reporter, "makes the front page" of the Evening Record with the story that Wylie Thornton, matinée idol, is to leave the local stock company and to take a train that night for New York and a Broadway engagement. Unknown to the adoring public, Thornton is a drunkard and a wastrel. In one of his most recent escapades, when disgracefully intoxicated, he has knocked down John Norris, real estate operator, on being ordered from the Norris home. He has, however, superficial attractions which have dazzled Doris Manning, an amateur member of the stock company, who is the daughter of Maj. Manning, influential banker. He has persuaded Doris to elope with him, promising to marry her after divorcing his wife. Mrs. Thornton threatens to kill him to prevent the elopement. Norris and Maj. Manning go to the theater separately, the former to exact an apology, the latter with the hope of frightening Thornton off. Visiting the actor's dressing room with her fiancé, Carey Weldon, Doris finds Thornton shot to death and her father standing by. Manning sends for Jim Hanvey, detective. Chief Marty Gallagher is in charge of the investigation. The Record assigns Ken Johnston and Terry Mooney to cover the case.

INSTALLMENT V.

Jim Hanvey at Work.

KEN JOHNSTON, star reporter for the Morning Record, buttonholed Marty Gallagher, police inspector, and voiced a startled question.

"Great suffering artichokes!" he exclaimed, "is that Jim Hanvey?"

Gallagher followed the direction of Johnston's pointing finger and a quizzical gleam came into his eyes.

"James H. Hanvey," he answered softly. "Himself and in person."

Johnston mopped his forehead.

"I'm sunk," he confessed. "I might have picked that bird to be a first rate ...man, but never a detective."

Marty grinned. "And you'd be wrong, kid. As a crook hound that gimmick is a genius."

"Maybe so," nodded Ken. "But you got to confess that he doesn't look it."

And in that respect, at least, Ken Johnston was right. Jim Hanvey occupied double space in the crowd which hovered affrightedly outside Thornton's dressing room door.

He was a mountainous sort of person in whose physical makeup there was not the slightest suggestion of symmetry. He extended fatly two ways from a prodigious tummy, and, amazingly enough, the clothes he wore seemed entirely too large. They flapped around him with all the neatness that one associates with a scarecrow, and his trousers gave the alarming impression that they were about to descend. But it was Jim Hanvey's head which riveted one's attention. It was a tremendous, bulbous thing; huge and fleshy, rising supreme above three softly flowing chins. He had a kindly mouth and a pair of eyes. . . .

Jim's eyes were remarkable. They were small and drowsy, but even when open widest they gave the impression of seeing nothing at all. They resembled closely the orbs of a fish, and usually the great detective kept them half closed, so that those who did not know him intimately received the unflattering impression that he was sleeping while they talked.

Hanvey was chatting now with Major Manning, and while he talked he fumbled with a peculiar object hanging from a gold hawser which spanned the front of his shiny serge vest. Ken Johnston, thoroughly fascinated, moved closer—followed by Terry Mooney and Marty Gallagher. He stared long and earnestly at the object with which Hanvey was absentmindedly toying, and finally turned to the inspector.

"For the love of Mike," he asked, "what is that awful looking thing?"

Jim Hanvey turned. His eyes curtained slowly and then opened even more slowly.

"This?" he asked, designating the article on his watchchain.

"Uh-huh," murmured Johnston, somewhat embarrassed.

"This," drawled Jim in a lazy, indifferent voice, "is the pride and delight of my existence. It was given to me years ago as a token of goodwill by a crook I sent up for a stretch. It's a swell thing, really."

"Yes—but what is it?"

"A toothpick. Solid, eighteen-karat gold. You see, son, it ain't just a beautiful thing—it's useful, too. Most joolry ain't good for nothin' except just to look at. This comes in awful handy. See—" He pressed a button and a wicked looking little blade flashed out. "It's real swell, don't you think?"

"Yes," answered Johnston dazedly, "I sure do." Then he whispered to Gallagher: "What's he doing, kidding me?"

"Hell, no. He's serious."

HANVEY moved his head in the direction of Gallagher.

"Can I talk to you a minute, Inspector?"

"Surest thing you know." Gallagher, tall, heavyset, quietly efficient, became all business immediately. "Shall I make these reporters clear out?"

"They don't bother me. How about you, Major Manning?"

Manning's voice was strained. "I don't object. I have nothing to conceal."

"Good enough," said Gallagher. "But listen, boys, if I'm going to come clean with you on this case, you've got to play square with me, too. No breaking news until I give the word."

Johnston nodded. "Kayo by me, Marty."

Once again Hanvey's voice droned. "Inspector," he said, "I've been in this town working on a case at the major's. He asked me to come down here and he allows he wants me to help him out of the tough spot he's in. I told him it was up to you."

Gallagher hesitated but only for a moment. "You mean, Jim, as a dick or as an employé of the major's?"

"That's what I've been explaining to him: If I come in at all, it'll be to shoot straight and not play his game. He says he didn't kill Thornton—and maybe he didn't. But he understands that if I come into this thing it'll be to turn over anything I find against him—if I do."

"Is that correct, Major?"

Manning nodded dignified assent. "Precisely. I couldn't be in a much worse position than I am right now. And, of course, Inspector, I didn't suggest this thing because I was afraid of the local police. But it struck me that since Mr. Hanvey was in the city it would do no harm to enlist his aid."

"So far as I am concerned," said Gallagher generously, "I'm tickled pink. I think this fat boy is a good deal of a nut, but he's got the goods, too, and if he'd like to help, under those conditions, I'll see that the facilities of the department are put at his disposal."

JIM smiled like a shy kid. "Thanks, Marty. I'll play the game your way; don't worry. As a matter of fact, murder is a good deal out of my line. Never had but one other case of the kind——"

"Solve it?"

"I was lucky. Just got the breaks."

"That's about all detective work is, anyway," remarked Gallagher. "Ain't that so, Jim?"

"You said it. The detective can make a million mistakes, but if he does just one thing right, he's got his man. If the crook slips a single time—he's sunko. And now, Marty—what'll we do?"

"Look around, I guess," answered the inspector. "Bill Sherman—he's our coroner—is in there now, but he promised me not to touch anything. You, major, will remain right here. We'll talk things over with you later."

Terry Mooney shoved forward. "Inspector?"

"Yes?"

"I'm from the Evening Record. I'm working with Johnston. I wondered whether you'd mind if I phoned the office that Jim Hanvey had definitely come in on the case?"

"Sure . . ."

Mooney turned eagerly away, but Hanvey stopped him.

"Hey, son?"

"Yes, sir."

"What's your hurry about that?"

"Wh-why nothing 'special. Except that it looked like news, and they told me to phone——"

"A'right; go ahead. But, son—don't you go making the mistake of saying that I'm in charge, see? I ain't doing nothing that my friend, the inspector, don't tell me to do. This is his case; not mine."

Terry warmed to the friendly smile on the big face of the famous man.

"I understand, sir," he said quickly. "And you can count on me to print only what you tell me to."

"That's great. I know we'll get along together fine."

Terry darted down the corridor toward the backstage telephone. Jim Hanvey stared after him.

"Durn nice kid," he commented.

Ken Johnston nodded. "He is that," he indorsed. "Just a cub, but he's got stuff. And he might be able to slip you a lot of dope, Hanvey; he's nuts about the theater and hangs around here all the time. There's a sort of a rumor that he's engaged to the ingenue."

"Well, now . . . ain't that romantic?" Jim breathed a vast sigh. "I always was crazy about young love. It's like this gold toothpick of mine; pretty and useful."

THEY walked inside the dressing room and closed the door behind them, much to the disgust of the morbidly curious crowd in the corridor. An important person greeted Gallagher effusively and the inspector introduced Hanvey to Bill Sherman, the coroner. Then he explained Hanvey's presence.

Jim was staring through sleepy eyes at the room. It was of medium size and not at all prepossessing. Directly opposite the door was a dressing table with a triple mirror. This was illuminated by a high power electric bulb in a wire cage. In the ceiling was another electric light.

On the dressing table was the usual disorderly array of makeup boxes. These were open and unquestionably had been in the process of being used at the time the tragedy occurred.

Against the right wall was a straight wicker chair, and its mate stood near the dressing table, evidently where it had been shoved back as Wylie Thornton rose from his task of making up for the evening performance. Against the left wall was a large theatrical trunk, the tray of which had been removed and lay now so as to cover half of the lower section. Hanvey moved slowly across the room and stooped down in front of the mirror.

"What's the big idea?" asked Marty.

"O, nothin'. I was just trying to see if a guy sitting there, facing the mirror, could see the whole room."

"Sure he could. There's three mirrors, and what he wouldn't get in one, he would in another."

Hanvey returned to his post by the door, and stared at the body.

The first thing that impressed him was the tremendous size of the dead man. Sprawled at full length Wylie Thornton looked huge. He lay as he had fallen, one hand stretched out before him, the other curled under his body. He was clad in patent leather pumps, dinner trousers and an undershirt. Gallagher explained.

"He was supposed to wear dinner clothes in the first act, Jim."

"I see . . . And the body; it hasn't been touched?"

"Yes, it has. I turned it over with Bill, here, to see just how he was killed. But we put him back just as he was."

"I get you. And how was he killed?"

Gallagher designated an odd looking weapon which lay on a little shelf in a wad of cotton. "Don't touch it, Jim. Finger prints you know . . . though I'm darned if I think there'll be any because the handle is corrugated. Anyway, there might . . . That's the gun that killed him, I'm sure. Thirty-two caliber, and one bullet has been fired."

Hanvey was staring at it.

"Silencer," he remarked. "Ain't that unusual?"

"Yes—and no. They used that silencer last week in a melodrama they were playing. It belongs in the property room."

"Any idea how it got in here?"

"Yeh. Pete McIntosh, the property man, says he missed it this morning. He told me a story that I'll pass on to you later. Briefly, it seems that Thornton went on a party last night at the home of a bird here named Norris; one of the biggest men in town—financially, that is. Thornton got drunk and sloughed this baby. Norris threatened to kill him. McIntosh says he thinks Thornton copped the gun this morning and put real bullets in it instead of blanks so as to be ready in case Norris tried to make good his threat."

"Hmm . . . This McIntosh; is he a pretty good friend of Thornton's?"

"Not exactly. Nobody seems to like that feller."

"Then McIntosh could be lying, eh?"

"Sure, he could, but I'm inclined to think he ain't."

Gallagher then started a thorough search of the room. The coroner remained in the corner watching Hanvey with considerable disapproval. This fat chap wasn't his idea of a detective—nor was Jim acting like one. He seemed half asleep in the first place, and, in the second, he was content to grunt around after Gallagher while that very efficient detective did the work.

"THERE isn't much to find," said Gallagher, as he hunted. "I'm leery about the gun helping us. If that handle has any finger prints, I'm a leopard. We're sort of up against a proposition and it don't look soft for the major."

"He was in here when the body was found, wasn't he?" asked Jim.

"Yes. Standing right in the corner there."

"The body was between him and the door?"

"Exactly."

"Major ranks pretty well in town, don't he?"

"At the top, in every way. He's a gent from the heart, and regular as they make 'em."

"How come he's mixed up with this actor, then?"

"That's a story, too." Gallagher straightened up and faced Hanvey. "His daughter, Doris, has been playing small parts with this company. They say she was goofy about Thornton. He was leaving town tonight for a big rôle in New York and the dope is that Doris was going with him. Manning's a blue blood—and you can imagine what he'd do if he knew that his daughter was about to elope with a married man?"

"Thornton's married?"

"Yeh. We've sent up to the hotel for his wife."

"Hmm . . ." Hanvey kneeled by the body and turned it over. The bullet had gone cleanly through the heart, but it was not the wound which appeared to interest the monster detective. He looked up at Gallagher.

"Thornton was slugged, wasn't he?"

Marty showed his surprise.

"What do you mean; slugged?"

Jim designated an ugly black and blue place on the left side of the dead man's jaw. "Somebody hung one there and hung it hard. Somebody who packed a real wallop. You reckon Maj. Manning could have done that?"

"Gosh . . . I never noticed. But it don't sound reasonable. Manning ain't young, and he ain't near Thornton's size. Say listen, Jim: if Manning did slug Thornton, there ought to be a skinned place on his knuckles, oughtn't there?"

"Perhaps," agreed Jim. "Why not look?"

Marty left the room and returned a few seconds later. He was shaking his head.

"Not a mark on the knuckles of either hand, Jim. And to tell you the truth, he couldn't seem to understand why I was looking. Of course, that might be camouflage——"

"Yeh," grunted Jim. "It might. And then again, Marty—it mightn't." A slow grin creased his lips. "Which is what I call a real wise deduction."

THE two men pursued their search. They found very little of particular interest, and these few trifles Jim Hanvey carefully placed in a discarded cigar box.

There was a black silk waldemar bearing a monogram of platinum and having on one end an open face watch and on the other a white gold knife. There was a fountain pen, and in the pocket with it a leather address book and a card case. In the pocket of Thornton's street suit were a few coins, and on the floor, near the door, they found a copy of the Evening Record folded back so that Thornton's picture and the story of his departure were showing. Jim glanced at the paper, and placed it beside the cigar box containing the other trifles.

A most scrupulous search revealed few other things for the cigar box. They found a monogrammed handkerchief, the stub of a pencil, a chip from the Monte Carlo casino which had been carried as a luck piece, and a bunch of keys, but it was Marty Gallagher who discovered something which appeared very important.

Lying on the floor about six feet from the body was Wylie Thornton's wallet, an expensive thing of black leather monogrammed in gold. While Hanvey was poring over the trinkets which were in the cigar box Gallagher made a quick examination of the wallet's contents. He looked up with some excitement.

"I think we have something here, Jim."

"Yeh . . . ?"

"There's just a trifle more than two hundred smackers in this wallet," said Marty. "And I've got a hunch——" He rose and started for the door. "Wait just a minute."

He returned shortly with the dapper, immaculate little treasurer, Mike Marion, whom he introduced to Hanvey.

"Just want to ask you a few questions, Mr. Marion."

"Yes, sir."

"You knew Thornton was planning to leave town tonight?"

"Certainly."

"Didn't you tell me that he collected his salary from you this afternoon?"

"Yes. Right after the matinée."

"How much was it?"

"Six hundred dollars."

A low whistle came from Jim Hanvey. "Six hundred a week! Gosh! I always knew I should have been an actor."

"Did you pay him by check or in cash?" asked Gallagher.

"Cash."

"What did he do with the money when you handed it to him?"

"He put it in his wallet."

"This wallet?"

"Yes. Unless he has two of the same kind."

"Did he do this in your presence?"

"Yes."

"Did you happen to notice if the wallet was empty when he put his salary in?"

"Why, yes, I noticed—I'm sure there was some money in there."

"How much?"

"I haven't any idea. But I'm positive there were some bills."

"Thanks, Marion. That'll be all."

Somewhat bewildered the little treasurer returned to his box office where there were still some patrons clamoring for the return of their money. But inside the dressing room Marty Gallagher departed from his usual custom by confessing excitement.

"Now ain't that the devil?" he inquired of no one in particular.

"It sure is," agreed Jim sympathetically. "What?"

"Plenty. You heard what that guy said, didn't you?"

"Uh-huh."

"Thornton had a few dollars in his wallet when he got paid, didn't he?"

"So Marion said."

"And he got six hundred dollars in cash then."

"Yeh."

"Well, how do you explain this, Jim: In that wallet now there are just exactly two hundred and twelve dollars!"

JIM blinked.

"Gosh! You don't say."

"But I do say. Can't you see what it means?"

"No, Marty. I'm dumb."

"I'll say you are. Why, you poor fathead, it means that Wylie Thornton was robbed."

"By Major Manning?"

"Hell, no! The major wouldn't rob a man."

"That's too bad. It would make things so much easier if he would."

"He was robbed, though——"

"Suppose," drawled Hanvey, "that he gave the money to his wife when he went to the hotel for dinner? If he was planning to leave town without her, that wouldn't be unlikely, would it?"

"I guess not."

"And it's more likely than thinking that the major copped four hundred berries out of the wallet, ain't it?"

O, thunder! You're always spiking my guns."

"Take it easy, Marty. There's plenty to this case to worry us without getting all stewed up over other things. We'll wait until we talk to Mrs. Thornton. If she got that kale then we needn't get excited about it. If she didn't—then we can begin giving ourselves headaches. C'mon now, Kid, what else is in that wallet?"

"Railroad ticket and a lower from here to New York on the midnight train tonight."

"That all?"

"Everything. And I'll bet my shirt he didn't slip his wife any dough. A bozo that's planning to leave his dame flat for another woman ain't shoving her four hundred cartwheels just beforehand. I ask you now, is he?"

Hanvey smiled. "Me, never having been married—I can't say."

"And you wouldn't say if you knew, would you, Jim?"

"Gosh! I dunno. I never was much a hand for talking."

Gallagher was staring down at the body which now lay face up on the floor. The ugly bruise on the side of the jaw was unmistakable.

"That's the other thing that gets me, Jim, that wallop on the jaw."

"Yeh?"

"I've been thinking it over. If there wasn't anything else phony in this room I might think that Manning banged him with the revolver butt before he shot him. But, being sure that he was robbed also . . . I've got a hunch, Jim, that there's somebody else mixed up in this, somebody who came in and robbed Thornton and then killed him. Or killed him first and then robbed him."

"Maybe—but it don't look reasonable."

"Why not?" asked Gallagher testily.

"Because," murmured Hanvey, "it don't strike me as sensible that a guy would kill a man and then take precisely four hundred dollars out of a wallet which contained six hundred and twelve."

"O, for God's sake! Looks to me, Jim Hanvey, that all you're going to do on this case is get me confused."

"Shuh, Marty! I'll bet I can get twice as confused as you can in half the time." Jim was carefully arranging the trinkets in the cigar box. Then he closed the box and wrapped it carefully in a sheet of paper which lay in the corner. "I can hold this a while, can't I, Marty?"

"Keep it for your children, if you want." Mr. Gallagher made a grimace. "And what do you suggest now?"

"Whatever you like."

"Aw! You give me a pain in the neck," said Gallagher, with mock anger. "You know you're gonna do just what you want— so tell me what it is."

"Well, I'd suggest that if Mary Thornton is here were have a talk with her. If she ain't here—then let's chat with Major Manning."

"Neither one in here, of course."

"Sure not? That'd be kind of brutal."

They left the coroner in charge of the room, with instructions to let no one in without their permission. They found the major in the passageway. He was controlling himself with an effort, but his fine face showed clearly the terrific strain to which he had been subjected.

Beside him was the tall figure of Carey Weldon and hovering about them were three reporters: Ken Johnston of the Morning Record, Terry Mooney of the Evening Record, and Max Ross of the Star, a second evening paper. They flocked down on Gallagher, clamoring for news.

He put them aside and informed Major Manning that he would like to talk with him about the killing. The major was quite willing. Ken Johnston suggested that the reporters be permitted to listen in.

TO Gallagher's amazement Manning agreed. "Provided," said the major, "that you will not print anything which will cause trouble for—for—innocent persons."

Johnston seemed surprised.

"I have nothing to conceal," explained Manning with quiet dignity. "On the other hand, there are certain angles to this affair which might ruin the life of a sweet and innocent girl. I would prefer that you boys know the whole truth. I would also esteem it a great personal favor if none of those details are printed—unless, of course, it were proved that I am the guilty man."

Jim Hanvey looked on the erect, proud man with enormous respect, and it was he who spoke to the reporters.

"Nothing could be fairer than that, could it, boys?"

They were quick to agree.

"The understanding is," amplified Jim, "that we'll take you in on the know all the way through on the condition that we have some say-so in what you print. Or at least that'll go for this stage of the investigation. It don't signify anything later."

They went with the major into Martin Vance's dressing room. And then, at Gallagher's request, Manning told his story.

He told it in a simple, straightforward and thoroughly impressive manner. He told of his daughter and her extreme youth, of her enthusiasm for the stage and for Wylie Thornton, of her intention of leaving the city that night with Thornton for New York and of his own threat to kill Thornton, if such a drastic step proved necessary, in order to prevent the elopement.

"Of course," he said slowly, "it wasn't an elopement. I am talking frankly because the matter is no secret now, and I would rather you heard the strict truth from me than a garbled, scandalous story from some one else. You can print this thing and wreck my daughter's entire life. Or you can leave it unprinted and save her from a hopeless scandal."

Ken Johnston spoke gently.

"I can speak for all of us, Major. As things look now, we'll never print a word. Of course, if you should be tried and this were to come out on the witness stand——"

"I understand, Johnston—and thank you. I had considered trying to conceal the truth, but I knew that was useless. Perhaps my very frankness will be the best armor for my daughter, and she, gentlemen, is the only person of whom I am thinking."

He glanced at the five intent, sympathetic faces, and then continued his story:

"Carey Weldon and I reached the theater at about 7:35. I left Carey in the theater alley and I came backstage and sat in the wings. I don't know whether or not any one noticed me sitting there—but I do know that no one spoke to me. You see, my daughter has been in so many productions here that I am more or less a familiar character backstage. I was also making an effort not to be seen, without, however, deliberately hiding."

He paused and cleared his throat.

"What I am going to tell you now, gentlemen, I assure you, is mentioned only in my effort to arrive at the truth—and not to shield myself. At about 7:45 John Norris came backstage and passed under the archway into the dressing room corridor. He may or may not have gone to Wylie Thornton's dressing room. I immediately thought of the disgraceful affair at his home last night—I suppose you are familiar with that?"

"Yes, Major, we know about it."

"I have always been friendly with Norris, but never intimate. In fact, he doesn't run to intimacies of any sort. I was apprehensive because I knew Norris had threatened to kill Thornton, but thought of my own mission restrained me from interfering.

"I don't know just how long Norris remained in the dressing room corridor, but I judge it was about ten minutes. I did not hear any noise. When Norris reappeared, I noticed a marked change in the man. His face was drawn and worried and he was hurrying, as though eager to get away. I had an apprehension that something had happened but did not then investigate." The major spread his arms in an apologetic gesture. "This story puts me in a very inglorious light, gentlemen, as though I were attempting to shield myself behind another man. As God is my judge, that is not the truth. I am merely telling you what happened."

"We understand, Major. Go ahead, please."

"Very well. At a little after eight o'clock I determined to talk with Thornton. I was certain that my daughter would see, or communicate, with him during the performance—and I felt I had better discuss matters with him before she did.

"I went to his dressing room door and knocked. There was no answer. I knocked again and again got no response. I recalled my apprehension over John Norris' peculiar visit and I cracked open the door.

"I saw Thornton's body on the floor, gentlemen. I was horrified, but, queerly enough, not surprised."

"You thought John Norris killed him?"

"Frankly—yes."

"And you did what, then?"

"I stepped inside and closed the door."

"Why?"

"Because I wanted to think. And before I could do anything, the door opened again and it was my daughter. She saw me and she saw the body. She came to a perfectly natural conclusion—and in her hysterical excitement accused me of killing Wylie Thornton."

Gallagher's eyes were hard as granite.

"And may I ask, Major, whether she was right?"

Major Manning's figure stiffened and his eyes met the cold, accusing ones of the police inspector.

"She was wrong," he answered quietly.

"I see. . . . And it is your belief that John Norris did this killing?"

"I did not say so."

"Perhaps not. But you were very careful to give us that impression."

The major's face flushed. "Pardon me, Inspector, I was not very careful to give any impression. I was merely telling the truth."

"I see. It just happened that in this case your story would clear you and convict John Norris."

"I admire Mr. Norris very much——"

"Surely. Of course you do." Gallagher had become very much the policeman; his tone was freighted with bitter sarcasm. "And suppose you explain to us, Major, how you happened to be standing by the dressing table when your daughter and Carey Weldon opened that door? You say you stepped inside the room to talk things over. Thornton's body was lying near the door. You walked across the room to that dressing table. Now—why?"

"I don't know," answered Manning.

"You don't know? But you know a good deal else. Your memory is pretty clear on every detail except that, isn't it?"

"Yes."

Gallagher was disgusted and showed it. "What did Thornton say to you when you came into the room?"

"He was dead when I came in."

"Did you examine the body?"

"No."

"Did you look at his wallet?"

"Certainly not."

"Why did you strike him?"

Manning's face was crimson. "I fancy this is some of your third degree stuff, Gallagher. If it is—it will get you nowhere. I told you Wylie Thornton was dead when I entered that room, and I told the truth."

"Hmph! So you say." Marty rose and jerked his head toward Jim Hanvey. "Let's get out of here, Jim. And you, Maj. Manning, are under arrest. You reporters can telephone that to your papers if you want. All I ask is that you don't say anything about Miss Doris. There isn't any use——"

"We understand," said Johnston, quickly.

They filed out of the room. Gallagher summoned a plain clothes man who was on duty in the corridor and notified him to keep an eye on Maj. Manning. The detective nodded and then shook his head sheepishly.

"Sorry, chief, but there's somebody in Thornton's room."

"Who? I thought I ordered you——"

"It's Mrs. Thornton, chief. She came in with that little actress and we couldn't keep her out. You know, being just a widow and all that sort of thing . . . and she was raising hell, chief——"

"All right. Let's talk to her, Jim."

Hanvey shrugged his great, fleshy shoulders. "You go get her out of there, Marty. I'm too softhearted to butt in on a thing like that."

Gallagher strode down the hall, followed by Ken Johnston and Max Ross. Terry Mooney started after them, but a girl stopped him.

Anice Garet was frightened. Usually effervescing with high spirits and fun, she had been considerably sobered by the ghastly experience through which she had just passed. She stepped through the open door of a dressing room and grabbed Terry's arm.

"Please, Terry—don't go with them."

He spoke gently. "But I have to, dear. I'm on this story for the paper——"

"I don't care about your old paper. If somebody don't talk to me quietly and sanely I'm going into hysterics. You don't know what I've been through . . ."

MOONEY was conscious of a shadow hovering near by. He introduced Anice to Jim Hanvey, and the fleshy paw of the big detective grasped the cold hand of the pretty little ingenue.

"They did give you a tough assignment, didn't they, miss. Aren't you the young lady who fetched Mrs. Thornton?"

"Yes." The girl's eyes were filled with tears. "It was terrible. She—she—well, she didn't cry. She just sat there and stared at me, and I thought she had fainted. I told her a second time, and still she didn't talk. Then all of a sudden she started screaming. We had to call the house physician, and that was why it took me so long to get her down here." The girl made a helpless gesture. "I'm all shot, Mr. Hanvey. I am—honest."

"I'll bet you are." Hanvey's voice was infinitely soothing. He made a deliberate attempt to bolster her morale. "Gosh! you look awful young to be an actress."

"I'm twenty."

"Already? You don't look it."

"And some critics say I'm not an actress."

"They must be wrong——"

Terry Mooney, sensing what the big, kindly man was doing, hastened to help. "She's a peach, Mr. Hanvey; best ingenue I've ever seen."

"He's prejudiced," said the girl.

"And so'm I," indorsed Jim. "I reckon Mooney, here, has told you more than once that you're pretty—so I won't repeat. But, golly! if I had met a girl that looked like you when I was twenty years younger, I guess I'd be happier—and thinner—than I am now. What you think?"

"I'll never get fat," said Terry.

"Don't, son. It's awful. It's open season on a fat man fifty-two weeks in the year." Hanvey drew them into the dressing room and made Anice sit on

The BLACK URGE

By Vara Macbeth Jones

Willy John Had Wanted But One Thing Since His Family Left Ireland, and That Was to Return to It. He Pined for Erin Till He Wore Every One Out.

And then it was that Willy John dropped his spoon with a clatter.

ILLUSTRATIONS BY AUSTIN JEWELL.

MICHAEL HURLEY had only been in the O'Reilly household a short time when he heard of the black urge that burned in the heart of Willy John.

Finola O'Reilly and her family were at the supper table in the big, clean kitchen when he loomed so unexpectedly in the open doorway, a raw-boned, sandy headed old giant, a bulging knapsack in hand. And their clamorous welcome enveloped him like a gossamer rainbow of smiles and tears as they drew him into their midst. Happily they marveled at his coming. Tearfully they recalled their parting so long back. Eagerly they begged him for his saga of those intervening years. But short work Michael made of that request!

"Sure, and we can kill the hare at one blow," he scoffed. "I'm still driving the jaunting car twixt Kingston and Dunleary. And as devil the bit I've been able to put the charm on either a wife or fortune, I made up my mind to have one fling before I died. So when I found that my old friend Jamie Regan was putting off in his tramp boat for the states I got my leave of absence and a boiled shirt, and here I am!"

The little green eyes in the ruddy old face twinkled about the boards; from gray headed, bent little Finola to the right of her where sat her daughters, the fair, faded Kate, and little less faded, gentle Agnes Mary. And to the left of her where sat her orphaned granddaughter, flaming haired young Moira Shannon. Then to the head of the table where sat Willy John. And it seemed to the old wayfarer that the man of the clan alone had cheated the years. True, on close inspection, his curly, black hair might be thinning a bit at the temples, the ebony lashed black eyes have the telltale lines about them; but, taken all in all, he was still the same handsome, devil-may-care looking Willy John of old.

"And now tell me, how has the new world been treating the rest of you?" he questioned.

"We owe it much," Finola told him. "Take this place now, a whole acre not a stone's throw from the town, with room for a garden and cow and chickens. We may be owning it some day! And Kate works in a canning factory and has good wages, and Agnes Mary sews for the good nuns of St. Mary's. As for Moira here, she's not only my right hand about the place, but it's the grand scholar of the family she is, too, ready for high school in the fall, and the teacher's certificate after that! And—and" then, with her eyes on her last born, Finola O'Reilly suddenly hesitated.

"AS for Willy John," Michael broke in heartily, his gaze on the whiteness of the other's linen, the jauntiness of his coat, and the softness of his hands, "troth, t'is plain to be seen Willy John is sitting easy as an alderman in a plush rocker!"

"Willy John can turn his hand to anything," Finola supplemented somewhat vaguely.

"Please the pigs!" Michael marveled. "Then a lucky day it was for the kit of you when you heeded his words, and came across."

And then it was that Willy John dropped his spoon with a clatter.

"Don't be saying that, Cousin Michael," he implored.

"'Tis no disloyalty I'm meaning toward the homeland," the other returned quickly. "But 'tis plain to be understood that the new world has given you pounds to the old world's shillings!"

"Contentment cannot be bought," Willy John reproved him.

"But necessities can," the surprised old Celt retorted. "Look at this house now—the elegance of it, with an upstairs and down, water coming from a spigot. Well, then, I cannot but be comparing it with the one you left in Dunleary; a sod cot so wee you could put your hand down the chimney and take the latch off the front door."

"But that cot held the sacred air of Erin," Willy John sighed.

"You can't feed on air, man," Michael insisted. "Just look at this table—every platter heaped high as an English landlord's—and every mouthful off the place, I take it. Well, then, when could you be having such a living off the old place? 'Twas a wee, weeshy bit of sod that a decent crow would starve on."

"But my heart was rooted in that sod," Willy John quavered.

"Then frozen it risked being many a time," Michael argued. "For when the cold winds came up from the bogs 'twas only the peat fire you had to turn to, with brambles off the thorn bushes to help out."

"Erin puts a glow in the heart nothing can dim," Willy John gulped as he pushed back his chair.

Michael blinked. ("Well, I see I might as well talk Spanish to paving stones," he told himself.) Then, aloud: "Well say no more about it, Willy John. 'Twas only that I'm surprised to find you flinging your blessings in the face of Providence, if you'll forgive me for saying so."

"'Twas only a well wisher would tell me my faults," Willy John returned humbly, as he stood with dropping head, "if fault it be that so long as I live Erin will ever be first on my lips and first in my heart." Then he turned and went blindly from the room.

At which Finola gave the amazed newcomer a knowing look. "Whisht," she whispered compassionately; "'tis the black urge of homesickness that burns in the heart of Willy John."

"But I can't be making head nor tails of it," Michael exclaimed. Wasn't it Willy John who urged you to come across in the first place?"

"From the time himself was swallowed up by the sea," Finola agreed, "though for many a day I held off, not knowing what we might find in a strange land."

"Why, sure, as I recall it, he wouldn't settle down to anything on the head of it," Michael cut in. "And when I'd twit him for his idleness, he'd say: 'But, Cousin Michael, how can I put my heart in work here, when it's already in the country beyond, where the gold pieces are to be had for the picking up?'"

And yet, once we came," gentle Agnes Mary contributed, "'twas no time at all 'till poor Willy John was so low in spirits he could do little else but wish he was back home again!"

"Why doesn't he go back, then?" Micheal blurted out rather testily.

"'Tis for our sake he stays," Finola explained quickly. "He knows 'twould be no easy thing for us to pull up stakes and go back with him——"

"—— and Willy John would never leave us," Kate said firmly.

"'Tis a sacrifice we can never repay," Agnes Mary added softly.

MICHAEL took a last copious draught from his cup. "Then it seems to me he had better be trying to master it, instead of letting it master him," he contributed thoughtfully.

"He does try to," Kate said loyally. "The trouble is, there's so many things always cropping up to keep it green in his memory. Starting with the spring, now, there's the thought of the races back home. The first thing you know it has hold of Willy John."

"Not that he wants us to know——" interposed Agnes Mary.

"But it slips out in his talk," Kate explained. "'Och!' he'll say, maybe; ''tis the first of June. The meet will be starting over there—and wouldn't I give my heart's blood to once more see the three year olds charge up the Curragh mile!'"

"But they tell me there's grand racing in the States," Michael contended. "Can't he be taking advantage of what he has at hand?"

"He does, Cousin Michael!" It was young Moira who suddenly spoke. And at her voice Michael stared; for there was something in the suppressed tone and unsmiling young face at odds.

Her grandmother raised dissenting palms. "It so happens that the races start here about the same time, so, no matter how his mind may be set against it, we always try and persuade the poor laddie to go, hoping he will be a little less downcast——"

"But 'tis as Kate said, there's more than one memory to tug at Willy John's heartstrings," Agnes May deplored. "You know yourself, Cousin Michael, how fond he always was of hunting. Is it any wonder then, when gunning time draws near that he gets to longing for the peaks of the Sugar Loaf and his old setter and gun?"

"But are there no game preserves nearby he can be streetling off to?" Michael insisted bluntly.

"There's the Blue Ridge where Uncle Willy John goes every year," young Moira contributed. And again her voice was steely, and her face unsmiling.

"Though a hard time we have to drive him to it," Finola O'Reilly insisted. "Willy John was always the one to belittle his own troubles. Only this morning the poor laddie said to me: 'Don't be worrying about me, acushla. Sure, 'tis my misfortune, not yours, if the heart of me is foolish enough to wear itself out in longing for "Erin's hills and Erin's dales, and the Irish sea where my dream ship sails . . ."'"

"So! then he's longing for the Irish sea, too?" Michael Hurley asked in quiet tone. But by the glint of his eye and the furious rubbing he was giving his chin, he was not so composed.

"It's in the blood, Cousin Michael," Finola O'Reilly reminded him. "Himself was a seagoing man, and young as Willy John was when he lived, many a cruise he took the boyeen on. Is it any wonder then, when the boats here start going up and down the bay before his very eyes, his memory quickens at the thought?"

"WHISHT, here he comes back again," Agnes Mary broke in. "And listen to him. It would break the heart of a win bush!" For from overhead there suddenly sounded the voice of Willy John. He was singing as he came, in a heart rending tenor that rose and soared brokenly:

"O, a plenteous place is Ireland for hospitable cheer,
Ui—leacan—dubh—O!
Where the wholesome fruit is brusting from the yellow barley ear,
Ui—leacan—dubh—O!
There is honey in the trees where her misty vales expand,
There is dew there at high noontide, and spring's i' the yellow sand,
O, the heart of me is aching for that heaven hallowed land,
The fair hills of holy Erin!"

Finola O'Reilly's eyes were misted. And the compassionate look on her face was reflected on Kate's and Agnes Mary's. But it was on young Moira's countenance that Michael Hurley's gaze centered. For no pity was there, but something akin to scorn . . . and something akin to fear . . .

("There's a cat in the bag that's not let out," Michael told himself shrewdly as he continued to rub his chin, and looked very, very thoughtful.)

And he had his glimpse of the imprisoned feline that same evening. Willy John, who had returned to the crowd, resplendent in white flannels and a sky blue tie that matched his eyes, had been commissioned to go in search for ice cream and cake to feast the guest later on. The womenfolk hurried about their night tasks. And when Moira, armed with a great pan of scraps started toward the chicken yard, Michael joined her.

And as they went their way he looked about him at the snug little gray house with the big garden and cow pen and chicken yard behind it, and the sloping orchard down to the bay's edge before it, and the lights of the town twinkling in the distance. And a grand place he thought it.

But he made no such comment. Instead he shook his head, murmuring: "What a waste! what a waste, now!" And young Moira, scattering her crumbs, looked her wonder.

Michael was gazing at the star studded sky. "Troth, and there's a grand ring round the moon tonight. A wishing ring. Did you never hear the old saying:

"When a silver ring is round the moon,
Make your wish; 'twill come true soon!"

"But, of course, 'tis wasted on you, young Moira," Michael went on guilessly, "since Willy John is the only wishful one of this family!"

Flaming haired Moira, empty pan in hand had come to his side where he leaned against a fence. And now she gave him a little wisp of an inscrutable smile, but made no answer.

"Yes, 'tis plain Willy John is the only wishful one of this family," Michael repeated. Why—there's Kate, now. I'll wager you she is a contented woman, if ever there was one."

Moira's great brown eyes were staring into space. "She's too unselfish to let you know if she isn't, Cousin Michael," she said enigmatically.

AND never did man seem to be in such contrary mood as Michael Hurley!

"Well, as to that, maybe I'm not giving her due credit, but I can't see why Kate O'Reilly shouldn't be happy."

"You would be giving her full credit if you knew what I do," Moira said impetuously. "She would not thank me for telling it, but there's a wish in her heart she's been battling against ever since I can remember. It's to send the hopeful word back to a man she promised herself to in Dunleary. Terence Healy is his name. But maybe you know him?"

"You don't say, now!" Michael exclaimed. "I often wondered what happened to that affair between Kate and old Terry!" But he did not pursue the subject farther then.

"Well, you have the best of the argument so far," he admitted ruefully. "But I'll have my innings when it comes to Agnes Mary. Don't tell me that gentle face of hers is hiding a stormy heart. 'Twould be the same as telling me she is a hypocrite!"

"Hypocrite!—my Aunt Agnes Mary?" Moira was aghast. "Why, she is too good for this world! And out of it she would be, too, if she could see her way clear. She's always wanted to be a nun. Didn't you know that, Cousin Michael?"

Michael shook a grim head. "Sure, I'm just beginning to find out how little I do know—with all the surprising tales you've been telling me!"

"And I should not have been telling them, either!" Moira confessed. "I don't know how my tongue chanced to run away with me as it did!" and determinedly she bit her lips and turned toward the house. But Michael stayed her.

"If harm there is done, 'tis not of your doing," he told her. "Though I must be confessing I'm disappointed——"

"——Disappointed?" faltered Moira.

"That Finola O'Reilly should demand such sacrifice from her girls," he said sternly.

"But it isn't my little grandmother's fault," the girl gasped in dismay. "It's—it's Uncle Willy John. Don't you understand, Cousin Michael, they think so long as he stays in the States for their sakes, it would be selfish of them to follow out their own wishes. In fact, they can't if they wanted to—with Uncle Willy John never settling down to anything—and grandmother old—and a living to be made——"

"I see!" said Michael Hurley, as he stood silent, lost in musing. "Well, there's one good thing," he broke out suddenly. "It's your good luck, Moira, that you have youth and the world before you! With the grand education you're getting, you can turn your back on the wishing moon, and go your own sweet way." His shrewd old gaze was studying her young face closely.

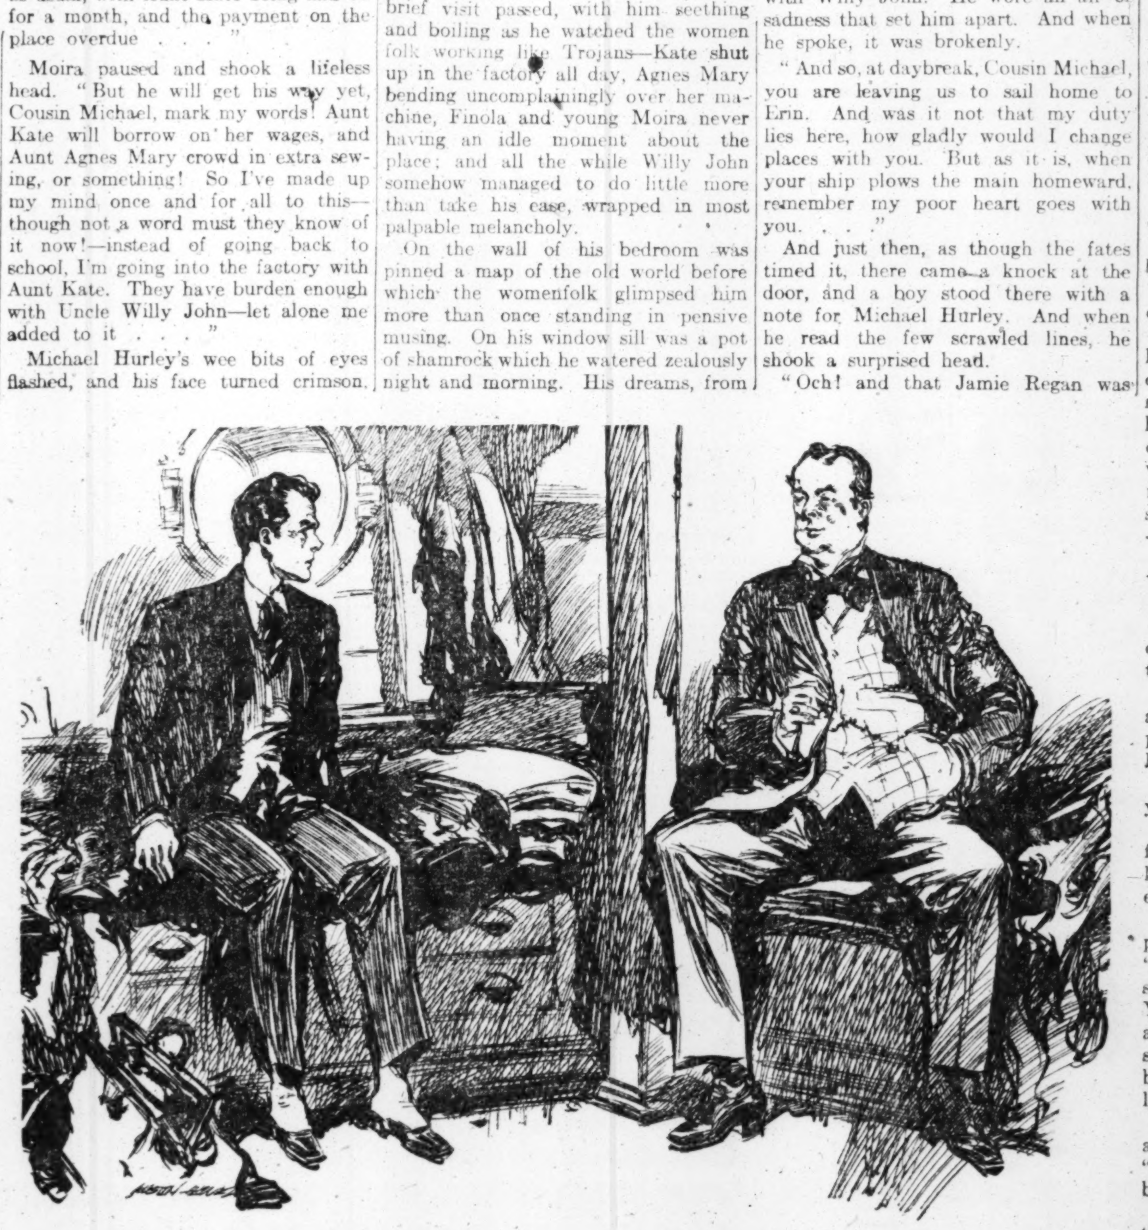
"But I have no right to go my own way, Cousin Michael," his companion returned earnestly. "What we need here is not a fine scholar in the future, but somebody to put their shoulder to the wheel right now and help. And that's what I've made up my mind to do!"

"What?" exploded Michael. "You mean you're going to give up your schooling for Willy John O'Reilly?"

"Not for him, Cousin Michael. I hate to speak ill of him—but you can see for yourself what is going on . . . And ever since we came across it has been so . . . Uncle Willy John pretending he is too homesick to settle down to anything . . . the family slaving to make a comfortable home for him . . . turning their dearest wishes aside for him . . . scraping to find the money to send him off to the races and the mountains and on the boat trips! You see yourself the clever way he has of working on their feelings 'till he gets what he wants. That's what is back of his melancholy right now! This summer there was no money for him to get off on the water as usual, with Aunt Kate being laid off for a month, and the payment on the place overdue . . ."

Moira paused and shook a lifeless head. "But he will get his way yet, Cousin Michael, mark my words! Aunt Kate will borrow on her wages, and Aunt Agnes Mary crowd in extra sewing, or something! So I've made up my mind once and for all to this—though not a word must they know of it now!—instead of going back to school, I'm going into the factory with Aunt Kate. They have burden enough with Uncle Willy John—let alone me added to it . . ."

Michael Hurley's wee bit of eyes flashed, and his face turned crimson.



Willy John suddenly sank down to his berth. "You're joking," he said feebly,

"You're daft!" he exploded. "Or is it that you don't value the grand learning as you should?"

The girl turned a wan young face toward him in the moonlight. "O, I do, Cousin Michael! I've always been book hungry, and at the thought of giving it all up—my heart is just one big ache . . . But their hearts ache, too . . . and I'm not going to add to their burden."

"But listen, childeen——" Michael Hurley began insistently, then broke off. For across the field came Finola O'Reilly and Kate, and between them, a gallant hand on either arm, walked Willy John.

"There they stand, star gazing!" Finola said cheerfully.

"Moon gazing," Michael corrected her. "I was just telling young Moira here about the wishing ring about the moon. You remember, Finola?"

Willy John threw back his handsome head and gazed dreamily at the misty ball.

"Ah, moon," he said soulfully. "I'm wondering now, would you be granting my wish?"

The two elder women met each other's gaze knowingly. But Michael glared: "Sure, and why don't you be wishing yourself back in Dunleary, Willy John?" he snapped. But Willy John shook a manly head.

"There's nothing so selfish as that I'd be asking," he declared. "Only this I would ask of the wishing moon: when I am dead, then let there be some way found to send me back—back to sleep in Kill o' the Grange by the Irish sea."

WHICH left Michael Hurley no comeback, save to rub his old chin madly. And so it was his brief visit passed, with him seething and boiling as he watched the women folk working like Trojans—Kate shut up in the factory all day, Agnes Mary bending uncomplainingly over her machine, Finola and young Moira never having an idle moment about the place; and all the while Willy John somehow managed to do little more than take his ease, wrapped in most palpable melancholy.

On the wall of his bedroom was pinned a map of the old world before which the womenfolk glimpsed him more than once standing in pensive musing. On his window sill was a pot of shamrock which he watered zealously night and morning. His dreams, from his own accounting, were mostly of the days when he was back home sailing past Ireland's eye; dreams so vivid that he actually could feel the settling of the sails and the spray on his face."

And just as surely as all roads lead to Rome, so did their efforts to divert his gloom but lead deeper into the mire.

"Can I be bringing you back a book from town, Willy John?" Agnes Mary might ask, as armed with her big bundle of sewing, she set off for the convent.

"There's but one book I'm craving," Willy John would inform her dolefully, "'tis called the 'Exiled Sons of Usnach' . . ."

"Come, let's have a round of Five Hundred, Willy John," Kate might propose of an evening as they gathered about the kitchen table. And the game might be started, but in the midst of it Willy John would be moved to lay down his hand.

"'Tis but a sorry game I play, with my thoughts wandering to the evenings we played Five Thousand back home," he would apologize.

"We will have some music," Finola might announce cheerfully as she sorted over the records of the little talking machine.

"Then, mother, would you be playing 'Erin Go Bragh'?" he would request gently. And when Michael Hurley was moved to fiery retort or seathing comment, he found it was of no avail.

"What's to hinder you from working your way over and back again?" he once demanded. "Sure, and maybe a little visit there might make you change your tune."

Willy John shook a patient head. "You mean well, Cousin Michael, and gladly would I work my fingers to the bone to get back. But I wouldn't dare trust myself, lest I couldn't tear myself away again."

So that soon Michael decided it was best to hold his tongue, since in the long run he only succeeded in wounding Finola and her girls. But through many a change of mind he went. And most of the time it must be admitted, it was with fiery spleen he watched them, wondering how women could be so foolish and so blind. Again, his impatience would melt under a pitying tolerance. Was it their fault, after all, if their faith was so strong, their love so deep, it left scant room in their hearts for doubt. . . .

YET to one thing he could not bring reconciliation, and that was the sacrifice of Finola's granddaughter. Bad enough it was to have Kate and Agnes go their drab, thwarted way, without flaming haired young Moira following in their footsteps. And she was still unshaken in her determination to give up her schooling and go into the factory when an opening offered, and no urging on Michael's part could swerve her. And in his heart he bitterly deplored his stinted lot that so tied his hands where the child was concerned.

And so things were when the last night of Michael Hurley's visit came. And much as were the spirits of the womenfolk saddened at the thought of his going, they tried not to let their regret mar his last hours. But not so with Willy John. He wore an air of sadness that set him apart. And when he spoke, it was brokenly.

"And so, at daybreak, Cousin Michael, you are leaving us to sail home to Erin. And was it not that my duty lies here, how gladly would I change places with you. But as it is, when your ship plows the main homeward, remember my poor heart goes with you. . . ."

And just then, as though the fates timed it, there came a knock at the door, and a boy stood there with a note for Michael Hurley. And when he read the few scrawled lines, he shook a surprised head.

"Och! and that Jamie Regan was always as changeable as the compass on his old tub! The word is now that we're not off for home as soon as he thought, since he believes he sees a chance to make a profitable run down the coast and back again with a delegation of fruit packers and their cargo. And the thing he asks is, do I want to be taking in the extra trip? Which means, whether I do or whether I don't, it's an extra glimpse I'll be having of you all before we're off for good."

At which there was great rejoicing, the older women giving vent to their delighted "ah's" and "oh's," and young Moira pushing back her chair to come to his side and put loving young arms about his neck, and to lay her soft, young cheek against his weather beaten one. . . . And Willy John rejoiced, too; but his rejoicing was tinged with pensiveness.

"Ah, Cousin Michael, what a lucky man you are," he sighed, "to be able to put lightly aside the trip that would mean so much—to others—— What wouldn't I give to feel the boards heaving under my own feet once again and the sight of the world drifting by——"

Then Finola O'Reilly looked compassionately at Kate, and Kate looked at Agnes Mary, then their gaze went back to Willy John's curly bowed head. Then Kate asked hesitatingly, "Would the passage be costing much, do you think, Cousin Michael?" And Michael suddenly recalled young Moira's words that first night when she said: "But he will get his way yet, Cousin Michael, mark my words!" And now he read the handwriting on the wall. Willy John had conquered . . .

"Ye, ho, my hearty, and I see you're up at last," Michael Hurley called out as he came into the little cabin he shared in the hold of Jamie Regan's boat with Willy John O'Reilly. It was twenty-four hours after the "Molly O" had left port, and the cruise was well under way.

Willy John, standing before a little mirror brushing his hair into a debonair pompadour, laid down his comb and yawned luxuriously.

"I feel like a new man already, Cousin Michael," he said genially.

Michael took a seat on a bench and nodded. "That's the way to talk, Willy John," he encouraged. Then his face lengthened. "If only it was lasting . . . Come now, let's talk this over, man to man. This homesick urge of yours, couldn't you be shaking it off for good, if only for the sake of the others? Remember, man, your unhappiness is their unhappiness, your discontent their discontent. Then, too, it makes hard sledding for them to have to shoulder the living, when you won't settle down and do your share."

Willy John's face flushed at the blunt words. "Cousin Michael," he exclaimed solemnly, "I would gladly lay down my life for my mother and the girls. But when it comes to killing the urge that burns in my heart—sure, that is stronger than I am."

Michael pursed his lips. "Then the only real cure for the homesickness is to go back to Ireland, eh?"

"I'm afraid so, Cousin Michael," Willy John said sorrowfully.

"Well, then, thank God for what I'm doing," Michael Hurley exclaimed. Willy John's eyes widened.

"Sure, and it's time I was breaking the good news to you," the old man went on. "The wish of your heart is to be granted. You're going back to Erin, Willy John."

Willy John suddenly sank down on his berth. "You're joking," he said feebly.

"I'm as serious as a judge," Michael declared. "Go ask any of the crew. We're on the high seas, homeward bound."

"But I thought it was a trip to the coast we were taking."

"So did I, till the word came at the last minute that Jamie Regan had changed his mind again, when an argument came up about his price for the haul. And then it was that the plan came to me—and when I found he would be billing me for it within my means—and keep his mouth shut besides, till I could put the scheme over—I went through with it."

WILLY JOHN looked limp. "You should have told me!"

"Knowing the unselfishness of you, I was afraid you might not be taking advantage of it," he said glibly.

Willy John mopped his face. "Sure, and it's kind of you—but I wasn't expecting to set off on such a long visit," he said rather incoherently.

"Visit!" scoffed Michael. "Laddie, you're going to stay!"

At which Willy John leaped to his feet. "Man alive, you're crazy! You know I wouldn't be leaving the womenfolk!"

"Noble is the sentiment that prompts those words," Michael soothed, "and nobody's intending that you should. I have it all mapped out! You'll go back with me and get work, and when you've saved enough, you'll send for the others. I'm not doubting but the very old cot you left in Dunleary can be had for the asking."

"But the rest of it couldn't be managed," Willy John insisted excitedly. "What would become of them once I brought them over?"

"Nothing that would interfere with their happiness," Michael argued. "Finola O'Reilly will be content anywhere her children are content. Kate's heart is another's. Little she will care whether Terence Healy comes to her or she goes to him. And Agnes Mary will find peace behind convent walls, where e'er they may be."

"But there's Moira Shannon!" Willy John broke in weakly. "What future could there be for young Moira in Dunleary?"

"Between the kit of us young Moira shall not be robbed of her future, even if we have to send her all the way to Dublin," Michael said staunchly.

Willy John swallowed hard. His face was a sickly green. He sat silent.

"Sure, and it's dazed with joy you are, my boy," Michael said heartily as he arose and gave him a resounding slap on the back. "So I'll be leaving you a little while to yourself!" And from the cabin he strode. And when in a little while he returned he found Willy John still slumped on the berth. And at the old man's entrance he shook a decided head.

"Cousin Michael," he exclaimed firmly. "I've been thinking it over—and while it's grateful to you I am for your planning—maybe it would be a 2980 — Woman's or miss' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅝ yards of 36 inch material, with ⅝ yard of 35 inch contrasting.

2649—Girl's pajamas. Sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, and 16 years. Size 16 requires 5 yards of 40 inch material, with 1⅛ yards of 36 inch contrasting.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

A MOST attractive sheer woolen in beige and brown tones was used for this semi-tailored dress made by pattern No. 2792. It is just the thing to wear for shopping and is as smart as can be. It won't take long to make and isn't difficult either. The skirt is cut circular and is set onto a tapering hip yoke that buttons at the left side. The bodice is plain in the back, and in the front closes in sunburst effect. A knotted bow scarf of contrasting color covers the fastening.

The sleeves are exceptionally attractive, finished as they are with turn-down flaring cuffs, lined with the color used for the bow scarf. Narrow bias binding finishes the deep V neck.

You can't be too careful in being sure that the hip yoke is going to be just right for you. It mustn't show the slightest strain, yet should fit close to the figure. Be sure and compare your own measure there, with the hip yoke pattern. If you are particular about transferring all notches and other pattern marks to your material, you will have no difficulty in putting the dress together.

If you should choose one of the sheer woolens mentioned above, use matching brown faille silk crêpe for the knotted scarf, the lining of the cuffs and the neck binding.

Crêpe satin in black is chic for all day occasions, with the dull side of the crêpe used for the contrast. You can also cut the hip yoke from the dull side of the crêpe, if you like. Canton crêpe, crêpe Elizabeth, crêpe de chine and wool crêpe are smart materials. This dress, at the bottom, for size 36, measures about 1¾ yards.

Young girls will like these dainty pajamas made of rayon, cotton broadcloth, crêpe de chine or washable satin; and the pattern, No. 2649, is delightfully easy to cut and use. Nothing could be easier to make than the trousers. Felled seams are the best for lingerie, as they are so flat and smooth. At the top the trousers are hemmed, and this is used as a casing for a draw string.

The deep V neck is comfortable and makes the jacket easy to slip on and off. The sleeves flare slightly at the lower edge. All edges of these pajamas will look well finished with an outside applied band. Plain and printed sateen launders perfectly and will make pajamas quite smart enough for lounging. Striped cotton broadcloth with the material cut on the bias for the banding, chambray in light blue, combined with pink; orchid crêpe de chine with the scallops piped in pink, Nile green rayon silk with the bands in a deeper tone, flesh colored washable crêpe satin striped in blue, and natural colored pongee with brown piping will make up beautifully.

Pattern No. 2980 is for an unusually smart dress, suitable for business or the classroom, for shopping or general day time wear.

The silhouette is suggestive of the princess with its molded bodice and curved hip line, achieved through clever seaming. Godets inserted at either side of the front flare prettily at the hem line and these end in a yoke in the back that buttons in the center. The bodice also closes at the back with button trim. Deep turn back cuffs finish the close fitting sleeves and a turnover pointed collar finishes the neck. Of course, you will want the collar and cuffs to be of a contrasting color.

Silk crêpe in tobacco brown with the collar and cuffs of a yellow-beige shade of silk crêpe, and navy blue crêpe de chine with white collar and cuffs are chic suggestions for general wear. For something a little dressier bottle green sheer velvet, printed sheer velvet in rich wine red coloring, and printed tweed in brown tones are fashionable materials and colors.

If you are using material with an up and down nap, take care to have all pieces running the same way, with the nap running up. The chart that is included in the pattern shows the best manner of laying the pieces on the material.

The Backstage Mystery

By Octavus Roy Cohen

the theatrical trunk which stood in a corner. He gazed at her, without appearing to do so, and what he saw pleased him immensely.

Just a kid—that was his instant opinion; in some ways probably younger than her twenty years. She was blonde and deliciously curvy. She had bobbed, yellow hair, and brightly pink cheeks, and as she sat back comfortably on the trunk she frankly disclosed such a liberal expanse of silk stocking that Jim Hanvey blushed and looked away.

HE fancied that there was usually laughter in those gorgeous blue eyes of hers, but tonight the stark shadow of tragedy had dispelled the lightness. She was making a desperate effort to rally from the shock, and Hanvey did all he could to help.

But it wasn't easy. He talked with them calmly and casually. He led them on to speak of everyday affairs, and of themselves. His own placid personality had a soothing effect on their jangled nerves, and finally, when a commotion in the corridor signaled Hanvey that he was needed. Anice rose and came over to him. She looked squarely at him and slipped her hand into his.

"Jim Hanvey," she said, "you're regular!"

He flushed. "What you kidding me about?"

"You know what I mean. I was all in a few minutes ago and I've lost myself watching you try to snap me out of it. Well, you've done a good job. I feel rotten, but I've got myself under control. And I want to say, 'Thanks.'"

He grinned like a kid. "'Sall right, Sister. And you can pay me back some time."

"How?"

"Well, it's this way: Me, I got one hobby in the world that's young love. I like to be around it. And besides I'm lonely in this town. How about you and Mooney sort of taking me undey your wing occasionally?"

"You mean that?"

"I never was more serious in my life. You see, when a guy is fat, folks don't think that he's got emotions like other people. Now, I like you two kids——"

"Hanvey!" It was Gallagher's voice calling from the corridor and Jim waddled heavily through the door. There he turned and waved to them.

"You youngsters forget it," he advised. "If I had as much to be happy about as either of you, I wouldn't let nothing like this hand me a wallop."

As he walked down the corridor. Anice sidled over to Terry and fitted his arm around her slender and yielding waist. Her eyes were filled with tears.

"Gee, Terry," she said, "ain't he dandy?"

The boy gently kissed the very top of her golden head.

"He's a wonder."

"I hope he meant what he said. I was feeling pretty awful when I came back from the Raleigh. And all the time in here I could see what he was doing. He was trying so hard to calm me down that I found myself trying to help him—and I guess between us we did a pretty good job of it."

"That's what they say about Hanvey. That he's a great detective because he knows people. He knows how they would feel under certain circumstances. He—he's human, that's all."

"And real. You know, I really think he meant that stuff about being lonely and wanting to be with us."

"Well," declared the young man enthusiastically, "the more he is, the better I like it."

"And he said," she remarked slyly, "that he liked to see young love."

The boy's glance was tender. "I can furnish all of that," he declared "Enough to satisfy even him."

"It'll be wonderful to know him better, Terry. And maybe, some day when you write that great play that I'm going to star in, you can use his character——"

"Not a chance, sweetheart. Something tells me that you might put Jim Hanvey's words into the mouth of a stage character; you might make him do the same things, but it'd take a better playwright than I ever hope to be to project his heart across the footlights."

The Black Urge

By Vara Macbeth Jones

mistake, after all. 'Tis as you said that first evening—now that I've gotten used to a new way of living—I might find the old cot a bit wee!"

"Not if it held the sacred air of Erin," Michael said reassuringly.

"But the land was poor, Cousin Michael—suppose we couldn't be getting a living off it?"

"What matters it, so long as your heart is rooted there, Willy John?"

"But it would matter—at least, my concern for the others—if the shillings were scarce."

"A shilling's worth of contentment is worth more than a pound spent for unhappiness!" Michael said firmly.

Willy John was looking ill. "You have no right to decide things for me," he said shakily. "And if it's against my will you take me back—you can't hold me there!"

"How will you get back?" Michael demanded.

"You mean you won't pay my way back, even though it's kidnaping me you are?"

"I certainly won't let you do anything rash, man! Sure, there's only one circumstance under which I'd be willing to send you back, and that is if you told me the black urge is dead!"

"I'll not be telling you anything," Willy John said hysterically. "But it's to the family I'll be writing, asking them to get me home. "And if it comes to the worst, I'll work my way back!"

"And no matter under what circumstances you take your leave, I'll be writing to them, telling them of the proposition I made you. And soft hearted though they may be, I'm thinking an eye opener it will be to them!"

Willy John was succumbing. "Don't be doing that," he quavered.

"And why not?"

"Because—because—I think the urge is dead!" he gulped.

"God be praised!" exclaimed Michael Hurley. "All right, then," he went on briskly, "since that's the good news, the same message we'll be sending them home the minute we land. And then I'll be sending you after it."

By this time Willy John was mopping his brow. Michael was rubbing his chin.

"And I'll be seeing if we can't be sending Terence Healy back with you to confirm it," he said amiably. "With him on the spot—and young Moira to back him up, I'm thinking there'll be no resurrecting that black urge, Willy John . . . ."

When Your Cough Hangs On, Mix This at Home

The best cough remedy that money could buy, can easily be mixed at home. It saves money and gives you the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of stubborn coughs and chest colds, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and fill up with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. It's no trouble at all to mix, and when you once use it, you will never be without it. Keeps perfectly and tastes good—children really like it.

It is surprising how quickly this loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes and heals the inflamed membranes. At the same time, part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes, and helps the system throw off the whole trouble. Even those severe coughs which follow cold epidemics, are promptly ended.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Simple Application That Dissolves Blackheads

No more squeezing and pinching to get rid of those unsightly blemishes, blackheads. There is one simple, safe and sure way to get them out and that is to dissolve them. Get about two ounces of calonite powder from your druggist—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub briskly over the blackheads for a few seconds—wash the parts and every blackhead will be gone.

Pinching and squeezing out blackheads make large pores and you cannot get all the blackheads out of the way—while the simple application of Calonite powder and water dissolves every particle of them and leaves the skin and pores in their natural condition.

Embarrassing Moments

Tears and Smiles.

In a small town home we had a doorless shed protecting our back door, a catchall for old hats, clothes, brooms, etc. Some time previous I had made catsup and after bottling it set it out on a shelf in this shed. One evening I was sewing at a window in the living room at about the time for my husband's return from work. Suddenly there came from this shed a noise sounding like that of a shotgun and at the same instant my husband's derby hat, covered with blood, soared past my window with the top blown partly off and landed on the walk nearby.

I ran out, screaming, "Pa is shot." Neighbors gathered and, while some of them tried to console me, others went to investigate. They soon returned laughing, carrying the old hat, smeared with the contents of an exploded bottle of catsup.

Scare and embarrassment! Plenty of the latter. C. R. H.

"Out of the Mouths of Babes."

We were visiting friends one evening. Presently our three year old son became restless. Our hostess, noticing this, gave him a soft rubber ball to play with.

During the course of his play the ball rolled under the davenport and the little fellow crawled in after it. Presently the hostess asked him if he saw the ball. He replied, "No! I don't see anything but dirt." G. H. S.

With the Chorus Girls.

My escort, also from the "wide open spaces," and I decided to investigate the horrors, thrills and so forth of the Chicago night clubs. We dined in a well known club, and our "greenness" was undiscovered until the orchestra pealed forth with one loud blast.

My escort, hearing the introduction of a popular song, invited me to dance. In the little "burg" from which we came we were both classed as good dancers, so I strutted proudly before him out onto the dance floor, noticing as I did so that we were the first to start up. Suddenly a dozen chorus girls burst in from both entrances and we were surrounded. We had misunderstood the orchestra's introduction! I don't know who was the more embarrassed, the boy friend or I.

Amid laughter and titters, we found our way back to our table, but you may be sure we did not stay long. B. A. R.

Ruse Exposed.

I had been bothered by the various salesmen who go from door to door. One day while I was busy cleaning my kitchen, a young man came to door and asked me to subscribe to a magazine.

A bright idea came to me and I said, "I'm sorry but I'm the maid here. You'd better come when Mrs. W——, is home."

To my embarrassment the young man began to laugh. "Why, Mrs. W——, don't you remember me? I used to work at your husband's garage." Needless to say, I've never tried that gag on salesmen since. B. W.

Pet Economies

Tell us about your pet economy or an odd economy of some one you know and we'll pay you $1 if we print your letter. Address Economy, Sunday Tribune.

In Dressing Son.

My pet economy is dressing our 7 year old son with as little expenditure of money as possible.

Of course, his shirts and knickers are made from adult castoffs, but my favorite saving is in making his four-in-hand ties from his father's old ones. I discovered that after cutting off the soiled exposed end of his father's it left a clean, unworn tie of the exact length and width of a junior four-in-hand tie. Consequently my son has quite a large assortment of pretty ties. A. P. M.

Collects from Husband.

My pet economy is selling my husband his cigars and cigarettes.

Several times I had bought them on sale and noticed how quickly they were consumed; so the next time that I saw them on sale I bought them again and charged him exactly what he had been paying in a small candy store.

In less than a year I have over $15 collected, besides paying me what I originally invested, also my carfare when I go for them. M. M.

Saves for Others.

My pet economy is saving buttons. I would not dream of discarding a garment without removing the buttons and I often smile about it because I so often give the buttons to someone who is less thrifty than I.

During the last year I have given away several dozens of matched buttons that I had saved from discarded clothing. E. E. C.

AMONG THOSE PRESENT—OR ABOUT TO BE

VICTOR HERBERT

AT the ripe age of 16 years, Miss Margaret Perry has the leading role in "Strictly Dishonorable," opening tomorrow night at the Adelphi. Sir Harry Lauder, much better known in these parts, opens at the Garrick tomorrow night for a week's stay. A third opening set for Monday night is "Your Uncle Dudley," in which Thomas W. Ross, veteran comedian, has the Raymond Hitchcock role; with him is Eleanor Hayden. The Cort is to be the scene of their fun-making. Tonight will see the revival of "Mlle. Modiste" at the Majestic, with Fritzi Scheff in her original portrayal. The piece will be the first of a series of five operettas of the late Victor Herbert, American composer.

In the screen line, Dolores Costello is playing in "His Second Choice," at the Oriental this week, while Laura La Plante has the featured feminine role in "Show Boat," at the Roosevelt.

Life in Old England, as Seen by One American

Finds U. S. Is Far Away to Average Englishman.

By Philip Kinsley.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.]

> ENGLISH VIEWPOINTS
> The United States of America is far away to the average Britisher. In this article Mr. Kinsley talks with many different individuals representing the different classes, trades, and professions which go to make up English life. To some the stories of American prosperity, and the standard of living of United States workingmen is a myth. Others look at that same prosperity as a menace to English life and customs, while another group admires our efficiency and scientific methods and frankly admits that their own country is far behind the times.

LONDON, England, Feb. 8.—From the windows of the English home, tidy little windows with flower pots and lace curtains, America appears a dim and terrifying picture, a land of fabulous wealth, it is true, but spoiled by appalling crimes and drunkenness, a democracy that has failed to govern itself.

England has always been distrustful of what might be called a mathematical democracy, the rule of the majority, and there is nothing in recent American history, save its much vaunted prosperity, which would cause doubt in the English mind concerning their own system of hereditary monarchy and aristocracy. They snuggle down more deeply in their safe little homes. They are less adventurous, less curious today than ever.

The American picture is presented by the newspapers and reviews, the cinema, and the stories of travelers. It is not a flattering picture. People with rude manners, improper accent, financially grasping, uncultured, bizarre, careless of human life, contemptuous of law, hypocritically snobbish.

Hospitality Toward U. S.

As I have gone about England for the last two months, talking with all sorts and condition of people, I have asked them what they thought of America and Americans, and, later, have set their comment down and sought to find a common thread there. There is, I am convinced, a wide and latent hostility toward America, based partly on the fact that they have had to pay us so much money since the war, and have fallen behind in the industrial race. It is not a reasoned prejudice, but a feeling of being unfairly treated.

Here are the opinions of a number of unimportant people, but the kind who make up the trend of English thought:

London "city" man—Things are improving in the understanding of each other, but the interest on the war loan does not go down well. We are the most heavily taxed people in the world, and just at the moment that we pay you millions on the war loan we read of a reduction in your income tax. Of course, we want to pay our debts, but we think your Mr. Mellon 'put it over,' as you say, on our Mr. Baldwin.

Second "city" man—Your business men are too spasmodic. They keep us groggy with their speculative buying and efforts to unload. They do not make a sound market.

First "city" man—Well, we got a lot out of them on rubber, anyway.

Second "city" man—Yes, but it did not do us any permanent good. We are years behind in method and organization in business.

Build Things to Last.

First man—We build things to last, not to scrap every year.

College professor—We do not feel good about the financial situation. We gave you huge contracts during the war and you made great profits on them. We borrowed money from you to pay you and now have to pay it back at heavy interest. We financed the weak nations, carried the burden of the war, and now we are left in the lurch. Our industrial leaders have been too pig-headed and stupid to make the changes necessary to meet competition and they do not like the way they are now being forced.

Village public house keeper—America is a wicked place. Do you have a king there?

Miner and ex-soldier—The Americans are not well disciplined. They want to do everything in a hurry. The English know how to retreat, attack, retreat again, maybe five or six times, and they finally win.

London business man—The American menace is a real one to our prosperity. You have had prosperity so long you have forgotten what it is not to have it. We are twenty years behind the times. We feel the pressure of competition from France, Germany, and America, built up by greater efficiency, more scientific methods.

Suburban business man—There is too much show in the United States. We care nothing for what our neighbor thinks about our not owning a car or a radio. You are always in debt with installment buying. We pay as we go.

Baker Likes America.

Grocer—Why are the people so poor here? Is it because we have a king and you have a president? I believe so, but do not dare say so. Look at the money it takes to support the royal family.

Baker—I like the Americans. Don't know why the papers are ragging them all the time. We are kept in a rut. Americans get up and go.

Writer—There is a national hostility toward America. I think the basic cause is jealousy. John Bull used to boast of his bathtubs and the high wages he paid, but he can't do it any more.

Diplomat—There is just as much snobbery in the United States as there is in England. Look at the way they fussed over Queen Marie. The universal attribute toward social claims is found in your country in titles and dressing up in queer costumes in your secret societies.

Commercial artist—It makes no difference what kind of government we have. We get the same old diplomats and civil service. The merchants, not the gentry, are getting the money. There is much poverty among the gentry, who are too proud to take the dole. Americans are all right. They don't sit down and take things for granted.

Banker: The English have been too slow to adapt themselves to a changing world. They lost great sources of profit in their export trade after the war and have not regained them. There is too much paid out in relief measures and too little done in fundamental reorganization.

Working Woman: I want to go out to America or Argentina. The young men are not getting married here, not making enough money. Many young couples have to live on five pounds [$25] a week. Nothing left for amusements. The grocers and butchers are the only ones who have cars and radios.

Overworked American Husband.

Student: America is interesting socially, but we can work out things much more smoothly and sanely, if more slowly, under our form of government. America's carelessness of human life is appalling. And what about your race problem and lynchings, and the attitude toward free speech shown in Elmer Gantry? What of the poor overworked American husband, the slave of a parasitic idle wife? Does Mencken exaggerate the stupidity of the fundamentalists in the coco cola belt?

Shopkeeper: We are paying you too much money. The average man here is taxed to death. If he drinks and smokes his margin of profit is gone, and that is not fair. He has a right to those things.

Farmer: We need protection against the American farm board methods and the Chicago wheat speculator, but our money goes much farther than yours.

Waiter: Americans have lots of money but they boast too much and don't know how to spend it.

Taxi Driver: Sure we like Americans but I guess the nobs don't.

Social Worker: How can England compete with a dry nation when it spends so much for liquor, consuming more than twenty million barrels of beer a year and more than twelve million gallons of distilled liquor?

Critic: The American government exists to govern, not to provide for the people. It is political rather than paternal. In this country the government makes a sort of paternal provision for the sick, the unemployed, and the destitute. This must be taken into account when we discuss the relative wages of English and American working men. The Englishman takes some of his wages in kind, in sickness benefit, in unemployment benefit, whereas if the American loses his job and cannot get another there is nothing for him but the underworld.

Clerk: We read with interest of your fine new buildings in America and the warm and sunlit offices. Commercial clerks here are often forced to work in offices inadequate for air space, unclean, and overcrowded. Out of each 1,000 deaths of commercial clerks no fewer than 239 are due to tubercular disease.

The Chief Sore Spot.

Today's news contains an item on the first page which shows how the chief sore point, the American debt situation, is kept before the people, and its effect on their welfare.

"Today check to America—$93,795,000.

"U. S. income tax reduction—$160,000,000.

"Only $27,000,000 applied to principal.

"Total paid by Great Britain—$1,224,970,000.

Outstanding—$4,926,000,000."

Lord Beaverbrook's paper presents this and at the present time he is engaged in a crusade for a great revival of empire trade, which would make trade free between the British dominions and put up tariff walls against the outside world.

"Amazing Story of Crime in U. S. A." is another heading, and the story tells of graft and killing and crookedness in official life in much detail.

That prohibition is a failure is assumed here and is constantly being paraded in the press.

Such national problems, however, have little concern for the average man, if there is such a person. One can only meet these people casually and after drawing them out in conversation, a sample from the many social circles, put them together in

Old Guard of Theater Stars Going Strong

Roundup of Rare Vets on Chicago Stage.

By Charles Collins.

IF Cicero were sitting at the drama desk this week he could easily write a sequel to that mellow meditation of his, "De Senectute." For the veterans of the stage, oldsters gray of hair and ripe of reputation, players who are traditions, are assembling in numbers. Flaming youth, brash in its premature sophistication, can contemplate them with spiritual profit and study their long careers with unaccustomed awe.

First there is Fritzi Scheff, star of the revival of "Mlle. Modiste" which begins a cycle of Victor Herbert's operettas at the Majestic this evening. If the printed records give her birthdate correctly, she is not yet overburdened with years (statistically, she's 49); but she has been trilling arias a long, long time. She won the sobriquet "The Little Devil of the Opera" when Florodora was a girl in the dawn of this century. There is little left of the gay vintage from which Fritzi was poured; she is "period" stuff.

"Little Devil of Opera."

Alt Wien, when it was the most worldly and light-minded of the European capitals, produced her; and she came to the American stage in her brilliant and seductive youth to create a vogue for Viennese prima donnas which carried through a generation. She was svelte and saucy, with a pert, coquettish prettiness that was the ideal of Austrian chic; and with the gift of song added to this personality, her conquest of American playgoers was swift.

For Fritzi could sing far better than the average favorite of the operas that weren't "grand." She had been trained in the opera houses of Germany and she had two years of soubrette rôles at the Metropolitan of New York before the lighter lyric diversions claimed her as a star. It was Maurice Grau who gave her the nickname of "Little Devil." Many a manager has called her that since then, much less affectionately; for when she became an infallible magnet in the box office her temperament developed amusing eccentricities of the sort that breeds theatrical anecdote. The fairy story of the delicate princess who complained about the annoyance of the split pea in her bed, although a thousand downy mattresses had been piled over it, must have been invented in anticipation of the professional tantrums of Fritzi Scheff.

You have heard Victor Herbert's waltz song, "Kiss Me Again," from "Mlle. Modiste," over the radio a thousand times. But unless you heard and saw Fritzi Scheff—the young Fritzi of 1905 to 1908—in the song you are only half-educated in this particular. The crystalline voice, light and pure and lovely as a mating bird's; the eager little face, amorous and tantalizing; the capricious spirit of desire masked with laughter—these things are a memory that comes undimmed down the years.

And tonight, after a retirement of years, reënter Fritzi Scheff! It means, for well seasoned playgoers the recapture of an old happiness; and for their juniors, the discovery how charming musical comedy was before jazz became a pest.

Mr. Cohan Grows Up.

George M. Cohan must be included in these meditations over the Old Guard that never surrenders. He came back a week ago to face a town that hadn't seen him on the stage in nearly a score of years, and acquitted himself like a successor to John Drew—if that vanished aristocrat had ever gone in for melodramas of the underworld. This was not an appearance of George Himself, the Broadway Boy, to whom Chicago was formerly much addicted; this was the debut of a new and extremely able actor, deeply imbedded in an effective character study.

There was a floral harp as tall as a horse to greet him, ribboned as coming "from his Chicago pals." There was a broadside of applause at his entrance that nearly swept him into tongue-tied embarrassment. He was taken by surprise, because, with all his achievement and his renown as a leader of theatrical affairs, Mr. Cohan is fundamentally shy. He was so completely born to the stage that he has been immune to its infections that inflame the Ego.

The Cliff Dwellers club, whose cachet means something in the realm of arts and letters, wanted him for a guest of honor a few days ago, but George was terrified at the thought of making an after-luncheon address. He is one of those men who have but one speech to give to their country. His, some of us easily remember, was: "My father thanks you—my mother thanks you—my sister Josephine thanks you—we all thank you." He put that speech into architecture when he named his theater the Four Cohans.

Here is a man whose career has had almost as many lives as a cat. Many a time it has been reported that he had "burned himself out" by too much spending of energy as actor, singer, dancer, playwright, librettist, composer, manager and what-not. His hair is now as white as an arctic winter—but he crosses stage with a swift, sure, pacing step. When his tour in "Gambling" takes him into Los Angeles he is going into double harness again. Yes, George M. Cohan of the many careers is adopting a new one. He is going to write for the talkies—and Al Jolson's needs for a new scenario are even now occupying his afternoons. It can be said of him at fifty as it was at twenty: the boy is "there."

Talkies Mount to High Notes and High Hats

Operettas Lift General Level of Cinema.

By Tom Pettey.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—[Special.]—The time has come to talk of operettas. Lawrence Tibbett has arrived in town in the "Rogue Song," and Oscar Straus, who composes music for men like Tibbett to sing, has arrived in town on a boat. Mr. Straus, with his velvet jacket and thick lensed glasses, has hurried on to the orange groves of Hollywood, but he has left a promise behind. Mr. Tibbett, still with us on the screen, brings a promise with him.

All in all, the talking screen is looking up. The time has come for the mink and the rabbit to sit side by side in the talkie palaces. The cinema is getting slightly snooty and theme songs have to do with haloes rather than rings around the bathtub, as they did in the dim movie past of last month.

Epidemics of Musical Shows.

It looks very much as if we were in for a season of high notes, high art, and high hats. Between now and the big thaw there is going to be an epidemic of operettas. Let us hope they all are on a plane with the "Rogue Song." It makes little difference that a slight air of "singing down to the movies" crops out in Mr. Tibbett's notes, yet the movies grow up to fellows like Mr. Tibbett.

Now the only connection between Mr. Straus and Mr. Tibbett is the operetta idea. "The Rogue Song" is based on Franz Lehar's "Gypsy Love" and is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production. Mr. Straus is over here to compose some real music for Warner Bros. And speaking of "reel music," the German composer is enthusiastic.

Mr. Straus is quite frank about why he came to America. "Mr. Warner's offer, you know," he replies. "There is no real reason," he insists, "why music should not be reproduced mechanically. There should be no loss

Film's Extraordinary Because of Honesty of Presentation

"THE CITY GIRL."
[PART TALKER.]
★ ★ ★ ★

(One star means fairly good; two stars, good; three stars, excellent; four stars, extraordinary; no stars—just another movie.)

Produced by Fox. Directed by F. W. Murnau. Presented at the Monroe theater.

THE CAST.

The Son	Charles Farrell
The Waitress	Mary Duncan
The Father	David Torrence
The Mother	Edith Yorke
The Little Daughter	Dawn O'Day

Field hands, restaurant employés, etc.

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

"All great actions have been simple and all great pictures are."

"The City Girl" is extraordinary because of its simplicity; because it presents a believable and interesting story honestly; because it shows real people amid real surroundings acting as they naturally would act were they the characters they are portraying. It is extraordinary because of the unusual nature of its surprises. For instance:

The blonde hussy on the train DOESN'T get the country boy's bank roll.

The country boy DOESN'T fall into the hands of gunmen who make way with all his poor pa's wheat money.

No George Bancroft or Chester Morris sells him Lincoln's monument.

The waitress he falls in love with DOESN'T . . . but the picture must tell you about that. And, when somebody runs recklessly through pa's beloved wheat fields where the grain is just about ready for the harvesters, the thing doesn't happen that you think WILL happen, and which undoubtedly would have occurred in a picture less intelligently directed.

Delightfully Different.

You will agree that none of the above named surprises runs true to form. Well, it's a relief to realize that one director knows that ALL Lems aren't boobs; all blondes do not triumph; all waitresses . . . again I muzzle the typewriter!—and all irate Pas are not Johnny-on-the-spot when the horse goes lame—figuratively speaking. Smart man, for——"Nothing astonishes men so much as common sense and plain dealing."

Does the above give you any idea as to what the story is about? I hope not. It really isn't fair to rob you of the delight of wondering "what comes next" as you watch a picture, and I've tried not to do so.

I only want to convey to you the fact that over at the Monroe is a thoroughly worthwhile program offering, containing Charles Farrell as you like him, Mary Duncan as you never thought she could be, and a splendid supporting cast. Here you will find the panting city; fields of waving wheat, young love ardent and wistful; age, stern, rugged—and wistful, too; gallant gayety and cleanliness, and, for contrast, the coarse song and low humor of yokels. You will find pathos, suspense, excitement. Briefly—

"The City Girl" brings you life—captured by a camera wizard.

THE JAMES NELSON and Anna Louise Raymond Public school and children's lecture division of the Field museum will present a special Lincoln's birthday program of motion pictures for children in the James Simpson theater of the museum on Wednesday morning. The film, "Abraham Lincoln," including six reels illustrating episodes in the life of the martyred President, will be shown. There will be two performances, one at 10 a. m. and one at 11. Admission is free.

The regular spring series of Raymond fund free entertainments for children on Saturday mornings at 10 and 11 o'clock will begin on Feb. 22 when, to mark George Washington's birthday, films will be shown of Washington's life and episodes of the American revolution. The films are "Gateway to the West" and "Yorktown" of the Yale university "Chronicles of America" series, presented to the museum by the late Chauncey Keep.

Light Operas Are Promised for Spring Days

Casts Include American Members.

By Edward Moore.

LOOKING ahead to the spring season of operetta at the Civic theater, a few more facts have issued from the publicity headquarters of the Civic Opera company.

The season will be two months long, April 21 to June 21. The first work will be that ancient and honorable work, "The Bohemian Girl," by Michael W. Balfe. The conductor will be Frank St. Leger, a member of the Civic Opera company's staff of conductors and now on tour with it. The stage director will be Charles Jones, for many years stage director of the Henry W. Savage productions.

Whether there will be a weekly change of bill, a change every two weeks, or a run as long as the traffic justifies, has not been definitely stated. At any rate, some of the other works under consideration for later performance are Robert Planquette's "The Chimes of Normandy," Charles Le Coq's "The Daughter of Mme. Angot," André Messager's "Veronique," and two of the Gilbert and Sullivan set, "The Gondoliers" and "Yeoman of the Guard." The list of possibilities may be increased later. All selections will be sung in English.

Feature Scenic Settings.

The orchestra will be drawn from the Civic Opera company's orchestra, and the ballet will be similarly organized. No mention has as yet been made of the singers, but there is gossip to the effect that some of the American members of the Civic Opera company will be in the casts, and that the choral ensemble may be in large part made up of young and aspiring Chicagoans. It was said that before the Civic Opera company went away on its tour there were more than 200 applications from young singers for places either as soloists or in the ensemble, and that the auditions surprised everybody not only as voices but in the amount of stal-

New Play by Sturges Not Faring Well

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—What goes up, concludeth the wise men, must come down. Preston Sturges, having gone up with "Strictly Dishonorable," the comedy success of this particular theater season on Broadway, has come down with a second play, "Recapture," which gives indication of proving one of the more expensive failures of this same season.

"Recapture" was brought into the Eltinge theater last week, after a few weeks of trial outside the city, and was met, so far as critical opinion is concerned, with a barrage of tut-tuts and not a few direct verbal slammings.

The young playwright's experience would be significant and important if there were any chance of its having the slightest effect upon any other young and equally promising playwright, which there is not. Each of them seems forced to learn from his own experience.

By his own written and printed confession, many of Mr. Sturges' friends advised against his permitting "Recapture" to be produced as written. His current manager, A. H. Woods, begged him to rewrite his last act before he put the play to the Broadway test. But he would have none of this advice. He wanted to discover, he said, what his own judgment amounted to. The discovery, I suspect, has proved slightly jarring to his vanity.

Play Has an Idea.

"Recapture" is blessed with an idea, which is something. The Henry Martins, five years divorced, meet at a small hotel in Vichy, France, the day the former Mrs. Martin arrives there with the somewhat stolid Englishman she is planning to marry. Mr. Martin, it happens, has just dropped in for a week-end with his current lady love, an ex-chorus girl, who is traveling as his niece.

At sight of each other the Martins are emotionally greatly moved. Mr. Martin recalls that he never, never has loved another woman since Mrs. Martin sent him away. Mrs. Martin cannot go so far as that, but she is conscious of a sort of divine curiosity as to whether or not the feeling she now has for Harry indicates the rebirth of an old love.

On impulse the two Martins agree to run away from their respective traveling companions and, in the little village nearby where they had spent the first weeks of their honeywart, good looking masculinity and attractive femininity.

A feature is to be made of the scenic settings. The stage of the Civic theater is large enough to accommodate scenery and lighting effects in keeping with the standards established in the Civic Opera house. They must necessarily be smaller than the opera settings, but they will be just as elaborate. Productions will be built in the studios of the opera company from sketches by Julian Dove, chief scenic artist of the opera company.

Stepping Stone to Grand Opera.

Lest some of these statements may seem to have been arrived at arbitrarily, the company explains some of the considerations by which they were reached. The desire is to develop a répertoire of operetta which shall be a stepping stone to grand opera. Light opera is not to be confused with musical comedy. The music of some of the light operas is quite as exacting upon the singers as that of the standard large operas, and occasionally it is more so.

One of the reasons why the project was thought of at all was that it seemed desirable to create a company of a kind that does not exist anywhere else in America, one that should both present operettas for their own sake and also train and routine fine young American voices for the grand opera stage.

This sort of training inevitably offers more than the mere memorizing of rôles. Suppleness, elegance, good taste, style, and musicianship are essential additions to singing voices. Even the choral work gives both vocal and dramatic training.

Charming Revivals.

Performers with such education back of them can hardly help but be more valuable to the grand opera stages of this country. Not an opera season goes by when one does not see performances that would be much the better if some of its artists had had more training.

Light opera needs intimacy, which it will have in the Civic theater and could not have in the Civic Opera house. The season will revive some charming music, renewing the recollections of the elder generation and introducing itself to the younger. Finally, as this is to be the first of a series of continuing seasons, it will be economic as well as artistic, making an outlet and the start of a career for American artists who will thereby be able to make themselves better artists.

Leading American Musicians.

The National Federation of Music clubs has done considerable for the cause of music in this country, but one wonders whether its leaders are actually considering as serious the result of what was called a plebiscite in the effort to select "twenty leading American musicians." The list is in and the twenty names are to be inscribed on tablets in "America's Music Hall of Fame" to be included in the Barbizon-Plaza Art and Music center of New York.

The point is that so much of the country was left out of the voting that only by a liberal use of the imagination can it be considered representative. Votes were received from as far afield as Alaska and Honolulu, but here is a list of the states which did not vote at all: Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, New Mexico, California, Idaho, West Virginia, Arizona, and Nevada, as well as Porto Rico. With these trifling exceptions, "America" made its choice. This is it:

Composers: Charles Wakefield Cadman, Deems Taylor, Edgar Stillman Kelley, John Philip Sousa, John Alden Carpenter.

Singers: Rosa Ponselle, Louise Homer, John McCormack, Reinald Werrenrath, Geraldine Farrar.

Instrumentalists: Albert Spalding, Harold Bauer, Percy Grainger, Leopold Godowsky, Olga Samaroff.

Conductors: Walter Damrosch, John Philip Sousa, Henry Hadley, Edwin Franko Goldman, Ernest Schelling.

Juilliard School of Music.

The Juilliard School of Music in New York tells of its 1930 competition for publication of new orchestra works by American composers. One work will be selected and published, thereby facilitating the composer in what has always been one of his most severe problems—the presentation of his work to the orchestras of the country.

The terms of the competition are: 1. Compositions must be by native born or naturalized American citizens. 2. Only such orchestral compositions as are suitable for performance by a major symphony orchestra will be considered, and only compositions of which the composer owns or can control the copyright should be submitted. 3. Compositions which have been previously performed should be accompanied by a brief statement as to places and dates of performance so far as known. 4. Compositions should be sent to the Juilliard School of Music, New York, before May 1, 1930. Manuscripts sent by mail should be insured and the composer's name and address securely attached. Manuscripts not selected for publication will be returned to the sender. 5. Should a composition of outstanding merit be disclosed through the competition, it will be published in the summer or autumn of 1930.

Though the German Grand Opera company was supposed to have finished its engagement at the Auditorium last night, "The Flying Dutchman" turned out to be an extremely popular item. It will therefore be repeated this afternoon, presumably by the same cast that sang it Wednesday night, though at the time this is being written no detailed statement has been received.

There is word of a new Chicago organization, the Ensemble of the Creative Dance, which will introduce itself at Kimball hall next Friday evening. Its principle is thus stated: "All persons inherently possess [illegible] creative ability. We aim to release this energy, and offer the greatest possible opportunity for original ideas. We encourage dancing as a fine art rather than as a commercial enterprise." The members of the company are Jeanne Dumas, Doro-Thea, Sylvia Darkova, Stephanie Florence Martin, Adele Bass, and Joan Bosca.

Marx and Anne Oberndorfer will continue their series of "Hearing America First" concerts for school children at Orchestra hall next Saturday morning. Two identical programs will be given at 9:30 and 11:15 o'clock in which music of the times of Washington and Lincoln will be presented. Margaret Lester and Fred Wise will sing songs of the first and Helen Protheroe and Leslie Arnold of the second, all wearing period costumes. The concerts are sponsored by the board of education through its music department, of which Dr. J. Lewis Prowne is director.

NOTED SOLOIST

ERNEST SCHELLING.

Four years a pupil of Paderewski, seven times a soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra, this famous American pianist and composer is visiting the orchestra for the eighth time this week. On this occasion he will appear in both capacities and will add a third, that of conductor. He will play the "Polish Fantasy" by his old master and conduct his own suite, a new work which he calls "Morocco."

An American's Impressions of Life in England

Finds U. S. Is Far Away to Average Briton.

By Philip Kinsley.

the hope of finding a common point of view.

Here is a man interested in automobiles, fights and other sports, a sort of man about town, of the middle class:

"Americans? We like them if they are any good. We give all foreigners a chance here, Russians, Poles, Yankees, or anything that comes along. Some of the Yanks are bad mugs.

The Doer, the Talker.

"What's your President's name—Hanover? Is he better than MacDonald? I guess he is more of a doer and MacDonald is the talker. He promises too much. I don't take no interest in the debt. That's up to Downing street and makes no difference to me.

"We got a topping prince, ain't we? Why, he might come in here and get down to a pint of bitter and a smoke and chat with us.

"I like the Yankee idea of building cars that has to be scrapped or turned in every year or so. That keeps the money going. They build things to last here. I see Lord ——, who owns a newspaper, has a fleet of Ford cars. Now I can't understand that. We got to be patriotic, ain't we?"

The business man, the "city" man, does not like to talk shop, especially to strangers, but he has a wider fund of information and more general conversational power than the average American. He takes more time at things and does not lead such a hectic life. It is not necessary to leave home every evening. Once a fortnight he may go to his neighborhood club, where good music and dancing and drinks are provided. He has a dog and a garden and likes to take a stick and go walking with dogs and children, or even his wife. There is a good deal of open country around London and the other cities and it does not take long to reach a forest, a well manicured forest, perhaps, but still with sweet air and the sound of birds, and the chase after the gray squirrel.

The average man has some kind of a radio set, usually a small one, for this, like everything else in Great Britain, is taxed in the form of an annual license fee which supports the British Broadcasting company.

Criticize Programs.

The government program has frequent critics. Some think it too high brow. Others think there is too much trivial news broadcast, particularly about the royal family, and sporting events. Here is a sample Sunday program:

Church service, lecture on dance and party dress styles, orchestra from Mayfair, fishing bulletin, a contralto, organ music, a play for children, weather, news, Bach, French suite on piano, week's work in garden, wireless orchestra, the week in London, shipping and stock, musical entertainment, drama and dance music ending at midnight.

A garden, flowers, good books and an open fire place form the city man's idea of home and proper surroundings. And always the pipe. The average man cannot afford cigars, and probably would not smoke them anyway. The pipe is always in evidence, in office, on the street, on the tram and bus and tube, and in the theaters. The air is blue from smoke in the music halls and cinemas.

The city man gets up in the dark those winter days and goes home in the dark. His day, however, is not a long one. He takes time off for tea in the afternoon, having it brought in instead of shutting up the office, and looks forward to a long week-end. This may begin Friday afternoon early and last until Monday morning late. The shops close early, even the tobacco shops. The pubs close by 11 at the latest. Of course, at home on the sideboard, there is a decanter of whisky, or beer in the pantry. There is no need to go thirsty at any time.

Temperance the Fashion.

The business man, however, is not drinking as much as he used to do. Temperance is the fashion in England, particularly in business circles, and the home secretary, Mr. J. R. Clynes, speaking recently at a luncheon of the National Commercial Temperance league, said:

"We know now that most men would regard it as a shameful thing to be found in a drunken state. They look upon it, indeed, as a social offense.

"A condition which was formerly looked upon as a state of mere merriment, which could only be the subject of a joke, is now something of which men are heartily ashamed."

Sir Robert Wallace, K. C., chairman of London Sessions for the last 20 years, says:

"Anyone who knows London today knows that it is quite exceptional to discover drunkenness."

"My own observation in the public houses is that both men and women are drinking steadily, but not in excess. The hours for open bars are so regulated that people cannot remain there at the times they should be home, lunch time, supper time and bedtime. The liquor commission is now investigating the question of tightening the laws still more. There is no thought of prohibiting drinking, or of betting on the races.

"I guess we would find a ways and committees, if they tried that," said a sporting business friend. "Because it is the biggest item of government revenue."

Doesn't Complain Much.

The merchant or business executive who makes $5,000 a year is looked upon in a suburban community as a wealthy man, and one at $10,000 a year can live in all the comfort and dignity of English country life. The average business man has to get along on much less, say $2,000 or $3,000 a year, but he manages comfortably, pays as he goes and hopes for better times under a Conservative or Liberal government. His taxes are high, but he does not complain too much, for he has a sense of social responsibility toward those who are poorer than he.

The university graduate, the public school boy, enter active life with a strong historical and political attitude, and this sense of the past is ever present. It is not only England and Great Britain, but the world wide British Empire, of which they are a living part and toward which they have a duty. America has swung away from this and now presents the picture of the one community in the world which has organized itself on the scale which modern production demands. England has dropped behind and is now groping in a political and business way to find the right road to follow into a future which must be made safe for their aristocratic democracy.

The established Englishman does not find a great deal in American life and methods that he would care to introduce in England. The younger man looks beyond the sea timidly, but with more admiration.

"They take a chance over there," said one young man of inventive turn. "The bankers are willing to back a thing on character. Here they demand collateral, and lose much in the way of new methods and inventions."

Entire friendliness for individual Americans of the decent sort, but a wary attitude toward the commercial menace of the younger country, seems to characterize the general attitude of business men.

The National Review thinks that, "the best way for the English nation to get on with American people is for us to take a more manly and self-respecting attitude about our own affairs, and not to continue to crawl at the mention of the Stars and Stripes."

The seventh of Mr. Kinsley's articles will be printed next Sunday.

ADMIRED IN "WHOOPEE"

FRANCES UPTON

A CHARACTERISTIC Ziegfeld show, rich with lovely ladies, has been built around that audacious little humorist, Eddie Cantor, and is now on view at the Illinois under the title of "Whoopee." Miss Upton, who is the heroine of the western fable that serves for a plot, proves that Mr. Ziegfeld still knows how to pick them. She has marked talents in song and dance, and a vivid personality.

THEATER GOSSIP

THE hazards of play production are demonstrated anew by record of Chamberlain Brown's Greenwich, Conn., stock company, which recently closed a season of 42 weeks. In that time 35 new plays were tested, and out of the list there emerged not one real hit. About six or eight of the 35 found eventual Broadway production, and two or three are running there now; but there has been nothing of any consequence. Mr. Brown is looking for a playhouse nearer New York and plans to start all over again along about Easter.

Rudolf Besier, an occasional dramatist who once had a play produced at the New theater ("Don"), and was one of the authors of "Secrets," has written a play in which the Brownings, Robert and Elizabeth Barrett, are the chief characters. It is talked about in the London newspapers, which say that it will be produced over there in March.

A crowded week for the New York stage looms up just beyond this—the week of the 17th. There will be both Flo Ziegfeld's "Simple Simon" and George White's "Flying High," for the Broadway crowd. Also on the list is "The Infinite Shoeblack," which has been seen in Chicago. Then too, there will be the Coburns in a dramatization of Tarkington's "The Plutocrat"; a Paul Green play called "Tread the Green Grass," and a George Abbott-A. K. Lauren play, "Those We Love." To say nothing of an eminent Chinese actor named Mei-Lan-Fang, a comedy called "Apron Strings," the Theater Guild revival of "R. U. R." and a Jolson theater revival of "The Count of Luxembourg." The list adds up to ten.

Alla Nazimova never has acted for the Theater Guild, but she is announced for the Turgeniev play called "A Month in the Country," for which Miss Fontanne had been mentioned. It will be the Guild's next production after "The Apple Cart."

George Jessel's first effort as a producer is going to be called "This Man's Town" instead of "A Cup of Coffee." It is almost ready. . . . "Miss Gulliver's Travels," which has to do with a show troupe in the year 1840, is due in New York about March 3. . . . The signs are that Katharine Cornell's "Dishonored Lady" will have a prosperous engagement at the Empire, New York. . . . Marc Connelly's "The Green Pastures" is scheduled to open in New York the last week in February.

Speaking of "Mlle. Modiste," this was the original company, which started the sprightly Victor Herbert operetta off on a three years' run, beginning Oct. 9, 1905:

Henri de Bouvray	Wm. Pruett
Capt. Etienne de Bouvray	Walter Percival
Hiram Bent	Claude Gillingwater
Gaston	Leo Mars
Marquis de Villefranche	George Schrader
Lieut. Rene La Motte	Howard Chambers
Francois	J. A. Kiernan
Mme. Cecille	Josephine Bartlett
Fanchette	Edna Fassett
Nanette	Blanche Morrison
Maria Louise	Louise de Baron
Bebe	La Mora
Mrs. Hiram Bent	Bertha Holly
Fifi	Fritzi Scheff

Of the fourteen, only four are still alive—Mme. Scheff, Walter Percival, Claude Gillingwater, and Edna Fassett.

Al Woods is trying to decoy Lenore Ulric to New York with the play called "The Iron Widow," which is one of a dozen or more that were once mentioned for the late Jeanne Eagels. Miss Ulric is out on the coast, concerned chiefly with talking pictures. She is taking time out, however, to appear in a coast production of "East of Suez."

At least three other pieces are prospects for the week of the 17th in New York. There is "The International Revue," concerning which there come good reports from Philadelphia. There is a chance that Mr. Gribble's "Elizabeth and Essex" may be staged that week and a further possibility for a piece called "Gala Night." This last will have James Rennie in its chief rôle.

Ted Healy, who recently appeared here as the star of the revue, "A Night in Venice," leads the program of Radio-Keith-Orpheum vaudeville at the Palace theater this week. He is supported by a company of ten players. Other numbers on the bill are: The Albertina Rasch ballet, Ward and Van, Mildred Hunt & Co., the Kanazawa Japs, and Sommers and Hunt.

New in Chicago

"MLLE. MODISTE," the operetta by Victor Herbert, which was first staged in 1905, will come to the Majestic this evening in revival, for a two week's engagement with Fritzi Scheff, its original prima donna, as the star. This is an old favorite, containing some of Mr. Herbert's best remembered numbers. Miss Scheff's company includes Detmar Poppen, Nathaniel Wagner, Alan Brooks, Arthur Burckley, Flavia Arcaro, Sarah Edwards, Doris Griffin, Edith Artley, Florence Cazelle, Katherine Richmond, and an Albertina Rasch ballet.

"Strictly Dishonorable," a play now among the ten best sellers of Broadway, will reach Chicago tomorrow evening, at the Adelphi theater, in the interpretation of a duplicate company. This is a drama of the Manhattan night clubs and speakeasies, and its central character is a young southern girl who gets mixed up in the cabaret life.

"Your Uncle Dudley," which opens at the Cort theater Monday night, is a comedy of small city life originally written for the stellar uses of the late Raymond Hitchcock by Howard Lindsay and Bertrand Robinson, authors of "Tommy." The central character is a bachelor who neglects his business to be the back slapper, club organizer and civic leader of his home town, but finally sees that it isn't getting him anything. Thomas W. Ross of "Checkers," "The Fortune Hunter," "The New Henrietta," "Laff That Off," etc., has the tile rôle, and Mrs. Jacques Martin is featured with him.

Sir Harry Lander, the famous Scotch entertainer, will arrive at the Garrick theater Monday for a week's stay. He is said to bring a generous assortment of new numbers and he will have many of the old favorites on tap at the slightest suggestion of an encore.

New Play by Sturges Not Faring Well

His "Recapture" Fails to Evoke Enthusiasm.

By Burns Mantle.

mon, try to recapture "the first fine careless rapture" of their mating.

The adventure, so far as Mr. Martin is concerned, is definitely successful. Mrs. Martin, however, feels differently. Even when Mr. Martin's chorus girl friend hunts them out and, learning the situation, insists that Mrs. Martin shall go through with her tentative promise and remarry Mr. Martin, if only for the sake of his happiness, she refuses.

As an explanation for the psychoanalysts Mrs. Martin confesses that when she had buried the infant son she bore Mr. Martin, all her love for its father seemed to be buried with it. That love, she now knows, can never live again, and she would be doing both herself and Mr. Martin a deep wrong if she were, out of sympathy, to agree to a remarriage.

The pleading chorus girl [a self sacrificing sentimentalist who truly loves Martin], added to the continued pleading of the husband, so unsettles Mrs. Martin's mind that she is made miserable. At which juncture she steps into a recently repaired elevator and, when the elevator crashes to the basement of the hotel, is killed.

Shows Too Much Strain.

The play's weakness lies not alone in the easy method adapted by the playwright to be rid of the problem his tangled plot presents him, but also in the artificial approach to the situation. The entire third act is given over to a strained effort to fill in time until the elevator crash can properly dismiss the audience.

There is no excuse made that Mrs. Martin has deliberately sought this means of escape or had a similar escape in mind. The God from the machine is propelled by purely accidental motives. It is, in professional terms, an easy but unconvincing out. And becomes, save for a moment's thrill, a little ridiculous.

Now Mr. Sturges' critics, a little jealous it may be of his great success with "Strictly Dishonorable," are saying that he was vastly helped with the pointing up and staging of that play by the Brock Pemberton and Antoinette Perry who produced it for him; that he was ready to disown his own play a week before it was presented because of certain changes in line and situation during rehearsals.

Which may easily be true. That is the experience of most young playwrights. And I am one who believes that they are as often right as wrong. As many fine play ideas have been ruined by ignorant producers and directors as have been saved, and there are few combinations as experienced and as intelligent as that of Pemberton-Perry.

Mr. Sturges, in the before referred to letter, has threatened to quit playwriting if he discovers that mediocrity is to be his common curse. But he never will and I shall be much surprised if he does not write many fine plays.

"Recapture" is expensively set and cast. The trick elevator is grand. Ann Andrews is the beautiful and muddled wife, Glenda Farrell the honest chorister and Melvyn Douglas the husband. Small parts are smartly spoken by Cissy Loftus and Hugh Sinclair.

Trivial Play Pleases.

It was Henry Blossom who wrote of women, in one of the most gratefully remembered of his lyrics, that "You never find two alike at any one time, and you never find one alike twice."

But Henry did not know his Spain. In one of those placid little family comedies the Quinerto brothers, Zerafin and Joachim, write so easily the women are at least all alike in being set on having their way. "The Women Have Their Way" is the title and the story is of a handsome young lawyer who comes from Madrid on a business errand to a sleepy Andalusian town. The women in this sector outnumber the men five to one, and the importance of getting a husband is quite serious. Immediately the young man arrives, the women of the village decide that he shall marry their prize beauty, Juanita Larosa.

The young man soon finds himself being tricked into frequent contacts with Juanita. The gossip of the town reaches his ears that he has actually proposed. He buys a local stamp and the news spreads from the postoffice that he is writing impassioned love notes. Now he is made aware of a rival's jealousy, and now he is accused by the girl's mother of having acted badly and being prepared to run from an obligation. At which point he discovers that Juanita really is fascinating and he does not want to run at all. Which is as the women planned it from the first.

Mitzi Hajos Returns.

Sixteen years ago Mitzi Hajos was just blossoming as a star. She had had three years of vaudeville and road success in America, having come from Budapest as a sort of "wonder child." She was really through with her teens and starting on her twenties when she became the star of "Sari," but she was not much larger than a half pint of cider and looked about 15 with her makeup on. A cute trick, as every one was agreed, and a growing moneymaker.

Last week Mitzi (she dropped the Hajos years back because she grew tired of listening to people try to pronounce it, and more tired of being called "Hay-jus") decorated a revival of "Sari" at the same Liberty theater in which she first played it.

She has broadened in sixteen years. And thickened a bit. But when she gets into those costumes that conceal the maturing lines of her figure she could still pass for twenty with her makeup on.

Being a wise little person she does not try to be too darned cute. Just cute enough to keep in character. And she was a great delight to that portion of her audience that has either come to love her for herself or because they were her countrymen.

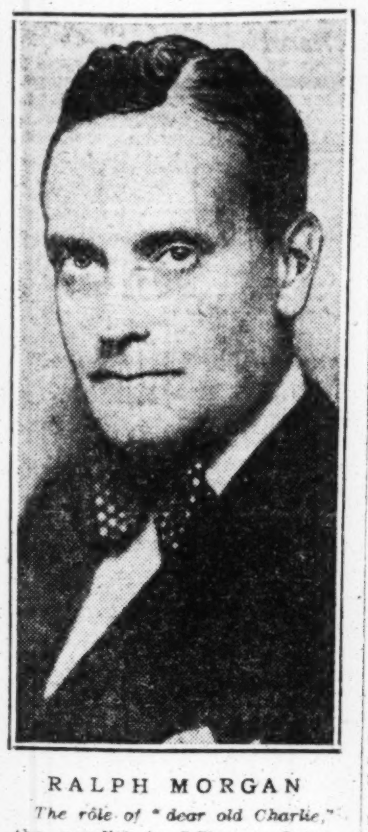
WITH GUILD



RALPH MORGAN

The rôle of "dear old Charlie," the novelist in "Strange Interlude" who is slightly negative in matters where ardent women are concerned, is now being played by Ralph Morgan, whose career dates back to "Turn to the Right." Tom Powers, who created the character, has gone east to participate in the Theater Guild's production of Shaw's new play, "The Apple Cart."

New in Manhattan

FRED STONE'S return to the stage after two years of lameness is the leading event of the New York stage for this week. There are seven openings on the first nighters' schedule—five plays, one musical comedy and one revue. Mrs. Fiske will lead the drama section in interest. One of the plays, "The Last Mile," follows the "Journey's End" idea, omitting actresses and love story.

Here are the playbills in brief outline:

"It's a Grand Life"—Tomorrow night at the Cort theater. Mrs. Fiske's second vehicle of the season, a comedy by Hatcher Hughes and Alan Williams. The star's supporting cast will include Cyril Scott, Andrew Lawlor Jr., and Germaine Giroux.

"Ritzy"—Tomorrow night at the Longacre theater. Ernest Truex, who came back to Broadway to play in "Many Waters" earlier in the season, will be starred in this comedy by a couple of player managers—Sidney Toler and Viva Tattersall. Miriam Hopkins will head the supporting company, which will also number Josephine Evans and J. H. Brewer.

"Ripples"—Tuesday night at the New Amsterdam theater. The first Broadway appearance since his airplane accident two summers ago of Fred Stone and by that token something of an event. Paula Stone will make her stage début with her father, and the company will further include Dorothy Stone, Mrs. Stone, Charles Collins, Andrew Tombes, and Eddie Foy Jr. Anthony McGuire fashioned the libretto of the show around the Rip Van Winkle legend.

"The Nine-Fifteen Revue"—Tuesday night at the George M. Cohan theater, introducing as a producer Ruth Selwyn, wife of Edgar. The revue is of the kind described as "intimate"; a long list of the better knowns is submitted as having written its sketches and composed its tunes; and Ruth Etting of the "blues" songs; Fred Keating of the Magic, and Harry McNaughton will be among those participating. The management maintains that the curtain will actually rise at 9:15, which in these days is almost the regulation hour.

"Topaze"—Wednesday night at the Music Box theater. A comedy, "satirical comedy," the announcements have it, by Marcel Pagnel, which has been successfully acted at Paris. The adaptation is by Benn W. Levy, an English playwright known over here.

"Joseph"—Wednesday night at the Liberty theater. George Jessel as the star of a comedy by Bertram Bloch, the one first called "P. S. He Got the Job," and later "Even in Egypt."

"The Last Mile"—Thursday night at the Sam H. Harris. A play which, they say, has to do with prisons. It will be acted by an entirely male cast in which Spencer Tracy, Ralph Theodore, Joseph Spurin-Callelia, and Hale Norcross will be more or less prominent.

Old Guard of Theater Stars Going Strong

Roundup of Rare Vets on Chicago Stage.

By Charles Collins.

be 60, but he isn't calling this his farewell tour. His quality is changeless; his form of entertainment cannot be placed in a "period"; and he just keeps rolling along—a peerless and hardy perennial Caledonian comedian.

The audiences that rally to the call of the pibroch in the Garrick this week will find no new words of praise for Harry Lauder, for even with fresh material he is the same chuckling, resonant Scot. This is about the twentieth time that he has zigzagged about the United States as a strolling player; and if he ever starts saying farewell he might keep at it as long as Patti did. There never has been, it seems, a theatrical figure who so completely, persistently, and happily represented the humor of his race.

Of Ancient Regime.

When "Your Uncle Dudley" appears at the Cort this evening, those few tragic nights of its debut here last spring, when Raymond Hitchcock was sickening for his death, will be recalled. The play was a success, and the veteran of many musical shows and revues was adding a new feather to his cap as a "straight" comedian; but George C. Tyler stood at the back of the house, his managerial brow furrowed with worry. "Hitchy may drop dead any minute," he muttered. That tragedy was averted, but the show closed and Mr. Hitchcock waited a few months before crossing the Great Divide.

Thomas W. Ross now has the rôle Mr. Hitchcock originated in the agony of his last illness. He, too, is of the Old Guard. And pairing with him in some of the best scenes, playing a diverting grandmother, is a veritable "last leaf" of the ancient régime—Mrs. Jacques Martin. Many people in the audience will ask who this gentle, amazingly expert old comedienne is, and what she has done. She is one of the finest actresses of old age now extant, and a record of the parts she has played would fill this column. She came from England, ripe in experience, to do her first American acting with Nazimova in 1906. Her appearances in Chicago, however, have been infrequent. She is another Mrs. Whiffen, and maybe, if some manager finds a new play with a perfectly delightful, gilt-elged grandmother as its central figure, she will end with a star on her dressing room door.

Age Cannot Wither.

These meditations, "Concerning Old Age in the Theater," run to the conclusion that there is nearly always a warm and cheerful place behind the footlights for the veterans. Their talents continue to glow through the period of senescence; and their past greatness hovers about them like an aura to attract new audiences. If their gift is waning, still there are always parts to be found. As long as dramatists keep on writing plays with elderly characters in them, the ageing actor need not worry about the passing of his occupation. The stage seems to have a graceful way of taking care of its own in this matter.

Recently a Young Thing in an audience, watching a star who was no longer a star play a part that wasn't the whole show, said sentimentally: "I'm sorry for him." To which the answer was:

"Why be sorry? He has had thirty or forty years of applause, and he's still getting it. He's had a rich, abundant career—including five or six wives. As long as he can walk out there on the stage and get a laugh he will be happy. If he knew that you were feeling sorry for him, he'd feel sorry for you."

There's a French proverb which runs, "O, if youth only knew—and if age were only able——" It means nothing in the theater; there the Old Guard is always able.

What of English Women?

Choosing the stage as a profession, American women make a much better showing than American men for the same reason that Englishmen make a much better showing than American men: women and Englishmen are better actors by nature.—George Jean Nathan in Judge.

Second Co-ed—What do you think the scrub team is for? I. B. G.

How a warm room and "B.O." (Body Odor) cost her another admirer

LAST NIGHT when they skated together in the park, she had seemed so attractive. But here in the close, warm room her charm completely vanished.

She felt his coolness. The same old story. Why did she always attract men—but never hold them? It had happened so often.

But not now! Today she makes friends and keeps them. For she discovered her fault and the simple way to correct it. Let her tell you how.

"I could have cried when my uncle, who is a physician, warned me in an indirect way about 'B.O.'—body odor. For I thought I had been so careful.

"But, as he explained, our pores are constantly giving off odor-causing waste—as much as a quart daily. We're so used to this familiar odor that we don't notice it in ourselves. But others do—especially in an overheated room with windows closed. And it always offends.

"So now I've adopted this simple precaution. I wash and bathe with Lifebuoy—and I love it! Lifebuoy makes me feel so gloriously fresh and clean—so safe. For its rich, creamy antiseptic lather purifies pores—banishes every trace of 'B.O.'"

New complexion beauty

Lifebuoy is a marvelous complexion soap. Its gentle searching lather clears away all impurities from the pores. Dull skins freshen. Complexions fairly glow with clear, healthy, radiant beauty. Its pleasant, extra-clean scent—that vanishes as you rinse—just tells you Lifebuoy purifies. Adopt Lifebuoy today.

THE QUESTIONNAIRE CRAZE - - - By Robert Benchley

Illustrations by John T. McCutcheon

Privacy No Longer Is Tolerated

By this time everybody is otherwise engaged, and the narrator has practically no one to listen to him.

PROFESSORS in our universities are getting awfully nosey of late. They are always asking questions or sending out questionnaires inquiring into your private life. I can remember the day when all that a professor was supposed to do was to mark "C minus" on students' examination papers and then go home to tea. Nowadays they seem to feel that they must know just how much we (outside the university) eat, what we do with our spare time, and how we like our eggs. I, for one, am inclined not to tell any more. I already have filled in enough stuff on questionnaires to get myself divorced or thrown into jail.

A particularly searching series of questions has just come from an upstate university trying to find out about my sleeping habits. The director of the psychological laboratory wants to know a lot of things which, if I were to give them out, would practically put me in the position of sleeping in John Wanamaker's window. I would have no more privacy than Irvin Cobb.

Nobody's Business.

The first question is a simple one: "How many hours do you sleep each night, on the average?"

Well, professor, that would be hard to say. I might add "and what's it to you?" but I suppose there must be some reason for wanting to know. I can't imagine any subject of less general interest than the number of hours I sleep each night on the average. No one has ever given a darn before, and I must say that I am rather touched at this sudden display of interest on the part of a stranger. Perhaps if I were to tell him that I hardly sleep at all he would come down and read to me.

By "incomplete" I mean those little starts out of a sound sleep.

But I would like to bet that the professor gets a raft of answers. If there is one thing that people like to talk about it is their sleeping habits. Just get a group started telling how much or how little they sleep each night and you will get a series of personal anecdotes which will put the most restless member of the party to sleep in no time.

The Darnedest Dreams.

"Well, it's a funny thing about me," one will say. "I get to bed, we'll say, at 11:30, and I go to sleep the minute my head hits the pillow and sleep right through until 7:30."

He will be interrupted at this point by some one who insists on having it known that the night before he heard the clock strike 2, 3, and 4. (People always seem to take a great deal of pride in having heard the clock strike 2, 3, and 4. You will seldom find one who admits having slept soundly all through the night. Just as a man will never admit that the suit he has on is new, so is he loath to confess that he is a good sleeper. I don't understand it, but, as I am getting pretty old now, I don't much care.)

You will be lucky if, in an experience meeting of this kind, you don't start some one off telling the dream he had a few nights ago.

"It was the darnedest thing," some one will say, as the rest pay no attention, but try to think up dreams they themselves have had recently, "it was the darnedest thing. I seemed to be in a sort of big hall, only it wasn't exactly a hall either; it was more of a rink or schoolhouse. It seemed that Harry was there and all of a sudden instead of Harry it was Lindbergh. Well, so we all were going to a football game or something and I had on my old gray suit, except that it had wheels on it——"

Dressing in a berth is a temporary form of arraying oneself.

By this time everybody is engaged in lighting cigarets or looking at newspapers or even talking to some one else in a low tone of voice, and the narrator of the dream has practically no one to listen to him except the unfortunate who happens to be sitting next. But he doesn't seem to care and goes right on, until he has finished. There is a polite murmur of "What had you been eating?" or "That certainly was a corker," and then some one else starts. The professor who sent this questionnaire will have to watch out for this sort of thing or he will be swamped.

The Morning After.

The whole list is just a temptation to garrulousness. Question No. 3, for example, is likely to get people started on an hour's personal disclosure. "Do you notice ill effects the day after sleeping on a train?" is the way it is worded.

Well, now take me for example. I'm glad you asked that, professor. I do notice ill effects the day after sleeping on a train. I notice, in the first place, that I haven't got my underthings buttoned correctly.

Dressing in a Pullman berth is, at best, a temporary form of arraying oneself, but if I happen to have to go right from the train to my engagement without going first to a hotel and doing the whole thing over again, I find, during the day, that I have buttoned the top button of my running drawers into the bottom buttonhole of my waistcoat and that one whole side of my shirt is clamped, by some mysterious process, half way up my back. This, as the day wears on, exerts a pull on the parts affected until there is grave danger of the whole body becoming twisted to the right, or left, as the case may be. This, in turn, leads to an awkward gait in walking and is likely to cause comment. Of course, if it is a strange town, people may think that you walk that way naturally and, out of politeness, say nothing about it, but among friends you are pretty sure to be accused of affectation or even worse.

An Object of Curiosity.

Another ill effect, professor, which I feel after having slept on a Pullman [leaving aside the inevitable cold in the head acquired from sleeping with a light brown blanket piled high on one hip] is the strange appearance I present when I take my hat off.

As I am usually the last man in the washroom, I am constantly being harried by the porter, who keeps coming to the door and telling me that the train is pulling out into the yards in three minutes. [It is always three minutes, never less and never, by any chance, more]. Now with this unpleasant threat hanging over me, I am in no state of mind to make my customary exquisite toilet. I brush my teeth and possibly shave one-half of my face, but almost invariably forget to brush my hair. It is all right going through the station with my hat on, but later in the day, when I come to my business appointments, I notice that I am the object of considerable curious attention from people who do not know me, owing to my hair standing on end during an entire conference or even a luncheon. It is usually laid to my being a writer and of an artistic temperament, but it doesn't help me in a business way.

Now you will see what you got yourself into by merely asking me that one question, professor. I could go on like this for hours, telling about the ill effects I feel the day after sleeping in a Pullman, but maybe you aren't interested any longer. I am afraid I have bored you already.

Question No. 4.

The next question, however, is likely to start me off again. "Do you usually sleep through the night without awakening?"

It is funny that you should have asked that. I was just about to tell you anyway. Some nights I do, and some nights I don't. I can't be any more explicit than that.

When my little boys were small, I really can't say that I did. Not that they meant to be mean about it, or did it deliberately, but, as I look back on it, it seems that there was always something. A glass of water was usually the ostensible excuse, but a great many times it turned out to be just a desire on their part to be chummy and have some one to cry with. I would say that, during the infancy of my bairn, my average was something like ten complete arisings from bed during the night and fifteen incomplete ones. By "incomplete" I mean those little starts out of a sound sleep, where one leg is thrust out from under the bed clothes while one waits to see if maybe the disturbance will not die down of its own accord.

These abortive arisings are really just as disturbing to the sleep as the complete ones, and should count as much in any scientific survey. [I do not want to convey the impression that I did all the hopping up during the night. The mother of the boys did her share, but it was a good two man job on which turns had to be taken. It also depended a lot on which one could the better simulate sleep at the time of the alarm.]

It All Depends.

Now that the boys are old enough to get up and get daddy water when he wants it, things are a little different, but I find that the amount of undisturbed sleep that I get in one night's rest is dependent on so many outside factors that it is almost impossible to make up any statistics on the subject. A great deal of it depends on the neighbors and how much fun they happen to be having. Then there is the question of what tunes I happen to have been hearing during the day. One good, monotonous tune firmly imbedded in my consciousness will make going to bed merely a mockery.

Two nights ago I retired early for a good rest [my first since 1921], but unfortunately spent seven out of my possible eight hours trying to get "What Is This Thing Called Love?" out of my mind. If I had only known some more of the words it wouldn't have been quite so bad, but one can't go on, hour after hour, mentally singing "What is this thing called love—what is this thing called love—what is this thing called love—what is this thing called love," without suffering some sort of nervous breakdown. It would have been much better for me to have been walking the streets than lying there in bed, plugging a song for nobody in particular.

All for Accuracy.

It is this sort of thing which makes it difficult to answer Question No. 4. One night I am one way; the next night I am another way.

The only means that I can think of for the professor to employ to get an accurate checkup on my sleeping habits would be for him to come down to my place and sleep on an army cot at the foot of my bed himself. He would have to bring his own blankets, though, as I have hardly enough for myself as it is.

Talkies Mount to High Notes and High Hats

Operettas Lift General Level of Cinema.

By Tom Pettey.

of beauty and talking pictures should eventually rival grand opera."

And that, Mr. Straus smiles, would be something, for no screen audience ever would listen to an "opera singer out of voice." And, by the way, to return to "The Rogue Song," as every one is doing: it is all in color photography and really beautiful.

Flaws Quickly Patched Up.

It looks as if your correspondent will have to scout around and find new jobs for the talkie technicians. As fast as he and the other 6,000 screen prodders find flaws somebody patches them up. Now that universal language problem is going to be fixed up, according to Frank B. Jewett, vice president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company. The transoceanic telephone, the talkies, and the radio make a universal language imperative, says Mr. Jewett. The big telephone man designates English as the world language and points to the way it is spreading.

Then along comes Jesse L. Lasky, first vice president of Paramount, with a solution to another of this column's proffered problems—foreign talkies.

The formation of a group of stock companies composed of artists from Spain, France, Germany, Italy, and other nations to permit the separate and perfect filming of talking pictures in various languages of the world is the solution of the problem of producing sound films for foreign countries, says Mr. Lasky, speaking from his Hollywood stronghold.

All right, Mr. Lasky, we will grant that Hollywood can solve the problem. Here is a new one to work on. Find something for the talkie comedies to replace the pie throwing contests of the Chaplin era. When young Mr. Talkie attempts to get funny he usually is a sad lad. This would be a good season for the talkie comedies to develop a technique for two reelers. The talkie industry needs laughs right now worse than it needs dialogue writers.

Eastern Jobs Scarce.

Theatrical folk around here are going to be eating one another before summer if they wait for jobs in eastern studios. New York's hope for a big production year has not been realized anywhere except in Paramount's Long Island studio and at Warner Brothers' plant in Brooklyn. The Pathe eastern schedule apparently went up in smoke when the Park avenue studio burned. The R. C. A. Gramercy studio, closed by edict after the Pathe fire, is reopening. The independents have moved across the Hudson to the Fort Lee studio—that is, all of them that have a large enough bank roll to flirt with dialogue.

Sounds like a dark season, except in spots, but the talkies move fast. One decision—and there is one pending—could set the trend eastward from Talkietown.

Here and There.

New York film fans are flimflammed. Broadway theaters are offering them their choice of the Rothstein theory or the Einstein theory. The Rothstein theory is expounded under the title of "The Street of Chance," while across the trolley tracks Mr. Einstein is making scientific whoopee.

ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

"STRICTLY DISHONORABLE" was a literary evening in the theater in New York last week. Armchair playgoers may read it, but the advice of this saddened soul is not to, if you are going to see it. After a swell first act, it fiddles. How it is the hit of New York you will have to figure out for yourself. Seeing a gal undress on the stage isn't enough of a novelty to explain it, and throwing around an assortment of what the ladies call "a teddy bear" [to quote the famous reply of a New York cop when he had to testify as to the habiliments of the human contents of a room he had raided], and turning a shower on in the next room and seeing a double bed on the stage are old changes rung on the dramatic cash register. But popular it is, and it will probably sweep Chicago into its arms, too. It opens tomorrow.

A revival of "The Chocolate Soldier" in Gotham impels me to turn armchair playgoers toward Shaw. "Arms and the Man," which is the book of "The Chocolate Soldier," isn't one of Shaw's greatest opi, but it is amusing, and so much better than most of the best of the so-called best today that is a boon. Get into Shaw again and read, after "Arms and the Man," the plays in "Plays, Pleasant and Unpleasant" as a starter, and you'll be sending me boxes of corona coronas in gratitude.

"General John Regan" is revived this week, too. It is, as a novel one of the delights from the pen of that screamingly funny Irish prelate, Canon Hannay, who chooses in his more secular literary moments to sign himself George A. Birmingham. After "General John Regan" read the other Irish yarns of the Canon and you'll make it a case of corona coronas.

PUBLISHED.

"Footlights Across America," by Kenneth MacGowan [Harcourt-Brace], is a survey of the present state of the Little theater movement in the United States and a history of amateur organizations. Nobody knows when theatrical amateurism began in America, the author says, but he offers as a start the Thalian Association of North Carolina, which started about 1800.

"It included in the list of its actors a governor of the state, a lawyer, a banker, a railroad man, a colonel, and five doctors, of whom one was 'a bold and brilliant operator' in the days before anesthetics. But the Thalians appear to have welcomed no women into their casts; they had a female impersonator who later on turned out to be a bishop."

There are interesting discussions of the first Little theater in Chicago of which Ellen Van Volkenburg and Maurice Browne, producer of "Journey's End," were directors, and of the current work of the Goodman theater, the Hull House Players, and the North Shore theater guild.

Film Is Great Because Its Story Is Honest

Time Worn Situations Absent, for Once.

By Mae Tinee.

Rubens, during her recent long illness from which, it is said, she has completely recovered. Doris Kenyon threw her career to the winds that she might accompany her husband, Milton Sills, east, while he struggled to master a nervous breakdown. To keep herself from worrying too much she went to work at singing and impersonating. Result—Charles Wagner persuaded her to appear at the Avon theater. Miss Kenyon gives a program of "lyric silhouettes." She portrays, among other characters, an idiot boy and an old cockney flower peddler. Her silhouettes call for songs in various languages—and these songs she renders beautifully, I have been told.

PHOTOPLAY tells this amusing baby story:

"Little Mildred Gloria Lloyd, Harold's daughter, and a little friend, Barbara, were discussing their birth places.

"'I was born in Olympia, Washington,' said Barbara.

"'I was born in Los Angeles,' said Mildred Gloria.

"'What state is that in?' asked Barbara.

"Mildred Gloria thought for a long time.

"'It's in the Lloyd estate.'"

ANIMALS in Hollywood are making a "howling success" of their movie work, according to an article in the "Talking Screen," which says that flappers with motion picture ambitions can go hungry waiting for extra work, but two hundred dogs of miscellaneous sizes, shapes and nationalities jauntily punched the time clock for several weeks during the making of a series of albarkie productions. . . .

"The regular salary for a super-animal is $35 a day. Lions, leopards, ladybugs, cats, chimpanzees, fleas, dogs, alligators, elephants, skunks, bears—all are ready to answer to studio calls. Paramount keeps a large cage of canaries on the grounds as part of its regular props. Camera-wise swans, ducks, geese, eagles, pigeons, cranes, red macaws, and dozens of other types of birds are also available. One famous Hollywood goose, Bozo, wears jaunty flannel suits and horn rimmed spectacles. There are about five camera-wise roosters in the film colony. The ravens used in "General Crack" were tied to bushes and cawed obediently at a silent signal from their trainer. There are half a dozen snakes ready to answer a casting office call."

Interesting? I thought so.

Old 'Hoss' Operas are Staging Vigorous Comeback Via Talkies

By Rosalind Shaffer.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Feb. 8.—Ken Maynard, the one western star who stayed with the horse opera during all the stressful times when producers were frowning on westerns and producing musical revues, has proved to be a wise one. The tide has reversed and now it is a poor studio that does not have a western company at work. Not a puny one, either, but a company headed by a big star. The talkies have adjusted themselves to the wide open spaces and the rush for boots and saddles is on.

Joan Crawford at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has just finished a western, "Montana Moon," with Johnny Mack Brown as her leading man. Lila Lee is making one at First National; Buddy Rogers is busy in another at Paramount; Bill Haines is scheduled for one at M-G-M; John Boles is making another entitled "Song of the Caballero," a romantic Mexican western picture; Ken Maynard is making "Songs of the Saddles"; Eddie Quillan, Pathe's comedian, is being starred for the first time in a western comedy entitled "Great Guns," and Wallace Fox is scheduled to direct fifty-two one reeler westerns for Pathe release to replace the one reel comedies formerly used.

George O'Brien is being pushed by Fox as a western star; he recently made one with Sue Carol as his leading lady. B-K-O has all the old time cowboys back in harness in the new Rod La Rocque vehicle, "Beau Bandit," directed by Lambert Hillyer, Bill Hart's old director.

Robert Montgomery, young Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer leading man who played in "So This Is College," remarked the other day, "I never go into a love scene with Anita Page that I don't have the feeling that the hand of Papa Pomares may descend on me at any moment."

Pomares is Anita's family name and Anita is certainly well looked after by both her parents in the matter of chaperoning.

The University Religious Conference, an organization of students and faculty at the University of California in Los Angeles, has chosen Cecil De Mille, the movie executive, as a member of its board in charge. Other members include laymen and churchmen of note who are leaders in Protestant, Jewish, and Roman Catholic congregations.

In the picture "The Gay Nineties" which is being filmed at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer the following six modern day beauties have been selected to take the places of the original Floradora sextet: Ilka Chase, Lenore Bushman (Francis X.'s daughter), Vivien Oakland, Marion Davies, Gladys Sykes, Patricia Carson.

Voice of the Fan

Gloria as a inger.

Dear Miss Tinée: Gloria Swanson as a singer! For "The Love of Sunya," who told "Sadie Thompson" that she could sing? That voice should have been canned with the $750,000 negative of "Queen Kelly."

And singers, with voices, are tramping the pavements.

JAMES MCINTOSH,
1018 Central avenue, Hot Springs, Ark.

MISS KATHERINE DRAKE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Drake, has been playing in the Junior League's "The Princess and the Goblins" on Saturday mornings, and was elected a member of the board of directors of the Service club at the annual meeting last Monday.

William and James Rawleigh, sons of Mr. and Mrs. James N. Rawleigh of Winnetka, have been sojourning at Nassau in the Bahamas with their parents.

Mrs. Sangston Hettler was re-elected second vice-president of the Service club.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Curtis went to Miami Beach, Fla., for a brief wedding trip following their marriage on Jan. 18.

Palm Beach Notables Attend Minneapolis Symphony Concert

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 8.—[Special.]—Chief among all topics of the tropics from Palm Beach this week is a word about the opening concert of the series sponsored annually by the Society of Arts. It was the high light of the social season to date. Society turned out en masse, and as Chicago society is playing a major rôle in Palm Beach affairs this season, there was more than just a touch of the Gold Coast in the diamond horseshoe at the concert of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, with Henri Verbrugghen, conductor, and Mme. Morgana of the Metropolitan opera, soloist.

Many private dinners preceded the concert, which was followed by an elaborate supper and reception at "El Mirasol," the estate of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury. Chicago people were seen in boxes at the concert and at the Stoesburys' afterward. Mr. and Mrs. William F. Bode of Chicago were guests in the private box of Mayor and Mrs. John Shepard Jr., having been their dinner guests before the party went to the theater. Mr. and Mrs. George Rasmussen had a large party, which included, besides their sons, Robert and George, Mrs. Charles Harrington Chadwick and Mrs. Jacob Baur.

Mr. and Mrs. George Alexander McKinlock were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Earle Perry Charlton at "Qui si Sana," going afterward to the concert. Others in the party were Mr. and Mrs. William H. Thayer, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Foster Carey, and Dr. and Mrs. Leonard Eggleston Cofer.

Concert Is First of Series.

Mr. and Mrs. Luke Mesker and many other Chicagoans were seen in the audience. This concert is but the first of a series to be given by the Society of Arts this season. Other musicals of note include the recital of Antoinette Halstead, young American contralto, at the Florida Embassy club this week; the annual concert of Bernardo Olshansky, noted Russian baritone, also at the Embassy club on the 19th; the series of chamber concerts by the New York String quartet at various homes in the winter colony, and the annual benefit show for the underprivileged children on the [illegible].

Then there was the opening lecture of the winter series of the current events class, when M. Paul Richard of France addressed an ultra-select audience at "Casamia," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Seligman. Many Chicago colonists here subscribed to the current events classic series. Several art exhibits opened during the week, which was otherwise crowded with many parties, dinners, teas, sports events of all kinds, and the usual busy life around resort, club and hotel—not to mention the municipal election, which elevated Mr. Shepard to the office of Mayor of America's wealthiest town.

If society needed other things to interest itself during the week, there was the divorce of William B. Leeds Jr. and his wife, the former Princess Xenia of Russia and a member of the Palm Beach house party of Otto H. Kahn; the suicide of Thomas E. Lannin, Rochester, N. Y., banker, and the marriage of Max Bambarger of New York and Palm Beach to Mrs. Joseph Moran, the former Adeline Stillwell of Red Bank, N. J.

Week Crowded with Parties.

Among the many entertainings of the week were the twilight tea and garden reception given by Mrs. Charles Curry Chase of Oshkosh, Wis., for her daughter, Mrs. R. B. Meredith of Chicago, and her house guest, Mrs. Richard B. Wood; the luncheon at The Breakers by Mr. and Mrs. Volney Foster of Chicago in honor of their daughter, Mrs. Condé Nast of New York; the several parties in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Urion Jr. of Chicago, and their Italian dinner in response to all these hospitalities; the luncheon party at the Breakers by Mrs. O. N. Tevander of Chicago in honor of Mrs. Roy Sharp; the tea given by Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Barkhausen in honor of their guests, Mr. and Mrs. John Leslie of Evanston, Ill.; the dinner party given at their new home by Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Fatio in honor of Miss Martha Wickwire of Chicago and Mrs. Martha Payne Cook of Oshkosh, Wis.; the tea given by Mrs. William F. Bode at the Everglades club, and many others.

Mrs. Robert R. McCormick of Chicago has left Palm Beach for Aiken, S. C., where she will visit with friends in the colony there and enjoy the polo season now open. Mrs. McCormick came up from her winter home in Miami Beach and spent the week at the Everglades club, where she did some entertaining, but for the most part she spent a quiet few days.

Will Visit McKinlocks.

Mrs. Harry Shearson of Chicago, daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Shearson of "Villa Flora," Palm Beach, will arrive on the 14th to visit Mr. and Mrs. George Alexander McKinlock, going later to be with the Shearsons.

Among Chicago arrivals in Palm Beach were Mrs. Henry H. Windsor and Miss Elizabeth Westbury, Mr. and Mrs. Gustave F. Fischer and Mrs. Adeline Grosser, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Williams, at the Breakers; Miss Junius Gardner and Miss Flora Gardner of Evanston, Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Robbins, Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Cavanaugh and children, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Schumann, John MacLachlan and M. Brady, at the Royal Poinciana; Mrs. C. C. Phillips, at the Ocean View; Richard Lawton and Robert Straus, Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Stoll, at the Ambassador.

New York Debs Take to Drama and Careers

By Nancy Randolph.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—Once upon a time any notable debutante or matron who turned an eager eye towards the stage as a career was certain that she would have to choose between her art and her social position. Going on the stage was as bad as being divorced.

But no longer. Not only do our young girls enter the theater as a career but society turns out en masse to do them honor.

All this week the Junior league has been proudly pointing out that Hope Williams, who opened in "Rebound" on Monday, is an honored member of the league. More than that, the league took the second two nights of the week as benefit performances for its famous Baby Shelter, and despite the pouring rain every one in town turned out.

The opening night, which wasn't a charitable affair, was well attended. Not only was Hope Williams in the cast but an additional social light in the play was Katherine Leslie, who made her debut—well—several winters ago. Kay, daughter of the Warren Leslies, is tall and languidly blonde. As a matter of fact, I somewhat surprisingly recall that most of the tall blonde debutantes of the last few winters have been languid in manner, speech, and matrimonial ambitions.

Society Out en Masse.

At any rate, Kay, who has a terrific following among the younger marrieds, made her theatrical debut in support of Hope Williams, and those who didn't cheer Hope, cheered Kay.

Mrs. Payne Whitney and her son Jock, were present, as well as Thomas W. Lamont, Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Belmont, Elizabeth Altemus, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, Raymond Guest, Sara Jane Sanford, Mrs. Charles Shipman Payson, and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Stralem.

On the midweek nights, when the Junior league took over the theater, the social atmosphere was even thicker. Shaking drops of rain from opera cloaks and wondering if their orchids would last until they reached the Embassy, were Mrs. Snowden H. Fahnestock, Mrs. Hamilton Fish Armstrong, Mrs. George F. Baker Jr., Mrs. Henry Rogers Benjamin, Mrs. James Lenox Banks Jr., Mrs. L. Havemeyer Butt,

Herman Gade, En Route to Paris, Entertained by Old Friends

By Mme. X.

A DELIGHTFUL ex-Chicagoan who had been sojourning in our midst until last Wednesday was Herman Gade. He sailed for France on Friday to rejoin his wife and daughter in Paris. It was in 1918 that the Gades left Chicago for Rio Janiero, where Mr. Gade was appointed by his government, Norway, to fill the post of ambassador to Brazil.

The going of this popular family left an unfillable gap in Chicago's social life. Whenever, since their departure, they have returned here to visit their old home, it has been made an occasion for much festivity, and this latest sojourn of Mr. Gade's has been especially gay. He was the house guest of the Howard Gillettes, and a round of dinners and luncheons was given in his honor, the high spot being reached at a banquet for him at the Racquet club ten days ago, when Kellogg Fairbank officiated as toastmaster and every one present in turn made a speech extolling the guest of honor. It was a heartstirring and memorable occasion.

Returns to Paris.

Mr. Gade will rejoin his wife and daughter in Paris and thence go to their château, Mesnil St. Denis, in the Seine and Oise district, an ancient and historic mansion where Molière wrote some of his famous plays and Mme. de Sevigné is said to have indited some of her equally famous letters. It is only a half hour's motor ride from the French capital, yet when one is there the sensation is as if he or she were back in the sixteenth century.

As seigneur of the château, certain observances and customs are expected from Mr. Gade which have been in force some 350 years. For one thing, on the day devoted to the memory of St. Denis he is supposed to give to the church a huge platter of "le pain de St. Denis" (the bread of St. Denis), which is carried up the aisle to the altar by two men servants of the château, with the proprietor walking behind, the platter being deposited on the altar to be used in administering the sacrament. Furthermore, a similar "brioche" is carried through the streets of the village to the ranking ecclesiastic of the commune, escorted by the proprietor.

The family occupying the château have a whole chapel devoted to them in which they sit during services. This chapel is at right angles to the main body of the church and is quite medieval in architecture and atmosphere. As these customs have been carried on for nearly four centuries, even the most heretic owner of the château would hesitate to break the chain of tradition and ceremonies. Mr. and Mrs. Gade are ready faithfully to carry them on.

Before the Gades bought it the château had been the property of a Chicago woman, Mrs. Baumann, so it was fitted up with those requirements without which no American is comfortable. These include plenty of bathrooms and a central heating plant, none of which are yet considered requisite by Europeans. It is a fine old place with that ineffable and indescribable air that not the cleverest American architect can impart to a mansion, no matter how expensive it may be. Only years and years of occupancy by generation after generation of cultured men and women can give this atmosphere.

Collecting His Belongings.

Mr. Gade has been collecting and sorting out books and furnishings from the store of their belongings which the Gades left here when they went to Brazil. They had a charming house in Lake Forest, a dwelling where the echoes of their hospitality still ring in the ears of those who partook of it in former days. It now belongs, I think, to Volney Foster, though he and his family have not occupied it for several years. Just how the accumulations of a domestic life in Chicago will fit into an old French château remains to be seen. Furniture expresses a civilization and history as much as do clothes, pictures, and all the rest of the paraphernalia of life.

Mrs. Gade's family (her father was the late Charles B. King) belonged to that period which took a prominent part in our civic life in the seventies and eighties of the last century. Their fine old brown stone house on Rush street still stands, a sad monument to another day. Like its neighbors, it is used for business purposes. On one side of it the immediate progenitors of the X. family lived many happy years, while on the other the William G. McCormicks brought up their large and lively brood of boys and girls. The only one of the latter family now left in Chicago is Chauncey McCormick, who, with his charming wife, is rearing their three fine boys here. His remaining four sisters and one brother have moved to other environments.

Father of Chicago Medicis.

During my recent sojourn near Miami, Fla., I saw William McCormick, the father of this branch of the Chicago Medics, at a luncheon which Mrs. Chauncey McCormick's mother, Mrs. Charles Deering, gave at her lovely Florida place fifteen miles south of Miami. William McCormick is on the threshold of his eighth decade, but carries his years with the same gallant and debonair manner with which in the old days he always seemed to take life. He spends his winters at his home near Coconut Grove in Florida, and goes abroad spring and autumn, while his summers glide pleasantly by at York Harbor, Me.

While I am on the subject of Florida I am going to give you a few of the lights on it I meant to last week, but did not because of a desire to make one last comment on the first season of Chicago's Civic opera company in its new home. Any one who might be curious as to the appearance of the earth in its infancy can get a pretty good idea of what much of it must have looked like by taking a boat trip in and among the countless waterways and bayous that largely compose the southern tip of Florida. There the solid ground is slowly and with enormous effort lifting itself up from the sea.

Out of the shallow waters it crawls by means of millions of mangroves, a miserable, unbeautiful tree growth whose roots, gaunt and sinuous, manage to exist and even to increase and draw to the trees life both animal and vegetable. No wonder prehistoric animal life went so much to produce reptiles, saurians whose descendants are alligators and crocodiles. Only such could live in such an environment. With the mind's eye one can see them today, crawling and climbing among those slimy roots and lodging under them in that impenetrable jungle.

The only sign of life there today, if the visitor goes early in the season (the right time to go), is an occasional fish leaping, either in an ecstasy of fear or joy, from the sluggishly tranquil waters, or the flight of some exquisitely graceful crane, pure white or gray-blue, disturbed by the intrusion of man, the all too well recognized enemy of nature. Off in the distance there may be a lone fisherman laying traps for lobsters and crabs or setting his lines for some of the delicious fish that swim about that tranquil sea. It means a real feast when the stone crab man offers his wares for sale. They are succulent crustaceans that delight to move slowly about in and out of the ocean.

An Escape from Noise.

To escape to this remote part of the country from the clamor of town is one of the most restoring processes I ever met. There in those utterly silent waters one is far from any contact with the rest of his kind. There is no post, no telegraph, no telephone, no wireless, no morning paper, no matutinal milkman, no nothing. For all the visitor knows the rest of the world may have gone entirely to pot and not an echo of it would penetrate there. It is delicious, this sense of inaccessibility. No wonder that it is the goal of the world weary business man and the sated society woman, both seeking something utterly different from anything they have had to direct and manage in the preceding months.

Today, however, Miami, the starting place for those who want to explore these southern waters, is an amazing spectacle, the focal point of much of America's unbelievable wealth, a place of brilliant colors and resounding clamor. When I was there a fortnight ago there were, according to official report, over 500 yachts in the several harbors that line the city's eastern sea front. They presented a spectacle of pleasure seeking wealth not to be matched anywhere else in the world today. In spite of the recent panic, they far outnumber the record of any previous year. The large yachts alone represented some $28,975,000 and the smaller yachts and houseboats, of which there were hundreds, must have cost as much more, they were so numerous and so smart in appearance.

I watched the Vanderbilt yacht (I've forgotten its name) come into port early one morning. With its two masts and big funnel it looked like an ocean liner as it crept around the distant point of south Miami Beach. The Astor yacht, the Nourmahal, was also in harbor. The Royal Palms docks, 5,000 feet in extent (nearly a mile) were almost full, and the other city and harbor docks were already well stocked with craft of all sorts of tonnage, while more lay out in the outer harbor unable to find a berth.

Where is that above mentioned panic of three months ago? Yet the people down there say that the usual swarm of northern visitors is not yet visible. Apparently yacht owners are not speculators.

MR. AND MRS OSCAR ONSRUD of 7355 North Seeley avenue announced the engagement of their daughter, Muriel, to James S. Robbins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy A. Robbins of Highland Park. Miss Onsrud is a senior at Northwestern university and a member of Delta Gamma sorority. Mr. Robbins is a graduate of the Michigan College of Mines in Houghton, Mich.

A Popular Game.

There's one game that started in 1920 and that goes on all the time down in Miami harbor. Four years ago, as I sat on the deck of a friend's yacht in the harbor there, a low cut craft rushed like lightning across our stern, looking black and sinister, no lights visible, none of the crew in sight. Behind came almost as fast another, bigger boat, lit up and apparently alert, for a couple of rifle shots, spurts of fire, came cutting the little waves and evidently were directed towards the fleeing boat.

"Rum runners and a government boat," said my host. The government boat stopped not far from us.

"Ah, engine trouble," said he, with a smile. The escaping craft disappeared in the dark. He explained that government boats often developed engine trouble just as the capture of the rum runners seemed probable. All night that government boat lay off our stern. I could see it from my port.

This time, as I sat on the same deck the first evening that we lay at anchor we saw another long, low cut, high powered boat scooting by, pursued by a larger one all lit up.

"Why don't they shoot?" I asked.

"It's been forbidden," I was told. "They shot so many people on shore that it couldn't be permitted." But still the game of rum-tag goes on. At half past four in an early, moonlit morning I saw another black, lightless boat, swift as a cannon ball, speed citywards past our anchored yacht to deliver a load of its forbidden goods. And wherever you go in Miami you see liquor a-plenty.

This keeps up until the end of the season, when the authorities descend and make well planned (and well announced) raids. One restaurant where we dined served cocktails, champagne, and other wines as freely as they pour drinking water at any Chicago hotel.

Al Smith and Mrs. Smith were there that evening in a gay party of people. Mrs. Smith danced to the excellent music provided and in a crowd so dense that the terpsichoreans couldn't do more than move slowly about, a solid mass of humanity, without rhythm or form. Mr. Smith did not dance, but seemed in high good humor.

He and his political manager, Mr. Raskob, have bought the vast hotel that was part of the debacle of that sorrowful disaster, Coral Gables, and are undertaking to make it once more a rendezvous for those seeking warmth and a fine climate. They bought it, it is said, for the price of the furnishings, which was just covered by the first mortgage. A big second mortgage was a dead loss. This is merely rumor, but is generally accepted as a fact down there.

No Sign of Hard Times.

One has to be told, however, that a financial storm had passed over the country only a few months ago. There is no evidence of it in southern Florida. The aspect of Miami is one of exceeding prosperity and gayety.

A visit to the Bath club, the community's most fashionable rendezvous, shows no sign of anything but plenty of money enormously enjoyed. Fred A. Poor of Chicago is president of this extremely picturesque institution. He showed the writer all over it, and a sumptuous place it is. The wide white coral sand beach is hemmed about with a double—no, triple—line of the prettiest bathhouses you ever saw. They call them by the Spanish word "canabas," which is more musical than our word. They are a riot of lively colors with their cushions, sofas, awnings and umbrellas all done in the most vivid and gorgeous cretonnes, with the lightning flash designs that are called "modern art." The brightest hued South American parrot would feel dowdy and colorless there.

A vast swimming pool on an upper level provides swimming and diving for those who do not feel inclined to try a dip in the more tumultuous ocean near by. Such gorgeously sun tan bodies as the bathers get would throw an African group of swimmers into the shade.

The bathing suits are of the scantiest cut imaginable. The women's costumes start as low down on their bosoms as possible and end just where their legs begin. Over this for luncheon they often don gay pajamas, festive and becoming. Luncheon is served out in an open space under the liveliest big umbrellas all atilt, with the white sand under one's feet casting up a white glow.

It is an excellent luncheon one gets there. It is furnished by the cuisine that runs our own Knollwood Golf club in the summer. It is served cafeteria style. You take a tray and pass 'round in front of a counter all set forth with delicious dishes to which you help yourself. The only trouble with this mode is that, as a rule, the would-be luncher's eyes are larger than his or her stomach.

From this open air feast you can watch the sea bathers rise from the pale green waves near by and come up on the beach for that sun bath which is even more important than the salt water one. And they do get dark there.

Sun Tan Addict.

The scene at a gay evening gathering that night at a fashionable restaurant just opened where all, or almost all, the women wore the new quite backless gowns, was unbelievably strange. One short haired blonde—but utterly blonde, my dear, with a peroxide last touch—had a back and shoulders of what a poetic darky would call "dat ar passionate brown," and to complete her effect wore a pale cream colored frock. It showed off her deep, deep tan in a startling manner. How must she and her compeers feel at the latest word from Paris, to wit, that sun tan is no longer fashionable? It is a safe bet that hers will not wear off for many and many a year.

Perhaps she may try the method employed by a Miamian dame, Mrs. Betty Taylor, who recently brought suit against a beauty specialist or doctor there, because he had ruined her hands by pouring a solution of carbolic acid on them in an attempt, at her request, to rid them of wrinkles. This has crippled and maimed the hands so that further use of them is impossible. The fingers are so drawn up and twisted by the corrosive as to be ruined for their ordinary service.

My word! Wouldn't you think that enough women had gotten into trouble with fake beauty specialists to protect their sisters from further mutilation? When I left Chicago the miserable young woman whose legs had been cut off in consequence of ignorant practice to eliminate bow legs was still asking for payment to recompense her for this lifelong disablement.

Deep Sea Fishing.

To return to the yachting element in Miami. The day I left there Eugene Pike, and his guests, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Pike, Mrs. William P. Martin, and Mrs. Lockwood Honoré, set forth on a yachting and fishing trip on the Lady Fish, a well known houseboat, which was well fitted out with small boats, tenders, and other equipment needed for deep sea fishing. This yacht is noted among the local craft for her many windows. No, they are not ports, they are real windows, which insures to those in the cabins aboard her plenty of air.

Such boats as this do not venture out into the ocean, but send their fishermen out in a high powered launch to fish for tarpon, barracuda, sail fish, king fish, and other finny monsters, including shark. These last named pirates of the deep are plentiful in most of the waters of southern Florida and are a favorite with fishermen because they put up quite a fight.

By the way, did you know that the shark was a mammal like the whale? I did not. Some one told me of seeing one that had been caught and left on a dock at Palm Beach over night. The next morning eighteen little sharks lay alongside this lady shark's belly. I think the whole family was dead; evidently the shock of being hooked had brought about the birth of the incipient little family.

Barracuda and sail fish are also dangerous to the fisherman, as are all species of the ray fish. A bite from the latter is very poisonous, so fishermen hastily cast them off their lines, even cutting the latter, if necessary. The exquisite Portuguese man of war, a filmy mass of black tentacles hanging from a lovely opalescent bulb, is also extremely poisonous.

But the tropics would not be half so fascinating as they are if there weren't many latent perils lurking in the animal and vegetable life that abounds in the territory between the tropic of Cancer and that of Capricorn. Who wants a safe tropics can best find it in a greenhouse or zoo.

Rumanians Are Visitors.

The presence here this week-end of a distinguished group of Rumanians recalls the visit here three years ago of Queen Marie of Rumania. This present body of travelers consists of his excellency, Carol Davilla, Rumanian minister to this country, and one of the most famous scholars of Rumania, Prof. Nicolae Iorga, the historian. The occasion for this visit is the celebration of the twentieth anniversary of the Nicolae Iorga Rumanian Fraternal society at Indiana Harbor, which will commemorate his birthday today, tomorrow, and Tuesday.

Prof. Iorga is by many considered one of the great scholars of the day, his specialty being Byzantine history. He is president of the University of Bucharest, and member of the French academy and of that of Rumania, and exchange professor of the Sorbonne in Paris. He is also prominent in the politics of his country, being president of the National party. He was first president of the chamber of deputies. He is likewise editor of the principal Rumanian newspaper and a writer of renown in his own and other countries. The Rumanian vice consul to Chicago, Corneliu Dimitriu, is entertaining the party, as is Mrs. Margaret Tagmose, who gives a tea for them tomorrow afternoon at her apartment on Dearborn street.

That energetic band of youth, the Junior league, is sponsoring a course of four lectures on finance, art, music, and travel. The second of them is to be given tomorrow at the Drake in the tower room, when Ralph Erskine will talk on how to distinguish genuine antiques from reproductions, a subject of great interest to many of our local collectors. The third lecture will be given March 17 by Eleanor Cook, who will give a program of folk songs in costume.

The last of the four lectures will be a talk by Ellery Walter entitled "The World on the Leg." This will be given in the Blackstone crystal ballroom. All of these lectures are open to the public.

These are given under the auspices of the Junior league committee on arts and interests. Every branch of the Junior league has such a committee. Chairman of the Chicago committee is Mrs. Wesley Dixon. Other officers on it are Mrs. Stephen Hord, Mrs. Stuart H. Otis, Miss Virginia Dixon, and Mrs. Louis Sudler.

MISS FRANCES BURLEY.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Burley of La Grange announce the engagement of their daughter, Frances, to D. J. Shirran, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Shirran of Sheldon Heights, Ill. The wedding will take place in June.

Hadassah Makes Plans for Annual Luncheon

Amount Raised Used to Benefit Palestine Jews

Much Illness and Poverty Alleviated.

By Roberta Nangle.

CONSIDER the amount of time, energy and persuasive "sales talk" necessary to induce 1,000 women to attend a luncheon at $50 per plate! It's a tremendous task, but it has been done and in all probability will be done again next month by the Chicago chapter of Hadassah, the Women's Zionist organization.

Hadassah is unique among those feminine organizations which specialize in the gathering of funds for philanthropic uses. The greater part of its work is concentrated on the rehabilitation of Palestine as a permanent home for Jews. It is a national organization composed of 296 chapters with 38,000 members and 257 junior groups totaling 10,000 members. The membership of the Chicago chapter numbers 3,000 women.

Reduces Infant Mortality.

Since its founding in 1912 by a small group of New York women, Hadassah's history has been a lively tale of the accomplishments of science in a region where illness and squalor formerly prevailed. A distressingly high infant mortality rate is now gratifyingly low due to infant welfare stations, pre-natal and post-natal clinics, obstetric service, medical inspection of children, and other health measures instituted by Hadassah.

The society maintains an admirable scientific system of medical and hygienic care for all elements of the population of Palestine. Its institutions and services include 4 hospitals and 5 dispensaries, 2 Straus health centers, the Clara Wachtel dental clinic, medical service in 50 rural districts, an X-ray institute, a nurses' training school, supported by junior Hadassah; school, pre-school and district nursing; a mental hygiene clinic, medical aid to immigrants, and a system of luncheons in 14 schools and 15 kindergartens.

Successful Record.

In addition to these phases of its work, the doctors and nurses of the organization have waged a successful campaign against diseases prevalent in the district, such as tuberculosis, smallpox, trachoma, typhoid and malaria. Linens and garments are supplied to Hadassah institutions and 25 others through the Palestine Women's organization. A rural school for children is maintained by Junior Hadassah and initial steps have been taken for affiliation with the Hebrew university.

The scope of Hadassah's work is being enlarged constantly and the wherewithal is provided by members in this country. From 1921 to 1929 nearly $3,500,000 was raised by the combined efforts of local chapters. At least $600,000 a year is necessary to expand the program of medical social service.

Luncheon Campaign Now On.

The annual luncheon is the largest effort of the Chicago chapter to swell its yearly quota. An intensive campaign to sell 1,000 reservations is now being carried on under the direction of district presidents. A tea will be given on Tuesday at the Congress hotel, with Rabbi Solomon Freehof as the speaker. The date for the luncheon will be set just as soon as a requisite number of reservations have been secured. Mrs. Harry Berkman, vice president, is in charge of arrangements.

The officers of Hadassah include Mrs. Pearl Franklin, president; Mrs. Benjamin Davis, honorary vice president; Mrs. Bertha Read, Mrs. Samuel Messinger, and Mrs. Berkman, vice presidents; Mrs. George Golinkin, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Moses B. Levin, recording secretary; Mrs. Harry Weil, financial secretary; Mrs. Aleck Bernstein, treasurer; Mrs. H. D. Brenner, treasurer of tithe; Mrs. A. E. Rubenstein, recorder of tithe.

Mrs. Harry M. Fisher is the district president of the north side; Mrs. Martin Maremont, south side; Mrs. William Weinberg, Lawndale; Mrs. Harry Schoolman, northwest; Mrs. John Peters, west suburban, and Miss Lillian Franklin, downtown.

MISS GENEVIEVE E. COGAN, chairman of the junior auxiliary of the Chicago Woman's Aid, is directing a revue, "The Annual Worry," to be presented by the juniors at the club meeting on Saturday in the Fine Arts building.

Mrs. Harry Berkman is general chairman of Hadassah's annual $50 plate luncheon to take place some time in March.

Mrs. Burt T. Wheeler, regent of the Gen. Henry Dearborn chapter of the D. A. R., will preside at the annual white breakfast on Wednesday at the Stevens hotel. The affair will commemorate the chapter's sixteenth anniversary and Lincoln's birthday.

CLUB ETHICS . . . . By Maude Swalm Evans

"YOU know, the more I work with Mrs. Millway the more I admire her," the committee chairman told the librarian as the two rode home together. "I think she's making a splendid president."

"I was for the other candidate, but I'm broad minded," answered the librarian. "I'm willing to give credit where credit's due."

"I was talking to her the other day about one of our members who has fallen down in her work," continued the committee chairman, "and I was quite free with my criticism. Mrs. Millway never said a word—just listened and let me talk. She didn't even nod her head in agreement, although the member in question has caused her considerable trouble."

"It would be a good thing if all presidents had that trait," voiced the librarian. "The president who discusses one member of her club with others is inviting trouble. There is always some merry little raindrop who sees to it that the member discussed is well informed."

"And yet, suppose one of the minor officers, or some chairman, isn't doing her work, the president should have the right to express her opinion," maintained the committee chairman.

"She has the right, but if she's wise she won't exercise it. She'll let the members find out for themselves just how their executives are serving them."

"Mrs. Millway does that, all right; and another thing she keeps to herself is her opinions on any questions that come up for the membership to decide," pointed out the committee chairman.

"A quality I certainly appreciate," returned the librarian. "You remember we had a president once who openly took sides with one group or another on club questions. There was a spirit of unrest in the club as long as she held office."

"Which should make us doubly grateful for a president like Mrs. Millway," persisted the committee chairman.

"Which I believe we all are," granted the librarian. "We can't help but respect her, and I'm sure we all feel she makes every effort possible to be fair."

Question.

"Has a chairman the right to make a motion?—A. K."

Reply.

No; all motions should be addressed to the chair. She couldn't very well address a motion to herself.

Culture Comes Sugar Coated to Social Elect

Teas, Lectures, Luncheons to Fill Week.

By Mildred Jaklon.

THERE is much cultural enlightenment to be imbibed these days in doses sugar coated with sociability. Lectures, musicals, exhibits, and the like are all rendered less pedagogic, while retaining their intellectual value, by virtue of being combined with luncheon or tea. The modern woman must be prepared to talk intelligently about any subject a potential dinner partner is interested in.

What better way is there to store up invaluable information for such emergencies than attending these pleasant gatherings sponsored by fashionable organizations? Besides learning the essentials of many an international question during the lecture proper one gleans fashion notes, the latest gossip, and countless more trivial enlightenments before or after the speaker has said his say.

At Casino This Afternoon.

This week's menu of "programs" includes the one the American Opera society is to give this afternoon at the Casino. Wesley La Violette and assisting artists are to present excerpts from Mr. La Violette's opera "Shylock." Admission is by membership cards for the 1929-'30 season, so there will probably be a rush to pay dues at the door.

Tomorrow the Arts club has an illustrated lecture by Thomas Munro on "Expressing the Machine Age in Painting and Sculpture" at 11:30 o'clock in the morning, so that lunching at the club afterward is convenient and sociable. The Friends of Opera are to hold their annual meeting at 3:30 o'clock at the Arts club with music and tea.

The Junior league's second lecture in the series arranged by the arts and interests committee will be given by Ralph Erskine on "Designing Furniture for the Modern Home" at 3:30 o'clock at the Drake hotel. In the evening Mrs. Waller Borden is turning over her house for a meeting whereat will be discussed the aims and purposes of the Open Road, a sort of glorified travel bureau idea for the promotion of European travel for students.

American Brings Playground Joys to Turkish Children

ANGORA.—(AP)—Children of the Turkish capital are sliding down their first shoot the shoots, splashing in their first wading pool and romping on their first public playground. They have reached this happy state through the efforts of an American, backed by the money and coöperation of the Turkish government.

The American is Asa K. Jennings of Winter Park, Fla. The success of his pioneer child welfare work in Smyrna four years ago led the Turkish government to ask him to create a model for similar work throughout Anatolia.

Play Supervised.

Assisting Mr. Jennings are W. T. Ganaway and Barent Burhans, both of New York. They are the first Americans, aside from legation officials, to bring their famillies to Turkey's isolated capital.

Besides supervising the play of the children, they are training Turkish men and women in the work. Ultimately these Turkish assistants will spread the gospel of supervised play throughout Anatolia.

The Angora project has an annual field budget of $40,000. Half of this was raised by Mr. Jennings with the help of the American Friends of Turkey, an informal group of benefactors formed by him in the United States. The other half came from the Turkish government which duplicated the donations, dollar for dollar.

Dental Clinic Added.

The success of the venture is beyond question. Some 500 children an hour swarm over the grounds, and take delight in swings, see-saws, and other devices to which the play-starved youngsters of this land of old oppressions but present new freedom have hitherto been strangers.

In addition to the playground, a dental clinic for children has been opened.

English Visitor Is Favorite in French Circles

By May Birkhead.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Feb. 8.—Much entertaining was done last week for a visitor from England, the marchioness of Huntley, a woman of American birth and the former Mrs. James MacDonald. It is to be remembered that about a year ago she brought the two little Meuser girls from Chicago to make their home with their aunt, Lady Huntley of England and Scotland.

The Huntleys usually visit here a few days at this time of the year before going to the Riviera where they are great favorites, especially the octogenarian, the marquess of Huntley, whose distinguished figure is as erect as a youth's of 20 and as sprightly in movement as an athlete. His friends visiting the Cote d'Azur recall three years ago that this Scottish chief gave a party, "the event of Cannes," in celebration of his eighty-first birthday.

Member of a Noted Clan.

Not many families, even in Scotland, can outdo that of the marquess of Huntley for historic interest. He descends from a bold highland breed north of Aberdeen, identified with stirring Caledonian annals. The Gordons descended from Sir Adam Gordon and they were made earls of Huntley not later than 1445. Their home in Aboyne in Aberdeenshire, which is often rented by some American tenant, is located a short distance from Macbeth's cairn. This Scottish estate offers each September a gathering of the highland clans with tartans and plaids, led by the marquess of Huntley, bearing the title of premier marquess of Scotland.

Lady Huntley's son by a former marriage, Arthur Bradley Campbell, gave a luncheon at the Ritz in honor of his mother, and the guests included several Americans who have married European titles, Princess Christian of Hesse, formerly Elizabeth Reid Rogers, and Princess Zurlo, daughter of Mrs. William Henshaw, being among them.

Ganna Walska Entertained.

Mrs. Livingston Fairbank is among the luncheon hostesses entertaining Ganna Walska who has just returned from Rome, traveling sixty hours in order to have one hour in the Italian capital for a talk with Premier Mussolini. This happens to be the second time this beautiful diva has interviewed the Italian premier, discussing music and women's rights.

Chicagoans are finding midwinter interesting here. Mr. John E. Cornell and his wife and daughter are stopping for several weeks at the Hotel Astoria, as is also Samuel Martin, who has been touring the battlefields.

Mrs. Howard Spaulding, with her son, Leicester, has been in St. Moritz during January. They have just returned to their Paris apartment and will remain here until spring.

The violinist, Albert Spaulding, has just arrived from Frankfort.

The daughter of Gordon Selfridge, Vicomtesse de Sibor, has just left with her husband, piloting her own plane for East Africa, where they have a farm and where they are going for big game shooting.

Gotham's Debs and Matrons Turn Eager Eyes to Stage

Harriman, Louise Iselin, Mrs. Horton Ijames, Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, Mrs. Shepard Krech, Mrs. Christopher La Farge, Mrs. Lewis Cass Ledyard, Mrs. Kenneth O'Brien, Mrs. William Church Osborn, Mrs. Moses Taylor Payne Jr., and, of course, the horde of young girls who just became provisional members of the Junior league.

Noted Yorkville Dance.

The next but last of the noted Yorkville dances was part of the week's program. A rather good program, incidentally, including, as it did, the third Junior assembly, the last of the after dinner dances and the Liberty ball—a comparatively newcomer.

The Yorkville bats are really ancient, since I remember going to one as far back as '23 or '24, which is frightfully aged these days. Having been shifted back to the main ballroom of the Ritz, the dance this week took on its old spirit.

Many dinners preceded the dance, and almost every one who wasn't too late with dinner went on to the Junior league benefit performance of "Rebound." Dinner hostesses included Mrs. Arthur Talbot, Mrs. J. T. Johnston Mali, Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Darlington, Mrs. Clarence G. Michalis, and Mrs. Joel Ellis Fisher.

Friday saw the junior assembly, also, of course, at the Ritz, with a receiving line that included such awe inspiring matrons as Mrs. Richard C. Colt, Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, Mrs. Walter Phelps Bliss, Mrs. James Gore King, and Mrs. Lyman Delano.

Debs at Liberty Ball.

No end of youngsters were in town, having had the time of their lives with prom week at Yale and the end of the winter semester. The girls, for once, had their best pair of stags in hand, and the fun was fast and furious. At 4 a. m., on Wednesday, the three notable breakfast places were all crowded. One had either to wait or else lope on hopefully to another possible place.

The Park Lane had quite a binge on Friday when the annual Liberty ball was given for the benefit of the memorial hall and club house of veterans of the 77th division, A. E. F.

Patronesses are never lacking at such festivities, but the labors of the debutantes quite put their elders to shame. Not only did the debutante committee sell tickets, programs, and the inevitable cigarets, but Frieda Schmidt and Gwendolyn Lewis, both Junior leaguers, actually perpetrated a tap dance. It could, I confess, have been worse, but then, nobody expects too much of our amateur performers.

Among the girls who helped make the dance a huge success were Mary Haskell, Mary Delafield, Ethel Bartlett, Olive Whitman, Lois Barstow, Edith K. Drexel, Natalie Wyckes, Marjorie Stoddard, Carmen Mumford, Elizabeth Boardman, Eugenia Morris, Rosalind Kress, and the pretty Wurzburg twins.

Furore Over Divorce.

Not in a veritable blue moon has there been so much fuss and furore over a divorce as over that of William E. Leeds and his former wife, Princess Xenia of Russia.

It isn't that divorces are anything new in this delightful town of ours. Far from it. Only Xenia did quite the unpardonable thing in suing for divorce in New York state and getting her decree from a justice of the State Supreme court.

We've had rather a fetish in the way of divorces. New York, you know, only recognizes infidelity as a ground for divorce, and society has ever frowned on any one admitting that crime.

Paris and Reno are the proper places for society notables to obtain their freedom—despite the fact that every one knows the easiest place to obtain marital freedom is right in town, since eight out of every ten divorce cases are the result of collusion, and even the justices know it, but can't do a thing. Society, however, couldn't countenance the thought, until along came Xenia and calmly took the easiest way.

Xenia Not a Mixer.

Talk! The town's been buzzing with it. Xenia left Palm Beach, where she had been staying at the Otto Kahn place at the top of Sunrise avenue, and is now hiding in town until the nine days due every wonder have passed.

As to all the stories of why she and Billy were divorced—most of them are sheer rot. They are simply unsuited temperamentally. Xenia never was a mixer—which has offended a lot of people—and she has no ambitions to shine socially. She leaves the social leadership to her friend, Helen Astor and to Helen's sister-in-law, Princess Obolensky.

Billy and Xenia are good friends, as much so as they can be, but Xenia certainly has stirred up a fuss by getting her freedom in New York.

Sister and co-worker of HELENA RUBINSTEIN, the world's greatest beauty specialist, will be in Chicago from February 10th to 15th inclusive.

From the Cliniques abroad Mlle. Rubinstein brings fascinating information which will help you to help yourself to a slim figure, a youthful contour, a flawless skin.

She will select the Rouge to tint your cheeks with the vibrant glow of youth, Powder to suit your type in just the shade to create that softly veiled illusion of beauty, Eye Makeup that makes your eyes so soft and beautiful that they welcome the merciless exposure of those new off-the-face hats.

Come to the Salon this week. If you have not the time for one of the famous HELENA RUBINSTEIN treatments, come anyway and meet Mlle. Rubinstein. Regardless of where you buy your beauty preparations, Mlle. Rubinstein will be glad to give you valuable information and personal instructions on Home Beauty Care. When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha F. Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York:

Chicago, June 18, 1865.

DEAR FRIEND JULIA:

I have been helping with the Sanitary Fair, which has been held here for over two weeks, and I have been so busy I haven't had time to reply to your letter. How I wish you could have been in Chicago during this great event! It is an assured success financially and in every other way, for the crowds and enthusiasm are tremendous.

Although the war is over, the money is needed to aid ex-soldiers who are out of employment and those who need help in securing pensions, besides assisting widows and orphans of soldiers.

I must tell you of some of the interesting exhibits. A center of attraction is "Old Abe," the eagle which was carried all through the war by the 8th Wisconsin regiment. He seems to have borne a charmed life and the soldiers believe the bullet was never cast that could harm him. He was carried well to the front in every battle and seemed to enjoy the sight and sound of the carnage. "Old Abe" has made $16,000 at the fair. Photographs of him were sold by the tens of thousands and feathers brought good prices. The sculptor, Volk, is making a model of this celebrated bird.

There are two handsome portraits of Lincoln done in shell work. Another interesting contribution is a doll, sent to the fair by little Minnie Judd, daughter of the Norman B. Judds, who are now in Berlin.

Connected with the exhibition, though not housed in the same building, is the interesting painting by Carpenter, representing Lincoln and his cabinet in council over the emancipation proclamation. The painting was executed in the White House, where the artist was able to study all the men he was portraying. It is a wonderful picture.

At the corner of Randolph street and Wabash avenue there has been put up a log cabin, built by President Lincoln in his rail splitting days. John and Dennis Hanks have brought it here and are exhibiting it, giving some of their stories of Lincoln. Gov. Oglesby has written them a nice letter of encouragement about it.

We saw Gen. Sherman enter the hall the first week of the fair and heard him make a nice little speech, telling his audience that they must now bend their energies toward conciliating the defeated foe; to building up instead of destroying; toward respecting others' prejudices, and so forth. People followed him about the hall until it must have been very annoying. He patronized the Healy girls' booth, for their father, G. P. A. Healy, the artist, is a great friend of his. He gave them some buttons from his coat to sell, and these brought fine prices.

The great event of the fair, however, was the arrival of Gen. Grant. Thousands of people poured into town that day and the streets were thronged. On his arrival at the station, he was escorted to the north entrance, where was awaiting him his famous war horse, Jack, which has carried him through so many battles and which he has donated to be sold at the fair. He immediately mounted the horse and was greeted by a roar of cheers when he was seen. Mrs. Grant came a little later.

When he entered the fair building Gen. Hooker introduced him and every one expected a speech, but much to our disappointment Gen. Grant only said: "Gentlemen and ladies: I never made a speech myself, and therefore I will ask ex-Gov. Yates to convey to you the thanks I should fail to express."

Great laughter and applause greeted this short speech. Then Sherman was called for. He said: "I am here as a mere listener, always ready, always willing, always proud to back my old and beloved commander-in-chief. I will do anything he asks me to do. I know he will not ask me to make a speech." Gen. Grant replied: "I never ask a soldier to do anything I cannot do myself," and amid the laughter which followed the two old comrades-in-arms withdrew.

Mrs. John Tyrrell, a friend of ours, has had a great deal to do with the success of the fair. She has been on the general committee and I have seen much of her in consequence. She told me a funny story today about her little daughter. Mr. Tyrrell is one of the governors of Camp Douglas, and so is often out there on some errand or other. The other day he took this little girl out with him when he drove to camp in his buggy. Seeing a group of men approaching at some distance, he said to her: "You have often asked me to show you a rebel. There is one—the man in gray uniform walking between the two men in blue uniforms."

"Why, father," said the child, "that can't be one. He has only one head." She had evidently heard some perfervid orator describing the hydra-headed monster of slavery and envisioned the confederate soldiers as strange creatures with many heads.

Mrs. Tyrrell is a sister of the Burley brothers, so well known here, and of Stephen F. Gale. The Tyrrels live on Michigan avenue between Madison and Washington streets, so they are quite near the fair building, which is built on Dearborn park, but I have quite a distance to come from the north side and often I am very tired when the day is over. But the fair will soon be at an end.

Among other ladies who have thrown themselves heart and soul into the success of this great event are, first, of course, our dear Mrs. Hoge, who, with her friend, Mrs. Livermore, really conceived the project; Mrs. Joseph Medill, Mrs. E. S. Wadsworth, Mrs. Jerome Beecher, Mrs. W. E. Doggett, Mrs. E. W. Blatchford, Mrs. John Mason Loomis, and Mrs. J. K. Botsford.

The net proceeds of the fair will be about four hundred thousand dollars, they say.

Do come out and see Chicago. Will thinks we shall grow even more rapidly than ever, now that the war is over and building can be resumed.

With love,

Your old friend,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Footnotes.

Mrs. Rossiter of Lake Forest is a niece of Mrs. Norman B. Judd, wife of the Chicagoan who nominated Lincoln in 1860 and who was later minister to Prussia.

Mme. Bigot and Mrs. Lysander Hill are two of the "Healy girls" who sold Sherman's buttons at the Sanitary Fair.

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Tyrrell, the child who drove to Camp Douglas with her father, is now Mrs. Bronson Peck of 25 E. Walton place. Mrs. Peck continues the traditions of helpfulness which have always characterized her family and devotes most of her time to Fellowship house on the southwest side.

Most of the women who are named as active helpers in the work of the fair have already been mentioned in this column. Mrs. Jerome Beecher was a sister of Mrs. Silas B. Cobb, and the Beecher name is perpetuated in a University of Chicago building, as well as in many other gifts to the city. In her old age Mrs. Beecher was a counterpart of Queen Victoria and was a most picturesque figure as she drove out in her carriage.

"Old Abe," the eagle so treasured by the state of Wisconsin, perished in a fire which destroyed the statehouse at Madison in 1881. He died by suffocation and not a feather was injured. His body was stuffed and thus his semblance was preserved until 1904, when fire again visited the statehouse. This time his body was consumed, so that no vestige remains of the historic bird which had received the homage of the soldiers and had done so much for them.

Trying to Collect.

There is a tale of an actor who was owed wages by the management of a New York play and who feared that the play might suddenly be shot from under him. Accordingly, he fared forth and purchased a diamond ring, giving instructions that it should be sent C. O. D. to the box office of his theater. The story further has it that the box office man duly paid for the ring and handed it over to the actor. But if you believe it you don't know the box office men.

Etiquette for the Traveler

By Helen Bartlett.

ORIGINAL ventures into anything are the hardest, and we know of nothing harder to put across with aplomb than one's first attempt at globe trotting. The inexperienced look with awe and admiration at those who walk about the high places of the world and wonder how they do it.

The discomfort some people feel in public places may seem laughable to the cosmopolite but to the inexperienced it is painful indeed. Of course, nothing helps like actual experience, but these few pointers are set down in the hope that they will be helpful to those who are planning long trips for the first time, and who wish to be less ill at ease as they travel the highways and the by-ways.

For women, the first consideration seems to be dress. "What shall I wear on a cross country train journey?" "What clothes shall I procure for an ocean voyage?" are two questions with which this column must often deal. The answer: In general, dress unobtrusively in tailored fashion suited to the season. In particular: For a train journey wear a suit or a frock of a material that will not wrinkle or soil easily; wear walking shoes and tailored hat. If your journey is to be long, a suit with which you may wear fresh blouses each day will prevent that blowsy, disorderly feeling as you hop off the train.

Dress on Board Ship.

Sports clothes reign supreme on board ship for daytime wear. In the evening dinner dress, NOT evening dress, is worn. Men wear dinner jackets in the evening, business clothes during the day. Knickers are not worn on board ship.

After the all important question of dress the traveler to be usually worries about what might be termed mechanical details. Like every other phase of life travel has its own routine, minor rules and regulations which may make a journey pleasant to oneself and to fellow travelers.

One of the first rules for the traveler should be absolute composure. The fussy scrambling so frequently seen is utterly unnecessary. In the first place, the danger of getting lost, of losing a bag, of missing a train, or being beset by evildoers is infinitesimal, if not nonexistent. Time tables, regardless of the vaudeville jokes, are reasonably clear to one who can read and put two and two together. Red caps simply abound in most railway stations and one's luggage in their care is safe and sure of delivery. Then there is the Traveler's Aid representative who may be approached with any sort of a problem—from finding a suitable hotel to tracing a lost handkerchief. And always there are railroad officials, well informed, courteous, who are glad to guide the traveler in any matter concerning transportation and baggage.

Make Reservations in Advance.

The intelligent traveler makes his reservations in advance, but if he must wait until the last minute he takes what accommodations he can get. He waits quietly in the station, gets a porter to take care of his bag, and when conducted to his section adjusts himself for a comfortable ride. Heavy baggage is checked through to the final destination—on the train one has as little as necessary.

For the day journey of any length the "chair car" is most comfortable; here one can have a large chair in reasonable privacy. When buying a ticket, reserve a chair. The ticket seller will give you a space receipt bearing the number of the car and the seat in the car. Give these to the porter; he'll see that your bags are put in place and will make you comfortable.

On longer journeys it is necessary to reserve a berth. Tickets for these, as in the case of a Pullman seat, are bought separately. A Pullman seat or berth may be reserved in advance and paid for when the ticket is bought. A lower berth is considered the most desirable.

Be Considerate of Others.

In a handbag the traveler carries all the necessary toilet articles—and a dressing gown that covers one completely and does not look too boudoirish. Dressing is partially completed in the berth and finished in the dressing room—which may or may not be a pleasant process. Well bred persons as companions are always easy to bear, but ignorant and thoughtless ones instill murderous broodings—particularly in that dark hour before coffee.

Mirrors and space are at a premium in the Pullman dressing room, therefore one should dress quickly and neatly. The traveler who strews his or her belongings all over the place, who leaves the wash bowl grimy and splashed, who uses towels with untidy abandon and dawdles unreasonably in dressing, makes fellow travelers suffer acutely.

On trains when traffic is heavy enough dining coaches are attached. The experienced traveler goes in a little early or waits until the rush is over, because at regular meal hours on a well filled train there is bound to be a crush.

Don't Linger Over Meals.

Dining car etiquette is exactly like hotel dining room etiquette. Women wear their hats. The only difference lies in the fact that it is inexcusable to linger over a meal in a diner. With many persons to be served and serving facilities considerably hampered, one should be courteous enough to wait uncomplainingly to be served, and when served, to dine with reasonable speed and depart. If you wish to smoke, one cigar or cigaret is permissible—if the steward does not object—but dawdling is in bad taste.

The general etiquette rules for traveling are those general rules under any circumstances. One should be inconspicuous, quiet in dress and conduct, reserved and careful about annoying others in any way. One should not hold forth about one's personal affairs nor discuss other passengers nor make the terrible mistake of believing that to be civil is to be servile.

Church Survey Campaign Is Well Under Way

Six Points of Interest Result.

By the Rev. John Evans.

THE REV. ALMER PENNEWELL, pastor of the Ravenswood Methodist Episcopal church an active leader in the Greater Chicago visitation evangelism campaign, which is now completing the preliminary survey, points out some interesting results from his experience in the canvass. The Rev. Mr. Pennewell states that denominational unity is the outstanding feature of the work.

Six other points of interest have resulted. Next to the inner development of denominational unity the Rev. Mr. Pennewell cites the splendid courtesy of the members of the Roman Catholic church when approached by the canvassers. The campaign provides that all survey cards from Roman Catholic people called on by the canvassers will be placed in the hands of Catholic leaders.

On the other hand, the large number of people not affiliated with any church, in addition to indifference to the work of the canvassers, are often openly antagonistic. The fact that many families are widely divided in church affiliations presents an increasing problem, as does the fact that overcrowded living conditions are having an acute influence on the religious expressions of great numbers of people.

One positive result of the canvass, according to the Rev. Mr. Pennewell, is the discovery of a very large number of lonely and needy people. Canvassers report that their visits in many homes bring out pathetic human problems in which the churches may aid toward solution.

Over 90 per cent of the people of Chicago have a religious preference, according to a report by the Rev. Dr. Joshua Oden on the results of the first week of religious canvassing in connection with the Greater Chicago visitation campaign before the Chicago Church federation.

The percentage of churchgoers in Chicago, using the 250,000 already interviewed as a basis for comparison, is higher than any other large city in the country, 50 per cent of those questioned being church members. The reason that the others express a preference, but belong to no church, is that they belonged to a church before they moved to Chicago, but have failed to affiliate in the city. Most of these are expected to join their church during the actual visitation.

The direct leadership of the tournament has been in the hands of Mrs. Lydia Glover Deseo, Miss Nellie C. Wiley, Prof. Fred Eastman, Mrs. A. Starr Best, and the Rev. E. A. Reese. The four winners of the semi-finals are, "The Terrible Meek," presented by the First Congregational church, Oak Park; "The Rock," by the Austin Boulevard Christian church; "The Valiant," by the Pilgrim Congregational church, Evanston, and "The Bishop's Candlesticks," by the Episcopal Church of the Advent.

These four plays will compete tomorrow night in the finals at the Goodman theater.

The Rev. Charles E. Williams, rector of St. George's Episcopal church, Grand Crossing, will be the preacher this morning at the Cathedral shelter, Washington and Peoria streets. This was announced by the Rev. David E. Gibson.

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of Free Synagogue, New York, will speak this morning at Sinai congregation, 4600 South Park way. Rabbi Louis L. Mann will speak in New York.

Judge Marcus Kavanagh will speak before the men's clubs of Sinai temple, 4622 South Park way, Wednesday evening on the subject, "The Criminal and His Allies, or If Lincoln Lived Today."

Today will be widely observed as race relations Sunday, if the recommendation of the federal council of the churches of Christ in America is followed. The day has been designated by the church council as an occasion for furthering understanding and coöperation between the various racial groups of the country.

This year marks the eighth annual observance of this day of special interracial emphasis in the churches. According to a statement made by Dr. George E. Haynes, executive secretary of the federal council's commission on race relations, this annual observance is gaining a recognized place in the programs of an increasing number of churches every year. In announcing the plans for the day, Dr. Haynes said, "The idea that at least on one day people of different races should meet in churches and other places on the basis of friendliness and good will has already borne rich fruit. The members of the different racial groups have been helped to discover how much they have in common and as a result have been stimulated to join in coöperative service for the welfare of the whole community."

Trinity Lutheran church, Laramie avenue and Hirsch street, will observe the fifth anniversary today of the new chapel and parsonage. The Rev. Carl H. Rembold, pastor, reports that Trinity church has passed the 500 mark in church membership and states that another unit of the ultimate church plant is now in prospect.

The men's club of the North Shore congregation, Glencoe, announces that Dean Charles W. Gilkey of the Chicago university chapel will speak before the organization on Feb. 19.

E. T. English, honorary secretary of the London Christian Endeavor union, will speak before the Christian Endeavor alumni fellowships Monday evening, Feb. 24, at the Harriet Hammong McCormick Memorial building, 1001 N. Dearborn street. This was announced by the Rev. E. L. Reiner, secretary of the fellowship.

"Other class Sunday" will be observed by the Wesleyan Bible class of the Olivet Methodist Episcopal church, W. Adams street and S. Keeler avenue, this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Fifty classes have been invited to attend and an attendance of 850 is expected. Last year the attendance was 665.

Chicago Artists' Show at Institute

Paintings Lean to the Academic and Pleasant

Key Picture Strikes the Wrong Note.

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE current exhibition by artists of Chicago and vicinity at the Art institute is much in the position of a person who has fallen between two stools chiefly, it seems to me, because the key picture is so absolutely wrong. One can say that there is no key picture by intention, but purposely or not, the "A Girl in Red" by Edmund Giesbert, which catches the eye as soon as one enters the east wing, gives a certain color to the whole exhibit and you unconsciously murmur to yourself, "O, it's that kind of a show, is it?"

Of all the irritating, ineffectual, awkward, badly drawn, and poorly colored paintings in the whole of Chicago, possibly at this moment few could be more insipidly antagonistic than this "A Girl in Red." Whoever had charge of the hanging of the paintings should be cut, drawn, and slaughtered for giving it the important position it has. Besides its intrinsic clumsiness, it gives the lie to the real quality the exhibit possesses. It looks as though it were hung there as a sop to the feelings of those modernists whose pictures were rejected. And if that is the case, it is a very poor sop. It lets down the conservative element and does nothing to better the condition of the radicals.

Two further galleries are necessary before one's frame of mind is readjusted from the unfortunate impression made upon it at the entrance to the rooms. And then, when you go to leave, a last glance gives you again a more vivid impression of the sly and simpering lady with her ugly arms, and malformed legs, and unpleasing frock, and background, and you go out saying, "So, it IS that kind of an exhibit, is it? Too bad the standards are not higher."

Academic and Conventional.

This is unfortunate, extremely unfortunate. The Art institute authorities should have learned by now that it is impossible to please both sides in any controversy, and it is the more impossible when you do not stand firmly by your own set convictions. The American exhibit in the fall was principally a modernistic affair; so much discussion was aroused that the policy of the institute suffered a severe check and the plan was put forth to regain any ground that might have been lost in public favor by making and as a whole is an academic, conservative affair. A competent jury was invited and the paintings were honestly and sanely judged.

There is room enough in the east wing galleries to display "A Girl in Red;" she is not absolutely barred from a place on the walls because of her quite certain disqualification from the society of those who admire craftsmanship, but she is totally out of place as the key painting to the show. I repeat it: It is not that kind of a show. The exhibition on the whole and as a whole is an academac, conventional, conservative and pleasant affair. If genius does not boil, at least mediocrity does not simmer.

Closing one's eyes to the unfortunately misplaced female, who could so easily have been gently persuaded to take up quarters with Ivan Le Lorraine Albright's "Dreams of the Past" and "Woman" [indeed, she would have fitted in the coziest way between these two exponents of gray, pneumatic flesh], one can find a great many gorgeous canvases scattered throughout the gallery. There are a number of fine landscapes and a number of delightful still lifes. There are several excellent portraits. There is enough good painting to make the exhibit of lasting memory if it were not for that haunting atmosphere of slipping, slipping between two stools, the consequence of the introductory "A Girl in Red."

Many Fine Paintings.

Edmund Giesbert, himself [the creator of the "Girl"], has one of the finest and most human paintings in the exhibit in his "Earth," a huge canvas in which the background of untilled field stretches away into eternity and the mild-eyed oxen have eternity in their ruminative gaze and the peasant and his wife have all eternity, that which is ahead and that which is behind, between their calloused palms.

"Maid of Palaska," by Thomas Witten Jr., on the side wall of the first gallery, would have set fewer bells ringing as the introductory note than does the "Girl in Red." "Maid of Palaska" is in minor keys, a little timid, a trifle wooden, comfortably simple and pleasantly sane. The portrait of Dr. Cary by Leopold Seyffert is a great likeness and would have struck a resonant chord in many a breast. "The New Book," by Pauline Palmer, would have touched exactly the right note, would have made friendly enemies even of the modernists, for it illustrates exquisitely the spirit in which the jury worked.

Dropping the incident of introduction, there are many paintings to which, for lack of space, only a passing reference can now be made. William S. Schwartz is one of the contributors whose touch is purely personal and whose work is fired by a turbulent strength. His "Still Life" is excellent and the portrait of "Glicenstein" dynamic. Louis Grell captures the imagination with his large symbolic painting, "Destiny." A serpent ascends to heaven and in his climbing coils are caught old age and youth, maturity and infancy; flaming adolescence given impetus by age seems to come the nearest to reaching the burning stars.

Landscapes and Figure Painting.

Frank J. Gavencky shows a splendid winter landscape in "After the Snow Storm"; Oskar Gross has a capital humorous portrait in his "Comedian"; Edith Boynton offers two delicately and beautifully carved wood plaques, "Spectators at Dance" and "Watching the Dance"; the cool and self-sufficient little "Plant" by Edward Mathews is one of the most delightful canvases in the exhibit; "The Red Barn" by Carl R. Krafft is colorful and exciting, while his larger figure paintings, "Twilight" and "Prelude," are a little stolid in spite of their beauty and careful painting.

"On the Sun Camp Trail, St. Mary's Lake," by Adolph Heinze; "Autumnal Tapestry," by Holger W. Jensen; "Autumn Snow," by John Spelman, and "Passing Storm, the Sierras," by Charles P. Killgore, are magnificent canvases. The "Romance," by Leo Marzolo, is very lovely and so, too, is Edward Grigware's "Be It Ever So Humble."

Prize Awards.

The prize awards are less open to disagreement than they have been in several preceding exhibitions. The Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal with $750 for purchase or as a prize went to the wooden and little inspired "Sleep," by Davenport Griffen; this type of modernist painting is more in the mood of practice exercise than spiritual revelation. The Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan prize of $500 went to "West Van Buren Street," by Marshall D. Smith, one of the finest canvases in the exhibit and to which his "A. B. M." is a close second; the Fine Arts building purchase prize of $500 was divided between the amusing "Suburban Garden," by Charles Edward Mullins [$325], and "Yellow Symphony," by Cora Bliss Taylor [$175].

"Mother and Child," by Roy H. Collins, was awarded the Mr. and Mrs. Jule F. Brower prize of $300. Ruth Sherwood was awarded the John C. Shaffer prize of $300 for a portrait for her relief of "Dean Shailer Mathews." "The Constable," by Thomas Witten Jr., won the Joseph N. Eisendrath prize of $200. William S. Schwartz was given the John C. Shaffer prize of $200 for his "Glicenstein." "Destiny," by Louis Grell, was given the Harry A. Frank prize of $150 for a figure composition.

The Clyde M. Carr prize of $100 went to "After the Snow Storm," by Frank J. Gavencky; the Chicago Woman's Aid prize of $100 to a Chicago woman student went very justly to Lenore Smith Jerrems for "Piano Top," one of the most beautifully composed and painted still lifes in the gallery.

The Englewood Woman's club prize of $100 was given to "Portrait of a Young Lady," by Walter B. Adams; the Julia Knapp Memorial prize of $100 to a young Chicago artist of exceptional promise went to A. Melvin Phillips for "A Portrait." The Municipal Art league prize of $100 for portraiture in any medium was given to "Mother and Child," by Ernest S. Klempner; the Mrs. John C. Shaffer prize of $100 for an ideal conception in sculpture was awarded to Edith Boynton for her fascinating "Watching the Dance"; the Robert Rice Jenkins prize of $50 offered by Mrs. George Raymond Jenkins went to "Still Life," by Gregory Prusheck.

Fine Exhibit of Etchings.

The annual exhibition of etchings under the auspices of the Chicago Society of Etchers is again a very fine exhibit. There are etchings of many subjects and perpetrated in many manners. The jury, consisting of Martin Lewis, O. J. Schneider, Y. E. Soderberg, Frank Raymond, and Beatrice Levy, selected 343 prints from the vast number submitted. They succeeded in giving us one of the most comprehensive arrays of good work standardized to a high level of craftsmanship that the print galleries have held in some time. It ranks well with the International Print show which was such a fascinating excuse for dropping into the galleries in December.

The three Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan prizes of $100, $75 and $50 respectively were awarded to "Goose Fair, Albi," by Malcolm Osborne of London; to "The Flower Seller," by E. Owen Jennings of Leeds, England; and to "Foam and Cypress," by Cornelius Botke of Santa Paula, Cal.

News of Exhibitions.

Three exhibitions opened at the Arts club on Friday. There are paintings by Emilie-Othon Friesz and Norman Jacobsen and a curious descriptive black plastic by Ugo Mochi, whose very name seems culled from a book of witchcraft.

Inspired by the remarkable success of the Boston Antiques exposition held last December, and the one in New York a year ago, Felix Mendelsohn and Miss Caroline McIlvaine are arranging a Chicago Antiques exposition to be held in the combined ballrooms of the Drake hotel this spring, from April 21 to April 25, inclusive. Mr. Mendelsohn is an experienced exposition director. The primary objective is to demonstrate Chicago's appreciation of the beauty of the ages as only our private collectors and our dealers in antiques can do. A children's charity will be benefited by 25 per cent of the ticket sales.

Among those who have already promised to be patronesses of the affair, which promises to be among the events of keenest interest in the near future, are Mrs. Waller Borden, Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. Walter Brewster, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Princess Michael Cantacuzene Mrs. William S. Monroe, Mrs. John H. Winterbotham, Mrs. Barrett Wendell, Mrs. Edward H. Brewer, Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, Mrs. Jacob Bauer, Mrs. Luther N. Rossiter, Mrs. F. D. Carpenter and Miss Helen V. Drake.

An exhibition of paintings and etchings by members of the Business Men's Art club is current in the Lakeside Press galleries.

In the Antiquarian gallery of the Art institute is an intriguing exhibit of mirrors of the 17th and 18th centuries, shown under the auspices of the Antiquarian society.

Alfonson Iannelli, designer, architect and sculptor, is to give the lecture next Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in Fullerton hall, on "The New Art Awakening in America." Vachel Lindsay, author and lecturer, will speak on "Painting, Sculpture and Architecture in Motion," Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 18, in Fullerton hall.

At the Anderson Galleries.

There opens tomorrow in the Anderson galleries an exhibition of paintings by A. G. Warshawsky, noted for his painting of Paris streets under every conceivable weather condition. Paintings from the south of France may be seen also in the exhibit and a few studies of the Breton peasant.

The Chicago Galleries association is indulging in a quiet quartet of exhibits after the fuller excitement of its biannual show. Randolph Coats has a group of pretty-pretty ladies (or is it the same lady in innumerable pretty-pretty poses?); they would be the better for stronger drawing and more definite and better adjusted anatomies.

Edgar Forkner offers a number of colorful paintings of flowers and one or two ship subjects; Alix Fournier submits a group of really lovely landscapes and William Forsyth offers a few unframed water colors.

Prof. Haffner will give the last of the three lectures offered by the Cambridge School of Architecture on Wednesday at 11 o'clock at the Fortnightly. His subject is "Modern Trend in Decoration."

Paintings by Adrian Dornbush and Theodore Saunders may be seen in the South Side Art association galleries in the Fine Arts building.

Work by Myrtle Merritt French was placed on view at the Cordon club, Friday.

Karl Ouren will hold a one-man exhibit of his recent paintings at the Palette and Chisel club. The exhibit opens Wednesday and will continue to March 10.

There is an exhibit of recent exotic paintings by Helen West Heller on view at the Cinema theater, 151 East Chicago avenue.

"AFTER THE SNOW STORM," by Frank J. Gavencky, awarded the Clyde M. Carr prize of $100 in the current exhibition by Artists of Chicago and Vicinity in the east wing galleries of the Art institute. The exhibition possesses points of interest and beauty and steals neatly out from under any severe criticism that tries to pin it down. It is an experiment, as being the first efforts of a conservative jury in some years. It is well worth a visit and there are many likable paintings on the walls.

Society Present at Lake Placid Races

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Feb. 9.—[Special correspondence.]—Many visitors arrived this last week for the international bobsleigh races, which took place yesterday on the new run of the Lake Placid club. Canadian and American teams were represented and many entertainments were given in connection with the festivities.

The Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick and Mrs. Fosdick have been here for several days, as has Mrs. Raymond Fosdick, who is at the Juniper cottage. Others here include Mr. and Mrs. Russell Doubleday, Marjorie Sperry, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Payne, Lois and Rodney Williams, and Willard Burleson of Grand Rapids.

Nothing But Girls.

LONDON.—(AP)—Men without women, and women without men, seem to be successful formulas for producing a play in London these days. After the bold venture of producing "Journey's End," a war play having no women characters, the British stage has tried a play without men. Mrs. C. B. Cocherane, wife of the theatrical producer, recently presented at the Apollo theater "Nine to Six," a play written by herself and having only women characters. They play deals with life in a big Regent street store during the working hours of 9 a. m. to 6 p. m.

"'Tis an Ill Wind—"

BIRKDALE, England.—(AP)—Recent gales blew a thousand tons of seashore sand over local railway tracks and the company loaded it up and sold it in Yorkshire and Derbyshire. Usually local authorities charge the railways $5 a ton for sand taken from the beaches.
